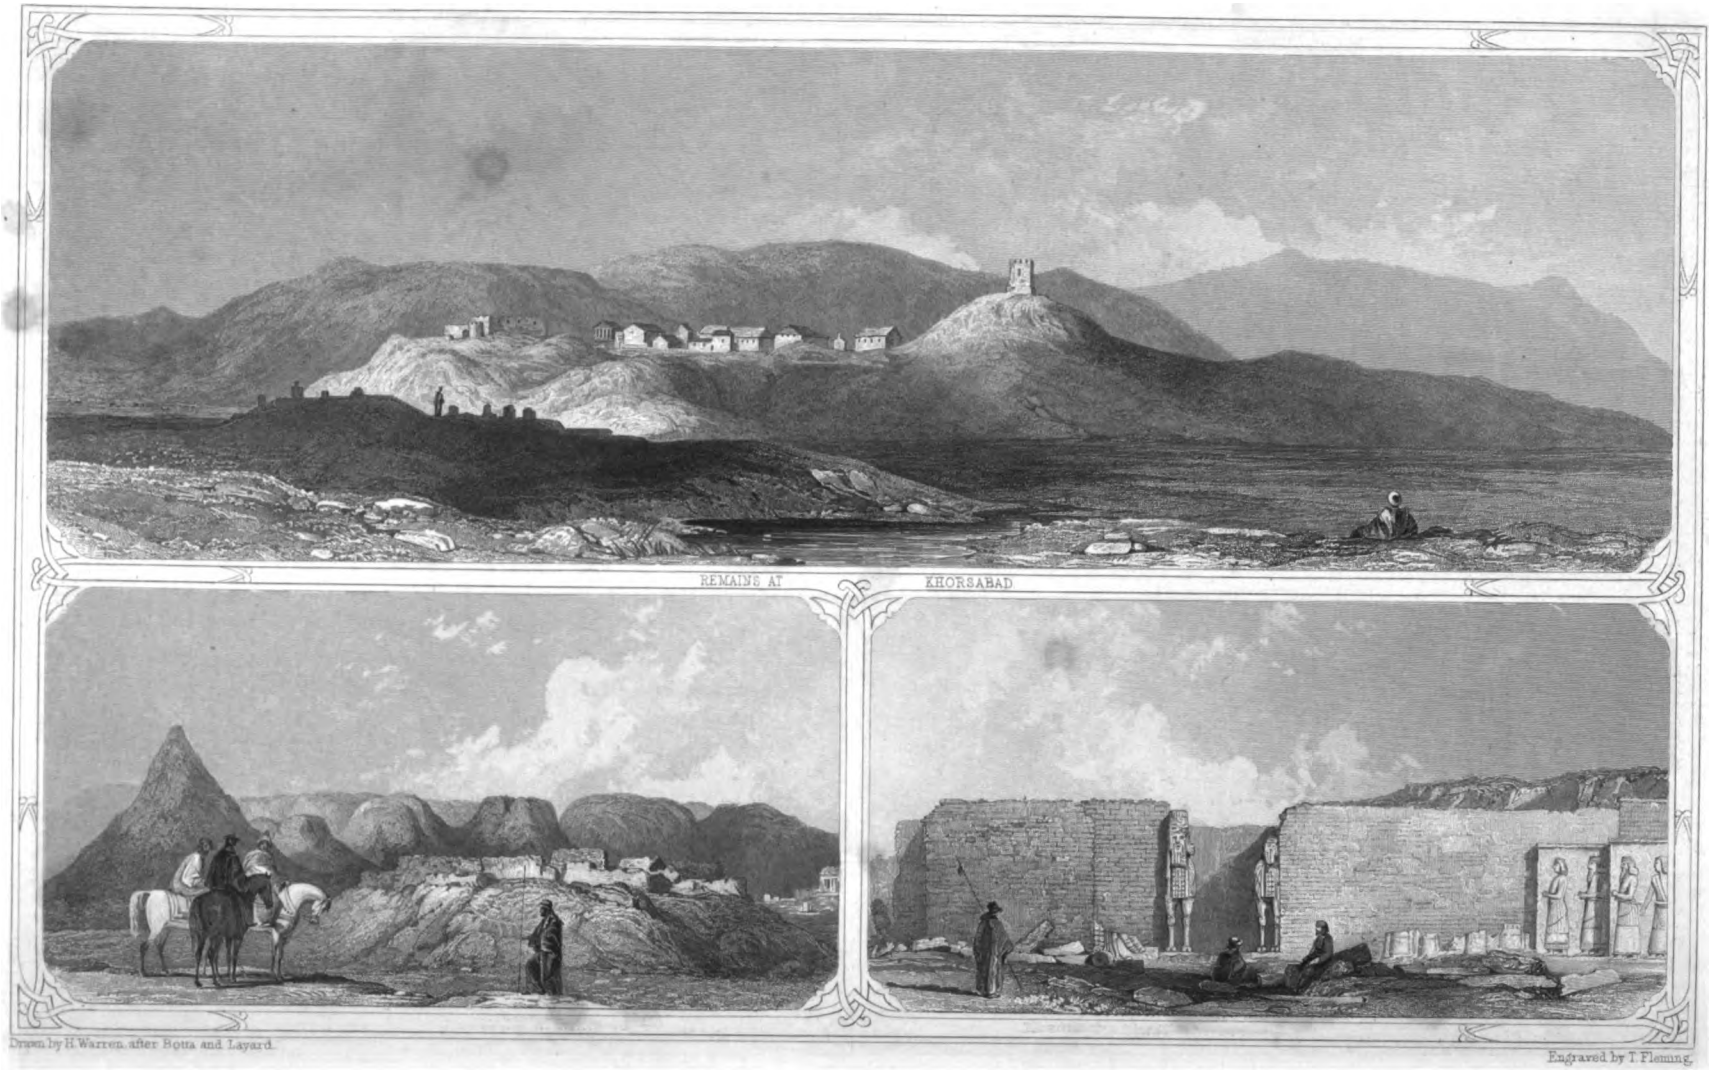
* This "presence" does not refer to the omnipresence of God, but to that local presence and manifestation in which he will judge the world. And this "burning" refers to the same period, in which "the elements shall melt with fervent heat," and "the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burnt up."—ED.

† The Lord is good.—The prophet here returns to contemplate the character of God as a moral governor, and ever faithful friend.—ED.



‡ Supposed by some to be an allusion to the manner in which Nineveh was destroyed. Diodorus Siculus relates that the Euphrates, in a great flood, having swept away a large space of the wall, the king, rendered hopeless and desperate, burned himself, his palace, and all his treasures.—ED.

§ Place thereof.—Of Nineveh, whose burden he delivers.—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—CHAP. I. Ver. 2. 3. From a zealous regard to his own honour and worship, God will not always suffer his people's enemies to escape his terrible judgments. However long he forbear, he will at last display his infinite power and tremendous equity in the punishment of the wicked, by sudden, perplexing, and unavoidable calamities. 4—6. At his pleasure he divides and dries up seas and rivers, blasts fruitful fields and forests into barrenness, shakes and overturns the mountains by earthquakes, and, by droughts or lightnings, burns up the earth and its inhabitants. What persons, cities, or kingdoms, can then stand before the power of his wrath? It is sufficient to destroy the most hardened and obstinate sinners, or the best fortified cities. 7, 8. But, in infinite kindness, he will protect and provide for his people who trust in him; though with overwhelming, confounding, and desolating judgments, he will destroy his enemies, and will render the very place of Nineveh utterly unknown. 9, 10. In vain do you Assyrians plot and combine to defeat his purposes. While ye are assembled in mighty armies, fortified by powerful leagues, and drunk with pride and carnal security, he will at once and for ever irrevocably destroy 11 There is one[a] come out of thee that imagineth evil against the LORD, a wicked counsellor.

12 Thus saith the LORD, [†] Though they be quiet,[‡] and likewise many, yet thus shall they be [‖]cut down, when he shall pass through: though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more.[§]

13 For now will I break his yoke[a] from off thee, and will burst thy bonds in sunder.

14 And the LORD hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown:[†] out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image and the molten image: I will make thy grave; for thou art vile.

15 Behold upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace! O Judah, [‡]keep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows: for the wicked shall no more pass through thee; he is utterly cut off.[§]

CHAPTER II.

God's terrible and victorious armies against Nineveh.

HE [a]that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face:[a] [b]keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily.

2 [c]For the LORD hath [†]turned away the excellency of Jacob as the excellency of Israel: for [d]the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their [e]vine-branches.[‡]

3 The shield of [§]his mighty men is made [f]red, the valiant men are [‖]in scarlet: the chariots shall be with [*]flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the [†]fir-trees shall be terribly shaken.[‡]

4 [§]The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: [‖]they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

5 He shall recount his [‖]worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the [*]defence shall be prepared.

6 The gates of the rivers[†] shall be opened, and the palace shall be [‡]dissolved.

7 And [§]Huzzab shall be [h]led away captive, she shall be [‖]brought up, and her maids shall lead her as with the voice of doves, [i]tabering upon their breasts.

8 But Nineveh is [k]of old [l]like a pool of water; yet they shall flee away. [m]Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall [*]look back.

9 [n]Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: [o]for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the [†]pleasant furniture.

10 [p]She is empty, and void, and waste:[‡] and the [q]heart melteth, and the knees smite together, and much pain is in all loins, and the faces of them all gather blackness.

11 [r]Where is the dwelling of the lions, and the feeding-place of the young lions, where the lion, even the old lion, walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid?

12 The [s]lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

13 Behold, [t]I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts, and [u]I will burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword shall devour thy young lions; and I will cut off [x]thy prey from the earth, and [y]the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard.

your empire and city. 11—14. Sennacherib and his generals now plot and threaten destruction to my people, city, and temple; but his victorious army, now fearless of danger, and great in numbers, shall be suddenly destroyed, and his family and idols quickly ruined, yea, the whole Assyrian empire shall be reduced, and the people perish on account of their wickedness, and be buried before Jerusalem, or in the rubbish of their own cities. 12, 13, 15. No more shall the Assyrians afflict you, O ye Jews; no more shall they tyrannically oppress you: for I will utterly destroy them, that ye may be invited, and have free access to observe your solemn festivals, as a presage of gospel solemnities.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It is terrible to have God as our enemy; but infinitely happy to have him as our friend. Great and daring provocations of him, and injuries done to his people, will certainly issue in men's great and irresistible destruction; yea, nothing more plainly presages their ruin than carnal security and self-confidence: and their plots against him but hasten it upon themselves and families. Men's pride always lays them low; and shameful sins bring on shameful punishments: but God's people shall be delivered from all their oppressors at last. And in this, but chiefly in the other world, they shall have blessed opportunities of celebrating the praises, and performing the solemn services, of JEHOVAH their gracious deliverer. And great is the mercy to a land when gospel ordinances have free course and are glorified.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 1, 2. Ye Assyrians, who have destroyed the kingdom of Israel, and repeatedly harassed Judah, may now exert your whole power to protect your own country and cities: for the Medes and Chaldeans, those terrible destroyers of nations, have begun to invade and besiege you. 3, 4. Red in their apparel and armour, and ready to shed your blood, they shall enter your cities amidst torches and flames of fire, and shall, with the most terrible rapidity and fury, destroy whatever they meet with. 5, 6. While the choicest troops of Media and Chaldea shall furiously attack your walls, ye shall exert yourselves for their defence: but the high-swollen river shall open for them an entrance into the city, and assist them in its utter destruction. 7—10. Nineveh and her inhabitants shall be utterly disgraced; her fine ladies and warriors, who thought themselves secure, shall, in great agonies of grief, hasten away, or be led captives: and, notwithstanding all that her generals can do to make them stand in their own defence, the numerous armies and inhabitants shall flee with the utmost precipitation. And while the Assyrians are quite dispirited and overwhelmed with grief, the Medes and Chaldeans shall seize on their wealth, and reduce Nineveh to a heap of ruins. 11—13. The nations around shall rejoice to see Nineveh, in which their oppressive and murderous tyrants had long dwelt securely, and stored up their wealth, utterly destroyed. For I the Lord will abandon their armies to destruction, and give up their ill-gotten wealth into the hand of their enemies; and never more shall their messengers blaspheme my great name, or terrify the nations with their threatenings or oppressive demands.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Alas, what fearful punishment do injuries done to God's people incur! and at what expense and labour do men destroy one another! But terrible are the weakest nations when God animates them; and pitiful and dastardly the most mighty and numerous when he fights against them. Unavailing are honour, wealth, number, or valour, in the day of his wrath. And it is terrible to have our consciences laden with guilt in an evil day, in which every thing dear is taken from us. Awful is it for men to damn their souls by fraudulent attempts to aggrandize themselves and families: and dreadful is the case of oppressors, murderers, and blasphemers, when God rises up to punish them, and when death and hell shut their mouths.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 1, 4, 10. Wo to Nineveh, whose inhabitants have murdered, deceived, and spoiled the nations around; and by their infernal and artful devices

4 Because of the multitude of the [e] whoredoms of the well-favoured harlot, the [f] mistress of witchcrafts,[g] that selleth nations through her whoredoms, and [g] families through her witchcrafts.

5 Behold, [h] I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts; and [i] I will discover thy skirts upon thy face, and I will show the nations thy nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame.

6 [k] And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, and make thee vile, and will set thee as a gazingstock.

7 And it shall come to pass, that all they that look upon thee [l] shall flee from thee, and say, [m] Nineveh is laid waste: [n] who will bemoan her? whence shall I seek comforters for thee?

8 [o] Art thou better than [†] [p] populous No,[‡] that was situate among the rivers, that had [q] the waters round about it, whose rampart was the sea, and her wall was from the sea?

12 [b] All thy strong holds shall be like fig-trees with the first-ripe figs: if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater.

13 Behold, thy people in the midst of thee are [c] women: [d] the gates[e] of thy land shall be set wide open unto thine enemies; [e] the fire shall devour thy bars.

14 [f] Draw thee waters for the siege, fortify thy strong holds: go into clay, and tread the mortar, make strong the brick-kiln.

15 [g] There shall the fire devour thee; the sword shall cut thee off, it shall eat thee up like the canker-worm: [h] make thyself many as the canker-worm, make thyself many as the locusts.

16 Thou hast multiplied thy [†] merchants above the stars of heaven: [i] the canker-worm [‡] spoileth, and flieth away.

17 Thy [k] crowned are as the locusts, and thy captains as the great grashoppers, which camp in the hedges in the cold day; but when the sun ariseth they flee away, and their place is not known where they are.

have subjected them to their government, and drawn them into their idolatries. 2, 3, 5—7. The Medes and Chaldeans, many of whom fight on horses and in chariots, shall rout your armies, enter your cities, and fill your streets with multitudes of corpses; and I will render you utterly miserable and disgraced in the view of all around, without any to pity your case. 8—10. Learn from the fate of No in Egypt what you may certainly expect: though famed for the number of its inhabitants, naturally impregnable, and supported by the huge armies of almost all the north-east parts of Africa, nevertheless you Assyrians sacked it, murdering the infants, carrying captive the rest, and dividing the great men for slaves. 11—15. Ye shall be stupified with overwhelming miseries, rendered quite incapable of helping yourselves, buried in contempt and ruin, and obliged to beg assistance against the Medes and Chaldeans. Your strong holds shall, almost at the first onset, fall into the hands of the enemy; your armies and people shall be dispirited, and desert their stations, leaving all the passages quite open; and all the toilsome reparations of your walls shall be to no purpose: even in your strong holds ye shall be burned by the fire, or slain by the sword. 15—19. The prodigious numbers of your troops, and of hired soldiers, shall but devour your wealth and then shift for themselves. Your tributary kings and mercenary commanders will promise you help, but quickly desert you whenever danger appears. Your generals and noble warriors shall be infatuated, dispirited, or murdered, and your armies and people scattered among the nations, without any one to protect or relieve them; nor shall your capital or empire be ever restored; and all the nations, whom you have oppressed, shall rejoice to hear of your destruction.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Enormous wickedness ordinarily attends great confluences of men. And curses, shame, contempt, and destruction, are the certain and final issue. Little reason then have men to be proud of what can be so quickly taken from them, or rendered their plague. But if our companions in guilt or grandeur have been ruined, it is time for us to take warning and repent. And if God be against us, who can be for us! Useless are all means of preservation in the day of his wrath. Unstable are the most exalted stations on earth. And they, who have rendered others miserable, will certainly be themselves reduced to misery at last.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF NAHUM.

The prophecies concerning Nineveh furnish a striking historical evidence of the divine origin of the Holy Scriptures. It was certainly one of the greatest and strongest cities in the world—it was the capital of a well organized government—the commercial emporium of the world. The Euphrates and Tigris gave access to the ocean; and the city lay in the most direct track for the caravans of the East. Yet, as the prophet foretold, it is "empty, and void, and waste." Lucian, who lived in the 2d century after Christ, affirms that "Nineveh was utterly perished; that there was no trace of it remaining; nor could any one tell where once it was situated." Opposite to Mosul, which is situated on the western bank of the Tigris, there are, no doubt, extensive ruins; but this is, most probably, the site of the Persian, and not of the Assyrian Nineveh. What an invitation to the attentive study of prophecy in the light of history! What a conviction to infidels! What an example to commercial and ambitious nations! What a warning to indolent and luxurious rulers! Above all, what a message to the churches of Europe, to beware of the "witchcrafts" of false doctrine, of worldliness, and of "covetousness, which is idolatry;" lest the Lord remove their candlestick, and leave them as the seven churches in Asia, "empty, void, and waste."—ED.

THE PROPHECY OF HABAKKUK.

THE prophet might prophesy about the same time with Jeremiah, or perhaps during the reign of Manasseh. After complaining of the wickedness of the Jews and Chaldeans, he is divinely informed of their respective ruin: and in his prayer celebrates the power and majesty of God, and professes his joy in him.

[Habakkuk is generally believed, and apparently with good reason, to have prophesied soon after the fall of Nineveh, inasmuch as he speaks of the Chaldeans (chap. 1. 6), and not of the Assyrians; and when he speaks of the Chaldeans, he speaks of a people little known, as appears from the particular description he gives of their dispositions, habits, and power (chap. i. 7—10). It farther appears that he prophesied before the captivity of the ten tribes (chap. i. 5. & ii. 1. & iii. 2, 16—19). The Jews think he prophesied in the time of Manasseh, and that he describes the wickedness of his reign (see chap. i. 3, 4). He foretold the destruction of the Chaldeans, as Nahum did that of the Assyrians. His prophecy is quoted or referred to Acts ii. 4, & xiii. 41. Rom. i. 17. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. x. 37, 38.—ED.]

CHAPTER I.

(1) The prophet complains of the iniquity of the land; and God shows the judgment he will bring by the Chaldeans: 1—11. (2) God's moral excellence: 12, 13. (3) An expostulation: 13—17.

THE [a] burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see.

2 O LORD, [b] how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save!

3 [c] Why dost thou show me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention.

4 Therefore [d] the law is slacked, and judgment doth never go forth: for the wicked doth compass about the righteous: therefore [*] wrong judgment proceedeth.

5 ¶ Behold [†] ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously: for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you.

6 For, lo, [*] I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the [‡] breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs.

7 They are terrible and dreadful: [‡] their judgment [§] and their dignity shall proceed of themselves.

8 Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more [‖] fierce than the [¶] evening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread themselves, [*] and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.

A.M. cir. 3324, or 3404. B.C. cir. 680, or 600.

9 They shall come all for violence: their faces shall sup up [*] as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand.

10 And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, [†] and take it.

11 Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over, and offend, imputing this his power unto his god. [‡]

12 ¶ Art thou not from everlasting, O LORD my God, mine Holy One? we shall not die. O LORD, thou hast ordained them for judgment; and, O mighty God, thou hast established them for correction.

13 Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity: wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he?

14 And makest men as the fishes of the sea, as the creeping things, that have no ruler over them?

15 They take up all of them with the angle, [§] they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag; therefore they rejoice and are glad.

16 Therefore they sacrifice [‖] unto their net and burn incense unto their drag, because by them their portion is fat, and their meat [*] [†] plenteous.

17 Shall they therefore [‡] empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations? [§]

‡ "Then shall their mind change," (then shall the fierce Chaldean degenerate) "and they shall transgress and be held guilty for imputing their power to their (false) gods." It is probable the Chaldeans were originally worshippers of JEHOVAH, and that this prediction refers to their perversion to idolatry, on account of which God adjudges them to destruction, ver. 12.—ED.

§ The imagery is taken from the various modes of fishing. "The angle," properly so called, is confined to fishing with an artificial fly. It is called "angling," because the fly is drawn neither directly up nor down the stream, but at an angle.—The net seems that in which the fish are caught in the meshes.—The drag appears, from Egyptian and Herculaneum paintings, a net extended from the shore, and then drawn circularly to land, enclosing all within its sweep.—ED.

* Or, dainty.

§ It might be matter of question whether the description from ver. 12, did not refer to the Jews; but the "slaying of the nations" evidently directs to the Chaldeans.—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I.—Ver. 2—4. Lord, how long must I complain to thee of the oppression and other wickedness which everywhere prevail, before thou takest any course to restrain it and deliver the oppressed? Why is my lot cast in such times and places in which I must always behold such injuries, oppressions, and groundless contentions? and in which, through delay of just punishment, men harden themselves in their wickedness, and grow worse and worse? Thy law is contemned and disobeyed, and common justice is scarcely ever executed; but the wicked, by their numbers or influence, quite overpower and oppress the godly, and pervert judgment as much as they please. 5—11. Behold, with terror and astonishment, how I, who am now punishing the heathen nations, will shortly punish you with a more tremendous destruction, which ye will never believe till ye feel. By my direction, the cruel, fierce, and dreadful Chaldeans, who shall rule everything according to their own will, shall furiously invade your country, seize your wealth, and murder or enslave your persons. Regardless of all the opposition that you can make, they shall destroy or lead captive your princes, and waste your cities; and, puffed up by their conquests, Nebuchadnezzar and his subjects shall become more and more insolent, self-confident, and idolatrous, ascribing their victories to their idols. 12—17. O everlasting God, who hast for many ages been the God of the Jews by peculiar covenant relation, and who wilt not utterly destroy us, thou wilt indeed raise up these Chaldeans to correct us, but thy infinite holiness can never permit thee to approve their wicked designs. Why then wilt thou give them success, in treacherously oppressing and destroying thy own people? Alas! why wilt thou permit men to act as stupid and savage animals, which, without any order or government, destroy such as are better or weaker than themselves? And who therefore ascribe all their success, wealth, and honour, to their own power and policy? Wilt thou then always permit them to hoard up what they have gotten, and to proceed in their murder and devastations?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Faithful ministers must often bear heavy messages of wrath to God's professing people. And it is grievous to them to behold iniquity abound, while they can do nothing to repress it. Especially to see men diabolically turn tormentors of one another. In the most fearful manner vengeance follows wickedness; and violence is returned for violence, and fraud for fraud. And success in sin tempts men to become more and more wicked. But happy is it in evil

CHAPTER II.

(1) The prophet waits for an answer, and the LORD replies: 1—4. (2) The judgment of the Chaldeans for their drunkenness, covetousness, cruelty, and idolatry: 5—20.

A.M. cir. 3324, or 3404. B.C. cir. 680, or 600.

I WILL [a] stand[*] upon my watch, and set me upon the [†] tower, and will watch to see what he will [b] say [‡] unto me, and what I shall answer [§] [‖] when I am reproved.

2 ¶ And the LORD answered me, and said, [c] Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables,[*] that he may run[†] that readeth it.

3 For the vision is yet for [d] an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.[‡]

4 Behold, his soul which [*] is lifted up is not upright in him: but the just shall live by his faith.

5 ¶ [§] Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth at home, who enlargeth his desire [†] as hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied, but gathereth unto him all nations,[‖] and heapeth unto him all people:

6 Shall not all these take up a parable against him, and a taunting proverb against him, and say,[*] Wo to him that increaseth that which is not his! how long? and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay![†]

7 Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee, and thou shalt be for booties unto them?

8 Because [g] thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee; because of men's [‡] blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

9 ¶ Wo to him that [§] coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the [‖] power of evil!

10 Thou hast consulted [h] shame to thy house by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul.

11 [i] For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the [*] beam out of the timber[†] shall [‡] answer it.

12 ¶ Wo to him that [k] buildeth a town with [§] blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity!

13 Behold, is it not of the LORD of hosts that the people shall [l] labour in the very fire, and the people shall weary themselves [‖] for very vanity?

14 For [m] the earth shall be filled [*] with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD,[†] as the waters cover the sea.

15 ¶ Wo unto him [n] that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy [o] bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest [p] look on their nakedness!

16 Thou art filled [q] with shame for glory: [r] drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: the cup of the LORD's right hand shall be turned unto thee, and shameful spewing shall be on thy glory.

17 For [s] the violence of Lebanon [‡] shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

18 ¶ [t] What profiteth the graven image that the maker thereof hath graven it; the molten image, and a [u] teacher of lies, that the [§] maker of his work trusteth therein, to make dumb idols?

19 [x] Wo unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, it shall teach! [y] Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver, and there is no breath at all in the midst of it.

20 But [z] the LORD is in his holy temple: [‖] let all the earth [a] keep silence before him.

times to have the eternal God our own, and on our side by special covenant; and to live in the firm faith of the holiness and equity of his whole providential dispensations, and that sin shall not always escape unpunished. And it is highly becoming to ascribe due praise to him, let men injure us as they will.—Sound and well established principles are great supports to a distressed mind; and though God correct his people, yet he will not utterly destroy them. Whatever difficulties we therefore apprehend in God's providences, we must cast all our care upon him, and wait patiently for his salvation. Instruments of God's wrath may for a time bring awful desolation among men. But however little account they make of men's lives, God will at last reckon with such conquerors as the most arrant robbers, and most bloody murderers of mankind.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 1—4. I resolved to wait patiently for God's answer to my own bold complaints, that, instructed by him, I might be able to answer others who quarrel with his judgments. And the Lord commanded me to write his declarations in the plainest manner, that every person might receive proper instruction from them; and since they will not be quickly fulfilled, it behoves us patiently to wait for them, as they will certainly be accomplished in their proper season, without so much as a moment's unnecessary delay. And it is by men's patient waiting that their sincerity will be tried. They who despise the vision, discredit the promise, and proudly quarrel with the providence of God; or who, drawing back from him, depend on their own devices, manifest their hearts to be unsound: but they who are justified by faith in Jesus' righteousness shall persevere in their duty, living by faith on his promises. 5—8. The Chaldean king, and their subjects, having abandoned themselves to luxury, proud insolence, covetousness of conquest, oppression, and murder of the neighbouring nations, shall be punished in their turn, and be derided by their slaves and tributaries, as ruined by their extent of power and heaps of insnaring and defiling wealth. For the barbarous Medes and Persians shall quickly and unexpectedly plunder and destroy these Chaldean spoilers and murderers of the Jews and the nations around. 9—11. Dreadful judgments await those who, by unjust acquisitions, think to aggrandize and establish themselves and families, and to build stately palaces and forts for themselves. Bloody cruelty and oppression will issue in the disgrace and ruin of the guilty, and their families; and the very materials of their houses, produced by unjust methods, shall cry to God for vengeance against them. 12—14. Dreadful curses shall overtake them who build or fortify Babylon, or any other city, by that which they have gotten by plunder, injustice, or murder: and all their fatiguing labours shall be of no avail when the Persians shall enter by the gates and destroy the inhabitants: for God shall, in the most alarming manner, glorify himself before all nations in the destruction of Babylon, as well as in our redemption thereby prefigured. 15—17. Dreadful miseries shall befall the Chaldeans and others, who are instruments of ruining other nations, and who abandon themselves to beastly drunkenness. Their drunkenness, attended by the fearful judgments of God, shall subject them to disgrace, contempt, and misery; and the violence which they committed against God's temple and people shall issue in their own cruel destruction by the barbarous Medes and Persians. 18—20. Nor shall their idols, by which they misrepresent the true God, in the least help them in the day of their distress; yea, their worship thereof shall bring fearful misery upon them. But JEHOVAH, the God of Israel, is in his church and in heaven, always ready to help his people: let men therefore everywhere adore his perfections, and ponder, admire, and submit to his providences.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—In evil times it is best to wait upon God, believe his word, and watch against temptation. And they who preach his truths should make them as plain as possible. God has fixed the best time for his works; and never does he defer them a moment beyond it. But it is only by faith in his promise we can patiently wait his time of performance: and it is only they, who are

CHAPTER III.

A prayer.

A.M. cir. 3324, or 3404. B.C. cir. 680, or 600.

A PRAYER of Habakkuk the prophet [a] upon Shigionoth.

2 O LORD, I have heard [b] thy speech, and was afraid: O LORD, [*] revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years [†] make known; in wrath remember mercy.

3 ¶ God came from [‡] Teman, [§] and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise.

4 And his brightness was as the light; he had [‖] horns [*] coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding [†] of his power.

5 Before him went the pestilence, and [‡] burning coals [§] went forth at his feet.

6 He stood, and measured [‖] the earth: he beheld, and [c] drove asunder the nations; [*] and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting. [†]

7 I saw the tents of [‡] Cushan [§] in affliction; and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble.

8 Was the LORD displeased against the rivers? was thine anger against the rivers? was thy wrath against the sea, that thou didst ride upon thine horses and [‖] thy chariots of salvation?

9 Thy bow was made quite naked, [*] according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. [†] Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers.

10 [d] The mountains saw thee, and they trembled; the overflowing of the water [‡] passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high.

11 [*] The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: [*] at the light [†] of thine arrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear.

12 [f] Thou didst march through the land in indignation, thou didst thrash the heathen in anger.

13 Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, even for salvation [g] with thine anointed: thou [h] woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked, by [‡] discovering the foundation unto the neck. [§] Selah.

14 [i] Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages: [‖] they [*] [k] came out as a whirlwind to scatter me: their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly.

15 [l] Thou didst walk through the sea with thine horses, through the [†] heap of great waters.

16 When I heard, [m] my belly trembled; my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself, that [n] I might rest [‡] in the day of trouble: when [*] he cometh up unto the people, he will [§] invade them with his troops.

17 ¶ [p] Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour [‖] of the olive shall [*] fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls:

18 Yet I will rejoice in the LORD, I will joy in the God of my salvation.

19 The LORD God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds' feet, and he will make me to walk upon mine high places. [q] To the chief singer on my [r] stringed instruments.

justified in and live by the faith of Christ, who persevere in their duty.—Nothing more effectually seduces men from God than a proud heart. But with the greatest ease God overthrows the mightiest monarchs and empires; and easily he reduces to ruin the most covetous, imperious, drunken, and murderous of mankind. Alas! that men are often so senseless, that, when they have much, they would still have more; and that they often ruin themselves and families by doing injury to others! Yea, often they provoke God to give them up to dishonour by their abominable works. And strange is it that in trouble men will seek anywhere for relief but to God. But if they will not be taught by his word, he will force them to know and acknowledge his judgments; and notwithstanding all opposition, will show himself victorious over all his enemies.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 2. Terrified by thine answers to my former complaints, Lord, I beseech thee to support thy people under these calamities, and under their captivity give them some tokens of thy favour, and some mitigation of trouble. 3, 4. How wonderful were thy appearances for thy people on former occasions! At the giving of the law on mount Sinai the whole firmament shone with the rays of thy glory, and the earth rang with thy praises; and yet that was but a very scanty manifestation of thy power. 5, 6. By divers plagues thou didst destroy the Egyptians and Canaanites; and taking up thy abode in the ark, thou didst expel the latter, and gave their land to thy people. The mightiest giants and best fortified cities were forced to yield; and thy dispensations are, in every age, powerful and gracious. 7. The Midianites, who trembled at the earthquakes occasioned by the descent on mount Sinai, were afterwards marvellously destroyed by Phinehas and Gideon. 8, 10. Not from any displeasure with the waters, but in love to thy people, didst thou divide the Red Sea and the river Jordan, and conduct them through, marching before them in the pillar of cloud. 9, 11, 12. In fulfilment of thy covenant promise, made to our fathers, thou didst manifest thy power in destroying the Canaanites; and didst even make the sun and moon to stop, move, and shine, as was necessary, for their effectual destruction. 13, 14. Yea, not only at first, but all along, thou didst assist Joshua, David, and other leaders of thy people, and grant them signal victories over all their enemies who took arms against them. 16—19. Thy intimations of the Chaldean invasion fearfully distressed my spirits, and rendered me deeply concerned for my own and others' protection. But even though they should destroy every outward comfort in my country, I will trust and rejoice in God himself, as my all-sufficient Portion and Saviour, who will enable me to bear up under trouble, preserve me from danger, and bring me again to my own land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Attentive hearing of God's word animates to prayer. And even under tokens of his wrath, we must never despair of his mercy: there is enough of it in his stores—in his heart. Nor ought we to neglect observing his former providences of mercy or judgment. Even in his most majestic manifestations, he has the salvation of his people chiefly at heart; and all creatures are ready to assist in promoting it. If he then be our leader, our assistant, no enemies can withstand us. And if God, from regard to his promise, did so much to Israel, what will he not do in the work of our redemption through Christ. Let me therefore never indulge slavish fear. If I enjoy created comforts, let me not fix my heart upon them: and if I want them, let me always rejoice in my unchangeable ALL IN ALL, the great God my Saviour. Thus the worst of times may be the best for my soul.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF HABAKKUK.

A third part of this prophecy is prayer; and, considered merely as a specimen of Hebrew piety, it presents an important subject for contemplation. It embraces four principal topics: (1) An acknowledgment of fear at God's message of judgment (ver. 2, 16). (2) An earnest petition for mercy and revival to a decaying church (ver. 2). (3) A sublime record of the wonders of Providence in delivering the church, and overturning her enemies (ver. 3—15). (4) Unshaken confidence and joy in God in the midst of want and ruin. The last topic is that which comes most practically home to the "lives and bosoms of men;" and that for two reasons. (1) Because times of general calamity are always recurring; and though, in some countries, the intervals may be long, yet still the records of history afford a sufficient warning to all nations to read the words of the apostle in a temporal, as well as in a spiritual sense—"Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." (2) Because, though great national calamities may be "few and far between," yet personal or family afflictions are of frequent and daily occurrence—losses, disappointments, sickness, and death, are continually treading upon the heels of one another; and under any, or, it may be, all of these visitations, what a blessed refuge does the faith of the prophet provide! A refuge in which he not merely bears with resignation and patience, but in which he "rejoices in the LORD;" yea, "joys in the God of his salvation." Happy believer!—by the cross of Christ crucified to the world, the world is also crucified to him!—praying without ceasing; rejoicing evermore; glorying in tribulation; and, in the midst of them all, a conqueror; yea, more than a conqueror, through Jesus that loved him!—ED.

THE PROPHECY OF ZEPHANIAH.

THIS prophet flourished about A. M. 3390, along with Jeremiah. His scope is to foretell the desolation of Judah and Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, and to point out the causes of it; to denounce God's wrath against the nations, which assisted in, or rejoiced over, the calamities of the Jews; and to predict the glory of the Jewish nation after the captivity in Babylon and their present dispersion, and of the gospel church thereby prefigured.

[Zephaniah was contemporary with Jeremiah, and delivered his predictions in the reign of Josiah. From his description of the public disorders of the land, it is evident that he must have prophesied previously to the glorious reformation effected by Josiah in the 18th year of his reign; and, as he predicts the destruction of Nineveh, which could not have taken place sooner than the 16th of Josiah, the utterance of the prophecy must be referred to the commencement of his reign. The prophet foretells the invasion of the Chaldeans, and the utter desolation of Jerusalem and Judea, on account of national sins. Exhorts to repentance; pronounces judgment on the surrounding nations; exhorts to hopeful waiting for the restoration of Israel, and to joy in the salvation of God. The New Testament references to this book are John 4. 21. Heb. 12. 12. Jam. 2. 5. & 5. 1. Rev. 19. 17—19.—ED.]

THE [a] word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, [b] in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah.

2 ¶ [c] [*] I will utterly consume all things from off [†] the land, saith the LORD.

3 [d] I will consume man and beast, I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the [e] stumblingblocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land, saith the LORD.

4 [f] I will also stretch out mine hand upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and I will cut off [g] the remnant of Baal from this place, and the name of the Chemarims [‡] with the priests;

5 And [h] them that worship the host of heaven upon the house-tops; and them that worship and [i] that swear [§] by the LORD, and that swear by [k] Malcham; [‖]

6 And them that are [l] turned back from the LORD; and those that [m] have not sought the LORD, nor inquired for him.

7 [n] Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord GOD: for the [o] day of the LORD is at hand: for the LORD hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath [*] bid his guests. [†]

8 And it shall come to pass in the day of the LORD's sacrifice, that I will [‡] punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel. [§]

16 A [b] day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers.

17 And I will bring distress upon men, [*] [c] that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the LORD: and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I.—Ver. 3—6. Idols, and other occasions of sinful courses, are here called stumblingblocks. Notwithstanding Josiah's care to reform Judea, some continued to worship Baal: and the Chemarim, or black ones, were the idolatrous priests. Some mingled the worship of JEHOVAH and Malcham, or Moloch, together: and some, who had been zealous in Josiah's reformation, had apostatized to idolatry. 7. The slaughtered Jews were the sacrifice to God's just vengeance; and the Chaldeans were the guests appointed by God not only to slay them, but to feed upon and devour their wealth and substance. 9. They who leap on the threshold are either idolatrous priests, who jumped over the thresholds of their temples; or rather servants, who insolently entered the houses of pretended malefactors, to plunder them for their masters. 12. God will manifest and punish the most secret abominations, particularly of those who, from atheistical principles, are become hardened and secure in wickedness. 14—18. These expressions denote the terrible, confounding, ruinous, and desolating nature of the Chaldean and Roman invasions.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The wrath of God makes fearful havoc in a nation or kingdom; and burns hottest against apostate professors and hypocrites. These refusers of Christ's atoning sacrifice must themselves fall a sacrifice to the provoked vengeance of God: nor can any rank or station save them from his stroke. Yea, every sin, secret or open, is taken into his account, as a ground of their punishment. Gaudy apparel, and ill-gotten gains, speedily help on their destruction. Alas, how terrible is it to fall into the hands of an angry God! How awakening to infidels themselves, who had racked their wits to silence their consciences that they might enjoy their guilty pleasures undisturbed! But if periods of judgment be so dreadful, what must be the great day of the Lord! How will it strike sinners dumb with horror, and consume them as with fire! And all earthly enjoyments will be then altogether ineffectual for their relief.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 1—3. O nation, careless about, and odious to God, search yourselves diligently, and assemble together in solemn fasting, before the appointed day of his vengeance overtake you, which shall unavoidably hurl you out of your land, and miserably destroy you. Ye poor, afflicted, and humble souls, who have obeyed his laws, and observed his ordinances, implore his favour, and supplicate increase of grace and holiness:—thus, it may be, ye shall not perish with your wicked countrymen. 4—7. The Philistines' strong cities shall be utterly destroyed, and the inhabitants murdered by the Chaldeans, Greeks, and others; and at last the Jewish Maccabees shall reduce the whole country, and dwell therein. 8—11. For their insolent behaviour towards the Israelites, the country of the Moabites and Ammonites shall be made an utter and lasting desolation, and at last become the property of the Jews;—and in the apostolic and millennial periods, idolatry shall be banished from it, and a glorious gospel church established there, as in other heathen countries. 12—15. The Ethiopians on the south, and Assyrians on the north-east, shall also be murdered by the Chaldeans, and other instruments of my vengeance. And the now famous, fearless, and haughty city of Nineveh, shall be reduced to a heap of ruins, to the astonishment and joy of the nations which they have oppressed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Sin renders the highest professors useless and odious before God. And there is great need of self-examination, and solemn humiliation and prayer, when his judgments hang over our head. How terrible are the corrections of God's own people! But little reason have their enemies to rejoice thereat, for their calamities will issue in the ruin of their injurers. Pride, insolence, and carnal mirth, must at last give place to debasement, anguish, death, and damnation! Yea, sinners are often fearfully recompensed in this world, and their places of abode marked with wrath. What then must be their eternal misery in hell!

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—4. Dreadful miseries await Jerusalem, which is quite filled with wickedness, violence, and oppression. Most of the inhabitants pay no regard to God's laws, warnings, or corrections: they trust not in him, but in their heathen allies and idols: and, regardless of his covenant relation to them, they neither pray to nor worship him. Their princes and judges are rapacious and cruel oppressors. Their prophets are light, frothy, and treacherous to God and men. Their priests

5 [f] The just LORD is [g] in the midst thereof; he will not do iniquity: [h] every morning [i] doth he bring his judgment to light, he faileth not; but [k] the unjust knoweth no shame.

6 [l] I have cut off the nations: their [*] towers are desolate; I made their streets waste, that none passeth by: their cities are destroyed, so that there is no man, that there is none inhabitant.

7 I said, [m] Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction; so their dwelling should not be cut off, [n] howsoever I punished them: but they [o] rose early, and corrupted all their doings.[†]

8 ¶ [p] Therefore [q] wait ye upon me, saith the LORD, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.

9 For then will I turn to[‡] the people a pure [§] language, [r] that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one [||] consent.

10 [s] From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering.

11 In that day shalt thou [t] not be ashamed for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me: for then I will take away out of the midst of thee them [u] that rejoice in thy pride; and thou shalt no more be haughty [*] because of my holy mountain.

12 [x] I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the LORD.

13 [y] The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth: for [z] they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

14 ¶ [a] Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.

15 The LORD hath [b] taken away thy judgments, he [c] hath cast out thine enemy: the King of Israel, even the LORD, is [d] in the midst of thee; thou [e] shalt not see evil any more.

16 In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not; and to Zion, [f] Let not thine hands be [†] slack.

17 The LORD thy God in the midst of thee [g] is mighty; he will save, he [h] will rejoice over thee with joy; [‡] he will [i] rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing.

18 I [k] will gather them that [l] are sorrowful for the solemn assembly, who are of thee, to whom [§] the reproach of it was a burden.

20 At that time [p] will I bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you [q] a name and a praise among all people of the earth, [r] when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD.

profane the sanctuary, and pervert the law, by their false glosses or bad examples. 5—7. Though I, who in infinite righteousness am a hater of all iniquity, am among them in mine ordinances to observe their conduct: and though I have long and repeatedly warned them by my prophets, and by making examples of impenitent sinners, yet still they continue impudent and obstinate in their sin: and though, for their warning, I have executed my desolating judgments on other nations, that so I might not be obliged to destroy them, yet, instead of repenting, they have become more wicked. 8—13. Nevertheless, wait ye on me, till by desolating judgments I have destroyed the wicked from among you, and have even destroyed the wicked nations from the world; for after that I will, by my grace, effectually renew your heart and life, and make you unanimously concur in worshipping me. Gathered from the most distant countries, ye shall humbly present to me your thanksgivings; and returned to your own land, no more shall ye undergo the reproach and punishment of your former sins. They that prided themselves in their peculiar relation to God, and their outward privileges and ordinances, shall be cut off; and, in their stead, I will raise up a generation of persons, meek and humble under their troubles, who shall trust in my promises, believe on my Son, and, being renewed in their hearts, shall detest falsehood and all other wickedness, and shall be encouraged to an upright and holy conversation by the protection which I will afford them. 14—19. Rejoice greatly, O Jews, take courage, and abound in piety, for I the Lord will remove your troubles, and destroy your Chaldean and other enemies. I will, as your God and King, take pleasure in saving and perpetually showing favours to you. I will bring you, who were burdened with the want of my solemn ordinances, and with the scoffing of the Chaldeans at them, to your own land, notwithstanding your weakness and want of courage; and, by glorious appearances for your preservation and deliverance, will render you famous and honoured in all the countries where you have lived in disgrace.—But these promises chiefly relate to the conversion of multitudes of Jews and Gentiles, and their noted harmony, purity, comfort, peace, and honour, in the gospel church, especially in the millennial state. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xvii—xix.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Alas! what terrible wickedness against God and men abounds among apostate professors! And it is truly lamentable when they, who ought to have been the principal patterns of, and encouragers to, piety, become the most obstinate ringleaders in wickedness of every kind. Churches and nations, obdurate in guilt, must be made monuments of wrath. But where sin has abounded, how grace much more abounds! An almighty God can easily pardon and reform his people, and cut off their enemies. And when taught and drawn by him, how pleasantly they flock to Jesus Christ and his church: and their very troubles contribute to engage their hearts. In his times of promise and days of power, God graciously puts an end to his people's troubles, bestows the tokens of his presence, delights in them to do them good, comforts their mourners, recovers their weakest captives, and restores, with advantage, their wonted honours.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ZEPHANIAH.

Zephaniah, like most of the other prophets, was raised up in a time of general corruption and disorder. These he reproves with great plainness of speech, proclaiming against them the wrath of an offended God. And there is good reason to believe that his warnings were not in vain; but that, on the contrary, they contributed largely to that reformation and revival that took place in the days of Josiah,—thus affording an encouragement, in the worst of times, to be "always abounding in the work of the Lord;" persuaded "that our labour shall not be in vain in the Lord."—ED.

THE thirteen preceding prophets had flourished before, or during, the Jews' captivity in Babylon. This and the two following prophesied after their return to Canaan. Haggai began his public work in the 16th year after their return; and his scope is to encourage them to proceed in rebuilding the temple of God. He continued prophesying about four months; chap. i. 1, 15; and ii. 1, 10, 20.

Haggai is generally believed to have been one of the captives that returned with Zerubbabel in consequence of the edict by Cyrus. The building of the temple had been interrupted for about fourteen years, in consequence of the misrepresentation of the neighbouring governors, addressed to the Persian monarch; and, most probably, also from the coldness, doubts, and fears, of the people themselves. In the second year of Darius Hystaspes the edict of Cyrus was, however, providentially renewed, and Haggai was divinely commissioned to encourage the rulers, and stir up the zeal and energies of the people. He accordingly reproves their delay, and exhorts them to proceed. Their ready obedience is encouraged by a renewed message from God. He comforts the old men who wept at the diminished magnificence of the second temple, by assuring them of its surpassing glory in the advent of MESSIAH. He shows how God had smitten the earth with a curse on account of their sins, and promises them fruitful harvests from the day the foundation of the temple was laid; and predicts the prosperity of MESSIAH'S kingdom. Haggai is quoted in the New Testament, Mat. xxviii. 20. Rom. viii. 31. Heb. xii. 26.—ED.]

IN the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month,[*] in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD [†] by Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel[‡] the son of Shealtiel, [§] governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, saying,

2 ¶ Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, [a] The time is not come, [‖] the time that the LORD'S house should be built.

3 Then came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

4 Is it time for you, O ye, to [b] dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie waste?

5 Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, [*] Consider your ways.

6 Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages, earneth wages to put it into a bag [†] with holes.

7 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider your ways.

8 Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD.

9 Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did [‡] blow upon it.[§] Why? saith the LORD of hosts. Because of mine house that is waste, [‖] and ye run every man unto his own house.[*]

10 Therefore [†] [*] the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit.

11 And I called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and upon all the labour of the hands.

12 ¶ [d] Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him; and the people did [*] fear before the LORD.

13 Then spake Haggai the [f] LORD'S messenger in the LORD'S message unto the people, saying, [g] I am with you, saith the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD [h] stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and did [i] work in the house of the LORD of hosts, their God,

IN the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the LORD [a] by the prophet Haggai, saying,

2 Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,

3 Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory?[*] and how do ye see it now? is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

a Heb. by the hand of. ch. 1. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 21.

* Some of the oldest men who returned might perfectly remember the first temple. The foundation of the second temple was laid in the 2d year of Cyrus, 53 years after the destruction of the first; and this prophecy was uttered 15 years after the laying of that foundation; in all 68 years: so that there might be several who had been familiar with the first temple from 12 to 30 years, or even upwards.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Lukewarm professors are easily checked in their reforming attempts. If civil powers do not encourage them, they imagine it is not a proper season: and it will require both prophets and plagues to stir them up to their duty. Uncertain, unsubstantial, and unsatisfying, are all the enjoyments of wealth: and it is very unlike saints to prefer temporal advantages to the honour of Christ, and welfare of his church. But none ever gain by withholding from pious uses: nor can reformation be ever expected till men consider their ways. It is pleasant to be employed in that work in which God delights. And if he direct us by his word, awe our conscience, and animate our heart by his Spirit, we shall then cheerfully apply to it: and the more negligent we have been, the more diligent we ought to be. God will graciously work with such as readily apply themselves to their duty. And if he be with us, we need wish no more.

4 Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua son of Josedech, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work; for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts.

5 According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not.

6 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens,* and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land;

7 And I will shake all nations, and the Desire of all nations † shall come; and I will fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.

8 The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.

9 The glory of this latter ‡ house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the LORD of hosts.

10 ¶ In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying,

12 If one bear [b] holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean.§

14 Then answered Haggai, and said, [c] So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

15 And now, I pray you, [d] consider from this day and upward, from before [e] a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD:

16 [f] Since those days were, [g] when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the press-fat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

17 ¶ [h] I smote you with blasting, and with mildew, and with hail, in all the labours of your hands; yet [i] ye turned not to me, saith the LORD.

18 [k] Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that [l] the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider it.

19 Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet the vine, and the fig-tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive-tree, hath not brought forth: [m] from this day will I bless you.¶

20 ¶ And [n] again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying,

21 Speak to [o] Zerubbabel governor of Judah, saying, I will [p] shake the heavens and the earth;

22 And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen;† and [q] I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother.

23 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the LORD, and will make thee [r] as a signet: for I have [s] chosen thee, saith the LORD of hosts.

† Before, and at the time of, our Lord's appearing, the Jews were accustomed to apply this title to MESSIAH, as appears from the Rabbies Aquila and Jarchi. He is truly "the Desire of all nations;" even of those that know him not, and of those who reject him—for all nations desire pardon of sin, and redemption from death, and are ever longing for liberty—all which are in JESUS CHRIST, and in him alone. This glorious title seems to refer to Jacob's prophecy (Gen. 49. 10) —"to him shall the gathering of the people be"—which was literally exemplified in the commencement, when, in expectation of the kingdom of Messiah there were assembled at Jerusalem so many "devout men out of every nation under heaven." Acts 2. 5.—ED.

‡ There was, in "the former" (Solomon's) temple, great architectural glory; besides, it was totally overlaid with gold. But its chief glory lay in the fire from heaven, the Urim and Thummim, the anointing oil, the Shechinah, or visible glory, and the Spirit of prophecy (Tosafoth, fol. 56. 1), all which were wanting in the latter temple. In nothing, therefore, could the "latter" exceed the "former" but in the presence of Him who was the true Shechinah, whom angels announced with "peace on earth"—who came and preached peace, and who finally, "having made peace through the blood of his cross," now pervades the hearts of all true believers with "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. II.—Ver. 6, 7, 21, 22. Not only was the Jewish church and state repeatedly shaken by manifold disasters, but the nations around were shaken and overturned by the rise and fall of the Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires, to make way for Christ's incarnation and gospel church. And they will be further shaken by the fall of the Antichristian and Mahometan powers, to make way for his universal reign on earth. 7. Christ is the desire of all nations; infinitely desirable in himself, and desired and embraced by all that know him; and his presence filled the second temple with glory. 8. If I regarded outward splendour, I could easily furnish gold and silver to render this temple magnificent. 12—14. As legal holiness is not so easily communicated as legal uncleanness, so your sacrifices do not sanctify you; but your sinful hearts, and neglect to build my temple, debase your offerings, and bring a curse on your labours. 23. Zerubbabel, but chiefly Christ, is a signet, God's precious favourite, who is intrusted with all power, and sealed as the head of his church, and who seals it to the day of redemption.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The peculiar time of God's messages and mercies ought to be remarked, and beautiful is every one in its season.—If we be hearty in God's work, he will give us all necessary encouragement.—If, amidst external discouragements, we act for him with vigour, we cannot but succeed. If Christ and his Spirit be with us, nothing need discourage us. He will work all our work in us, and perfect that which concerneth us. He will provide all our necessary expenses. He will shake and overturn nations, in order to establish his church and her privileges. He will extirpate idolatries, that himself, and his oracles and ordinances, may be ALL IN ALL: and his presence will secure peace and tranquillity. God's ministers must assist, not interfere with, one another. For it will require great pains to render men duly sensible of their spiritual maladies, and the proper remedies for them. Sinful pollution is much easier communicated and spread than holiness. It is not living among saints that will render us holy in God's sight: and our inward corruptions, and sinful misconduct, often render our works, which are materially good, unacceptable to God. The more we expect from creatures, the more we shall be disappointed: but the more firmly we expect from the new covenant, the more shall we enjoy. If we take no care of God's interest, we cannot expect that he will take care of ours; but if we make conscience of duty, we may look for his gracious rewards. If we honour him, he will favour, protect, and honour us. Nor need we be dismayed at the ruin of the wicked, since it is but the earnest of deliverances to the church.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF HAGGAI.

It is undeniable that the Jews, in consequence of this prophecy (chap. 2. 7), did expect MESSIAH to appear in this temple, until it was destroyed by Titus the Roman, when, in order to evade its application to JESUS OF NAZARETH, they applied it to a third temple, which they expect to see erected at some future period. For the same purpose, the Jewish writers, (who are followed, not in the purpose, but in the interpretation, by some modern commentators), contend that the word translated "Desire," being in construction with a plural verb, should be changed to "desires;" which they understand of desirable things, the silver, gold, and rich presents of all nations, such as were presented to Solomon by the queen of Sheba. But this change is not sanctioned by any MS., and the word was unquestionably read in the singular number by the Targum and the Vulgate. Others have insinuated that this prophecy cannot be applied to Messiah, inasmuch as the temple in which JESUS OF NAZARETH appeared was not the second, the temple of Zerubbabel, but the third, the temple of Herod. But whatever repairs and additions Herod made, it is unquestionable that, for all religious purposes, a temple existed during the forty-six years the temple of Herod was in progress. In fact, no nominal distinction was ever made by the Jews between the temple of Zerubbabel and that of Herod; and Josephus himself, upon one occasion, mentions only two temples—a former, in the days of Solomon, a latter in the days of Cyrus; and in the Chronicon Hebræum, the temple is said to have been destroyed 440 years after it was built. To nothing less than the advent of Messiah, therefore, can this glorious prophecy be referred; and nothing less than the presence of "God manifest in the flesh" could fulfil the prediction, and render "the glory of the latter house greater than of the former."—Ed.

THE PROPHECY OF ZECHARIAH.

Zechariah was one of the captives who returned with Zerubbabel from Babylon, and, from an expression in chap. ii. 4. there is reason to conclude that he was called to the prophetic office when a young man. He began to prophesy in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, in the eighth month of the ecclesiastical year, and consequently two months after Haggai, and was a powerful assistant to that prophet in promoting the building of the temple. His prophecy, after a solemn call to repentance, contains nine visions with which God was pleased to favour him (chap. i—vi); followed by three discourses enforcing godly practice, with predictions of the trials and deliverances of his people, and of the entire gospel church to the end of the world, chap. vii—xiv.—Ed.

CHAPTER I.

(1) An exhortation to repentance: 1—6. (2) A vision of horses: 7—11. (3) In reply to the angel, the Lord comforts Jerusalem: 12—17. (4) The vision of four horns and four carpenters: 18—21.

A. M. cir. 3484. B. C. cir. 520.

IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

2 The LORD hath been [a] sore displeased with your fathers.

3 Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.[†]

4 Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [a] Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD.

5 Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

6 But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not [b] take hold of your fathers? and they returned and said, Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us.

7 ¶ Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat,[‡] in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

8 I saw by night, and behold a [c] man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there red horses,[§] speckled, and white.[‖]

9 ¶ Then said I, O my lord, [d] what are these? And the angel [e] that talked with me [*] said unto me, I will show thee what these be.

10 And the [f] man that stood among the [g] myrtle-trees answered and said, These are they whom the LORD hath [h] sent to walk to and fro through the earth.

11 And they answered the [i] angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle-trees, and said, [k] We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is [l] at rest.

12 ¶ Then [m] the angel of the LORD [†] answered and said, O LORD of hosts, [n] how long wilt thou not have mercy on [o] Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation these threescore and ten years?

13 And the LORD answered the angel that talked with me with [p] good words and comfortable words.

14 So the [q] angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I am [r] jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy.

15 And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are [s] at ease: for I was but [t] a little displeased, and they [u] helped forward the affliction.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD, [x] I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: [y] my house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.

17 Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [z] My cities through [‡] prosperity shall yet be spread abroad; and the LORD shall yet [a] comfort Zion, and shall yet [b] choose Jerusalem.

18 ¶ Then lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and behold four [c] horns.[§]

[†] Turn ye unto me, and I will turn unto you, saith the Lord of hosts.—From this, and similar expressions, some have concluded that the work of spiritual salvation must begin with man; but facts concur with Scripture in attributing the whole work of grace to God. When a house is on fire and the inmates asleep, who begins the work of temporal salvation—the people who awake, or the man whose voice awakes them? Even so, the Lord calls to the sleeping sinner, and when he hears and arises, surely the work of spiritual salvation began not with the sinner, but with "God that showeth mercy."—Ed.

Arabians, Ammonites, and Philistines; or the four empires of Chaldea, Persia, Greece, and Rome: and the carpenters may denote Joshua, Zerubbabel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and other Jewish deliverers or protectors; or even the four empires, which destroyed one another.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The law must be preached as an introduction to the gospel. The past judgments of God upon sinners ought to be improved by us as warnings to avoid imitation of their sins; and the view of his almighty power ought to animate us to a speedy and serious repentance. It is happy to have him for a friend, but terrible to have him our adversary. No pattern ought to be copied in contempt of, or disobedience to, him; and no safety can be expected in obstinate wickedness. No unbelief can falsify God's word. If we receive not his promises, he will execute his threatenings upon us. But how closely Jesus Christ cleaves to his people in all their debasement and distress! He is ready to teach his servants, or employ his angels or ministers, for their relief. And while most of mankind remain unconcerned under the curse of God, and the power of the devil, seasonably and effectually he intercedes for his people. Hereby is ensured to his church the destruction of all their cruel and brutal enemies, and comfort and happiness to themselves. And let Satan find as many and as powerful agents to oppress the church as he will, Christ will find enough to resist and destroy them.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 4, 5. Multitudes of houses shall be built without the walls, and all live in peace and safety, as God himself will effectually protect them: and his presence in his ordinances will be their distinguished honour. 6—9. Ye, who yet remain scattered here and there in Chaldea, hasten to your own country; for scarcely shall my glory have taken possession of the temple at Jerusalem, when I will further revenge the injuries done to you upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and reduce them into a state of bondage to the Medes and Persians, who were lately their tributaries.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The more we have seen of divine things, the more we should search into them. Nor need we fear that room for new converts will ever be wanting in the church. Yea, thrice happy is it when multitudes are joined to the Lord, and have him for their protector and glory! Alas! that such multitudes, through unbelief, should be so averse to leave their bondage, and share the liberty of Christ! But no dispersion or slavery can hinder his redressing the grievances of his people, or avenging their injuries. Infinitely tender is his sympathy towards them in their distress: and plainly he marks his and his servants' mission in the seasonable fulfilment of his promises and threatenings. Nothing on earth can more rejoice gracious souls than to behold the church restored to her privileges, enlarged by the accession of multitudes, and blessed with the presence of God. And in everything, especially in his great works, we ought silently to adore and wait for him.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 1, 2. Satan laboured, by accusations and other means, to render Joshua's ministrations for himself and his people unsuccessful. But Christ, in his Father's name, rebuked the devil, and defended Joshua and the returned remnant of the Jews, as persons graciously preserved under, and delivered from, manifold dangers and trials of affliction. 3—5. head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by.

6 ¶ And the angel of the LORD protested unto Joshua, saying,

‡ "From out of one stone shall be seven fountains; behold, I will open the orifice thereof."—Boothroyd. A reference, however, to chap. 4. 10. will, most probably, lead to the conclusion that "seven eyes" is the preferable translation; then, for exposition, let it be recollected that "seven" is the emblem of perfection in successive workings, terminating in rest; even as the six days of creation were closed by the hallowed sabbath; that the "seven eyes" represent the "seven spirits" of Christ the Lamb (Rev. 1. 4. & 5. 6.), and that these are not seven created spirits, but the seven infinite endowments of the Holy Ghost (John 3. 34.), wherewith our Lord was fitted for the mediatorial office. THEN I turned,* and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying [a] roll.

2 And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a [b] flying roll; the length ment to glory and honour. 7. If Joshua conducts himself well, the high priesthood shall be continued with him and his descendants, and he shall be highly respected by his fellow ministers, and at last admitted to the blessed fellowship of angels and glorified saints. 8. Joshua and his fellow priests were monuments of God's marvellous deliverance from captivity, and were typical of Christ, who, as man, growing up amidst weakness, and bringing forth glory to God, and happiness to men, is called The BRANCH. 9. This stone represents Christ as the only foundation laid in Zion, regarded by beholders unnumbered, endowed by God with all eminent gifts and graces, and made perfect by sufferings and glory, that he may be the source of the justification and sanctification of the whole church, and of all the happiness and safety of his people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Satan never fails to resist and discourage as far as he can the faithful ministers and worshippers of God. But Christ is our present helper in time of need. And he will be graciously pitiful to our infirmities, and ready to relieve. With him narrow escapes from imminent danger are preludes of, and may be pleas for, further favours. No sinful or distressing pollutions can break his covenant with us. And if our hearts be upright with him, he will bear with our infirmities, and reward our services done in faith. There is sufficient virtue in him to change both our state and nature: and great and lasting will be the honours of his faithful servants.—But how infinitely marvellous are the incarnation, person, and office of our Redeemer! Infinitely marvellous were God's preparations of him for his debased and honorary work, as the only Saviour of men. And infinitely delightful are the pardons, sanctification, peace, rest, and holy fellowship which his people enjoy through him.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 2, 3, 11, 14. The candlestick denotes the church curiously framed, pure, precious, and durable; the seven lamps, her ministers and members; the two olive-trees, Christ in his natures or offices, or he and his Spirit in their new covenant stations: the oil, gifts and graces; and the pipes for conveying it, the ordinances of the gospel. 6—10. Not by human, but divine assistance, shall Zerubbabel, notwithstanding all the attempts of the heathens to hinder him, happily and triumphantly finish the building of the temple; and even you, who have had low thoughts of the beginning of this work, shall rejoice when you see him carrying it on prosperously, and marvellously assisted by my all-seeing, all-preserving, and governing providence. And in like manner shall Jesus Christ, notwithstanding all the opposition of hell and earth, from age to age build up his gospel church, though by weak instruments, to the great comfort of his people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Not only must the Holy Ghost exhibit to us divine things, but must also make us observe them. And it is desirable to understand God's manifestations of himself in his word, ordinances, and providences; yea, great is the shame that we are so slow of heart to conceive of them. Yet in parables we may often understand their scope, though we should not clearly understand every circumstance of them. No want of human helps can hinder God's work. Nay, they are often withheld, that his power and grace may have all the glory. Silent progress will issue in triumphant shoutings. What takes its rise from, may safely be committed to, the care of his grace. He will never forsake the work of his hands. And, while fulfilment of predictions attests their divine original, the smallest beginnings of his work ought never to be despised. It is inexpressibly comfortable to see magistrates and ministers active in building the church, and God himself making all his providences to concur for her welfare, while Jesus and his Spirit, by ordinances and oracles, pour down their influences upon her ministers and members.

CHAP. V.—Ver. 6—11. The ephah, a large measure, denotes that they would fill up a very large measure of iniquity everywhere before God would execute his judgments upon them. The woman sitting in the ephah denotes the Jewish nation awfully abandoned to wickedness. The talent of lead, for covering the mouth of the ephah, denotes the dreadful and unavoidable weight of their calamities. The two winged women, who carried the ephah, denote the Roman armies destroying the Jews, and carrying them into a miserable and lasting captivity. Their fixing an house for it in the land of Shinar, imports that the dispersion of the Jews by the Romans would be as miserable, and much more lasting, than the captivity in Babylon.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Fearful is the curse which all men are under by nature; and which will find them out, go where they will, if they continue without Christ. Thieves and profane swearers, those brethren in sin, are infamous and self-destroying wretches. And unavoidable, insupportable, and lasting is the wrath of God, which falls upon obstinate transgressors, and especially apostates from his true worship.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 1—8. The brazen mountains may denote the unchangeable counsels of God, from which everything in churches or nations originates; or the seeming difficulties in the first rise of events. The four chariots, drawn by horses of different colours, may represent the diversified dispensations of Providence in acts of mercy or wrath; or the angels of God as everywhere throughout the world ministering therein; or the apostles and ministers of Christ as actuated by his Spirit, and ministering in what relates to the church; or the four successive empires in the world. The red horses represented the bloody Chaldeans; the black, the Persians, who executed God's vengeance in conquering Chaldea, called the north country; the white, the rapidly victorious Greeks; and the grisled and bay horses, the Romans at last mingled with the ravaging Goths, who especially carried their conquests to the south. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xi—xv.] 13. The counsel of peace denotes the covenant of grace between Christ and his Father; and the gospel of our salvation, in which Christ's priestly and kingly offices are so gloriously connected. 14. (1) The hypocrisy of the Jews exposed in their mode of fasting: 1—7. (2) They are exhorted to repentance: 8—14.

A. M. cir. 3487. B. C. cir. 517.

AND it came to pass [a] in the fourth year[c] of king Darius, that [b] the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu;

2 When [c] they had sent unto the house of God Sherezer and Regem-melech, and their men, [†] to pray before the LORD,

3 And to speak [d] unto the priests which were in the house of the LORD of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I [e] weep[‡] in the [f] fifth month, [g] separating myself, as I have done these so many years?

4 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD of hosts unto me, saying,

5 Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth[§] and [h] seventh month, even those [i] seventy years, [k] did ye at all fast unto me, even to me?

6 And when ye did eat, and when ye did drink, [l] [‖] did not ye eat for yourselves, and drink for yourselves?

7 [m] [¶] Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath [n] cried [†] by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited the [o] south and the plain?

8 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying,

9 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, [‡] Execute true judgment, and show mercy and compassions every man to his brother:

10 And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

A. M. cir. 3487. B. C. cir. 517.

11 [p] But they refused to hearken, and [*] pulled away the shoulder, and [q] stopped their ears, that they should not hear.

12 Yea, [r] they made their hearts as an adamant-stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent [s] in his Spirit [†] by the former prophets: therefore came [t] a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

13 Therefore it is come to pass, that as [u] he cried, and they would not hear; so [x] they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts:

14 But [y] I scattered them with [z] a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land [a] was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned; for they laid the [b] pleasant land desolate.

temple a memorial of the liberality of those four men who had contributed the materials, and a figure of the future glory of Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—From what immutably fixed decrees all the events of Providence originate: nor can any opposition prevent their execution. In the most august and awful manner are they carried on; and angels and ministers are honoured to be the instruments. Diversified, ever varying, divinely actuated, admirably connected, and strangely mixed, are their parts! And God takes pleasure in every motion of them; particularly in taking vengeance upon the most noted enemies of his church. It is honourable to help forward good works by our purse, even when we cannot do it in our persons: nor shall the generosity of such be unremembered by God. But how transcendently glorious is our blessed Mediator, upon whose head are many crowns, which can never totter nor be taken off! Marvellous and useful are his administrations in erecting and managing his church; and to himself shall all the glory and honour of his work redound. Yea, under him, in virtue of the new covenant and gospel, both Jews and Gentiles are happily and divinely united into his mystical body the church.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 5, 6. In the fast of the fifth month they lamented the burning of the city and temple by the Chaldeans. In the fast of the seventh they bewailed the murder of Gedaliah, whom the Chaldeans made governor over their poor brethren which were left in Judea. But in neither did they fast in a right manner, or with a view to God's glory; and so their fasts were no more acceptable to God than their common eating and drinking to gratify their own sensual appetites. 11, 12. Like unruly bullocks, they refused to be under the yoke of God's laws, and obstinately rebelled against all his warnings, and would not even patiently hear his messages; yea, by a course of presumptuous sinning, they rendered their hearts quite obdurate and impenetrable to conviction, neither regarding the law of Moses, nor the instructions of the prophets which succeeded him in Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—It is an honour for great as well as small to reverence the messengers and ordinances of God, to supplicate his favours, and to ask his directions. Every man ought to be employed answerably to his station and gifts; and in cases of conscience, none ought to be more able and ready than God's ministers, whose daily business it is to search his word. And if God afflict, it is time for us to humble ourselves under his mighty hand. Religious customs should neither be introduced nor altered, without serious and mature deliberation; and never ought we to inquire into our duty, without being willing to hear our faults charged home on our consciences. But, alas! it is too common to make our own inclination, and not God's law, our rule: our pleasure, profit, or honour, not his glory, our end in our actions, whether natural, civil, or religious. All the faithful messengers of God, in every age, remarkably harmonize in the leading truths and duties of religion. And in practical religion, strict equity, tender compassion, and brotherly kindness, are ingredients of the highest importance. Yet, alas! how obstinately many professors neglect them, and practise the opposite vices! And fatal, and answerable are the punishments which they incur thereby.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—God's new covenant relations, gracious presence, and everlasting love, are sources of abundant benefits to his people: and the blessings of time, as well as of eternity, inseparably and closely follow sincere reformation from sin. Great is the mercy when children are so healthy, so safe from alarms of war, so well nourished, and so kindly affectioned, as in companies to follow their innocent diversions; and when none other amuse themselves with such trifles: and especially when God gathers sinners to his church, and solemnly and practically acknowledges them his people. God can easily reverse the unhappy state of nations and churches, and turn their howlings into shouts of praise and transports of joy. And he can delightfully gather his chosen out of all kindreds, tongues, and languages. Why then should we ever doubt of his power or will to fulfil the most astonishing promises? Powerfully ought these to engage our hearts to our duty, however difficult or dangerous. And nothing should be dearer to us than the worship of God, and the winning of others to Christ.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 7. The Philistines shall be disabled from murdering and plundering the Jews; nay, shall be subdued by the Maccabees, and many of them turned to the Lord. 8. I will marvellously protect the Jews, while Greeks, Syro-grecians, and Egypto-grecians, repeatedly march their armies through Canaan. 10. Wars and carnal confidences shall be extirpated; and, by the preaching of the gospel among the Gentiles, shall Christ's kingdom be extended, not only over all Canaan, but the whole world. 11. And as the Lord, according to his promise, brought you up out of Chaldea, where ye had neither hope nor happiness, so shall he, by the blood of Christ, the condition of the covenant of grace, bring multitudes out of their state of heathenism, sinfulness, and misery. 12. Let not only those who remain in Chaldea hasten to Canaan, in hopes of redoubled blessings, sufficient to balance their past miseries; but let those, who are in a state of heathenism and unregeneracy, in the faith of the gospel promises, hasten to Jesus Christ, the only Saviour and Refuge. 13—17. I will enable the Jews to withstand, subdue, and rout their Syro-grecian and Turkish enemies with great slaughter, and render themselves honoured and powerful; yea, by means of Jewish preachers, I will go forth conquering the nations, however learned or valiant, to Jesus Christ: and while the redeemed, and especially faithful ministers, are marvellously protected and honoured, persons of all ranks shall, with admiration of his glory and goodness, richly partake of his fulness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—Fearful destructions await the disturbers of God's church. Their punishment may be in part delayed, but is never forgotten. Yet what sovereign grace appears in the conversion of the despicable remains of the people of his curse! And it promises well when men are turned from idols to the living God. Though Christ's little flock be in the midst of devourers, his protection can render them safe. Infinite is his excellency, ability, and suitableness to save sinners, even the chief. No case on this side hell is too desperate for his almighty power and grace: and his answerableness to our sinfulness and misery ought to animate our speedy flight to him for deliverance. When he, as the Captain of salvation, prepares and arms his instruments, an easy and notable victory is secured for his followers: and the ruin of enemies contributes to their honour and comfort. And great is their joy in himself and his grace, while they plentifully share of his fulness.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 1—4. But though the Lord has promised plenty, ye must supplicate him for rains to effect it. Indulge yourselves therefore no more in idolatry and divination, which have so disappointed your fathers, and occasioned their miserable captivity, and my wrathful destruction of their princes and priests. I have now recovered you from your captivity, and made you strong and courageous, and have joined you together as a body civil and ecclesiastic, and enabled you to defend yourselves, and even harass your enemies; and quickly I will send you the Messiah, to found, fasten together, and defend his gospel church, and destroy her enemies. 5—12. Not only shall the Jews under the Maccabees valiantly defend themselves, and even enlarge their power, but, especially in the beginning of the millennium, they shall be wonderfully assisted by God; and after long and marvellous preservation and increase in their miserable dispersion, they and the ten tribes shall, with great joy, be brought back to Canaan, and there serve the Lord; while the Assyrians, Egyptians, and Turks, who had formerly murdered and oppressed them, shall be debased and ruined. And in like manner shall God, by his lively and animated gospel ministers, call and subdue the Gentile nations to Christ, mercifully recover them from their long-continued idolatries and delusions, render them his peculiar people, strengthen and comfort them by the influence of his Spirit, and effectually call them into the church, and thereby render her exceedingly extensive and numerous; and shall remove all obstacles, whether heathenish or antichristian, out of their way, and render them strong and active, regular and lively Christians.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—In our prayers we must follow the promises, and attend the providences of God, requesting mercies both suitable and seasonable. And in this let us look to God only. Wandering after strange gods will but expose us to disappointment and trouble. Whether things distress or comfort us, it is God who directs them. All the power, that is either for us or against us, is of Him. His people become powerful and courageous when he affords them his assistance and presence. By him all enemies are easily overcome and obstacles removed. At his effectual call multitudes gather into his church from places the most distant. Marvellous then are her comforts, numbers, power, and preservation; and courageous, upright, and evangelical, the walk of her members. Nothing is wanting where JEHOVAH is our strength, our song, and our salvation.

CHAP. XI.—Ver. 1—3. Lebanon may denote the temple, Jerusalem, or even Judea in general. Fir-trees, cedars, oaks, shepherds, lions, may denote their great men, valiant soldiers, and cruel rulers. The forest may denote Jerusalem, or the common people, unfruitful in holiness, but numerous, entangling, and dangerous. The pride of Jordan may denote all Judea, overrun by the Roman armies, which enraged their rulers, even as the overflow of Jordan enraged the lions which lodged in its banks. 4, 7, 11. For about forty years before their last dispersion, Jesus Christ personally, and by his harbinger and apostles, called the Jews to himself; and many of the poorer sort were converted, and rendered poor in spirit; and, by following his directions in leaving their country and fleeing to Pella eastward of Jordan, most of them were preserved from the common ruin. 5, 6, 8, 9. The Jews were partly destroyed by the cruelty and violence of their own governors, by their intestine divisions, and by the Roman emperor, whom they had avowed for their king in opposition to Jesus Christ. Their princes, priests, and prophets, and the three sects of Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians, together with the three civil factions, all haters of God, and detested by him, were cut off one after another; and the nation in general abandoned to sword, famine, pestilence, and miserable captivity. 10, 14. The breaking of these staves may denote his renouncing all claim to them as his peculiar people, and dissolving all connexion of government, and affection among them; or his entire removal of the ordinances of the gospel from them, which were means of honourably uniting them to the church, and to one another in love. 15—17. They were given up to corrupt teachers and pretended Messiahs, who, by their false doctrines, &c. cruelly murdered their souls, preyed upon their substance, and decoyed them into ruinous calamities; and to civil rulers, whether of their own nation, or of the Romans, Persians, Antichristians, Turks, &c. who miserably oppressed them.—Yea, these teachers and rulers did but render themselves miserable in the issue.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Awfully alarming are the falls of cities, churches, or nations, or even of persons eminent in station. And dreadful and desperate is the condition of nations and churches when their rulers become oppressors and murderers, and when hearers become pleased with clerical monsters of wickedness. Before the most ruinous judgments God often tries men with the offered grace of his gospel. And great is the mercy if even the poorer sort embrace it and repent, when the rich and great pour contempt upon it. But dreadful is the case if the final offers of grace do but occasion men's impenitence and obstinate wickedness. And great is their misery, whose churches are dissolved and abandoned by heaven. Mutual contentions and common calamities quickly issue in their destruction. God justly gives up the refusers of his Son into the hands of unfaithful ministers, deceitful impostors, and unmerciful princes. And dreadful is the guilt of such, and certain and fearful their plagues.

CHAPTER XII.

(1) Jerusalem a cup of trembling, and a burdensome stone to the assailing Gentiles: 1—5. (2) The glory of Israel restored: 6—8. (3) The spirit of grace and supplication poured out: 9—14.

THE [a] burden of the word of the LORD [b] for Israel, saith the LORD, which [c] stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and [d] formeth the spirit of man within him.

2 Behold, [e] I will make Jerusalem a cup of [†] trembling unto all the people round about, [§] when they shall be in the siege both against Judah and against Jerusalem.

3 And in [f] that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: all that burden themselves with it [§] shall be cut in pieces, [g] though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

4 [h] In that day, saith the LORD, [i] I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness: and I will [k] open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, [l] The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

6 ¶ In that day will I make the governors of Judah [m] like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, [n] on the right hand, and on the left; and [o] Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem.

7 The LORD also [p] shall save the tents [‖] of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David, and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, do not magnify themselves against Judah.

8 In that day [q] shall the LORD defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem: [r] and he that is [*] [†] feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, [‡] as the angel of the LORD before them.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, that [t] I will seek to destroy [§] all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

10 ¶ And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me [u] whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn [*] for him, [v] as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.

11 In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, [x] as the mourning of Hadadrimmon [†] in the valley of Megiddon.

12 And the land shall mourn, [‡] every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of [y] Nathan apart, and their wives apart;

13 The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of Shimei apart, and their wives apart;

14 [z] All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart.

IN that day there shall be a fountain opened [*] to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for [†] uncleanness.

2 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols [‡] out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered: and also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land.

3 And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, [§] then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies in the name of the LORD: and his father and his mother that begat him shall thrust him through when he prophesieth.

4 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied; neither shall they wear [a] a rough garment [‖] to deceive:

CHAP. XII.—Ver. 1—9. These promises began to be accomplished in the victories of the Jews over the Syro-grecians, and other enemies, in the time of the Maccabees; but will be more fully accomplished in the destruction of the Turks, who shall attack the Jews when newly returned from their present dispersion. They have also an accomplishment in the Lord's making all the attempts of Jews, Heathens, or Antichristians, against his gospel church, to issue in their own destruction, and the glorious deliverance and protection of his people. And in both cases, deliverances, temporal or spiritual, are attended with a plentiful effusion of the Spirit, and deep repentance for sin. 10—14. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xviii, xix.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Thrice happy are they who have the Almighty JEHOVAH, and all the burdens and blessings of his word, on their side! He will effectually render his church and ministers a terror to all their opposers, as he hath done from age to age. For easily he can infatuate the counsels, and enfeeble the courage and strength of their enemies. Happy are they whose strengthener, protector, and peace-making governor, is the Lord and his Christ! And thrice happy is it when the destruction of enemies is attended with an outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon all ranks, great and small; and when magistrates and ministers are patterns to others in evangelical, bitter, and particular humiliation for sin!

CHAP. XIII.—Ver. 2—6. Such shall be the zeal for extirpating idolatry and false teachers, that many of these, ashamed of their impostures, shall lay aside the pretences and habits of prophets, and shall apply themselves to common labours; and shall pretend that the marks of idols, in their hands, or the corrections which they have received for their attempting to deceive, were obtained by some other means, and for some other miscarriages. 7—9. the sheep shall be scattered; and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones.

8 And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the LORD, [b] two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein.

9 And I will bring the third part* through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The LORD is my God.

2 For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

3 ¶ Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

4 And his feet shall stand† in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east: and the mount of Olives shall cleave‡ in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.

5 And ye shall flee to the valley of § the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the * earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and [b] the LORD my God shall come, and all the [c] saints with thee.

† As our Lord stood upon the mount of Olives, near Bethany, when he ascended into heaven (Luke 24. 50, 51.); so, it seems here to be intimated that, upon the same mountain, shall he again descend at the resurrection, when he comes to judge the world. See Job 19. 25—27. Acts 1. 11, 12.—ED.

‡ At the death of our Lord there was an earthquake, and "a great earthquake" preceded his resurrection, after which there was a resurrection of "many bodies of the saints who slept" (Mat. 27. 50—53. & 28. 2.) There seems therefore much reason to conclude that this passage describes, not a figurative or political and ecclesiastical commotion, but a literal earthquake introductory of judgment, and the general resurrection of the just and the unjust. See Ezek. 38. 19, 20. John 5. 28, 29. 1 Thes. 4. 16.—ED.

9 And the LORD shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall there be one LORD, and his name one.

10 All the land shall be * turned as a plain† from Geba to Rimmon, south of Jerusalem: and it ‡ shall be lifted up, and ‡ inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner-gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine-presses.

11 And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be [k] no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem § shall be safely inhabited.‖

12 ¶ And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem; [l] Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.

Messiah, God in human nature, the chief Shepherd and Governor of the church, while his disciples are scattered from him, shall quickly issue in marvellous favours to them, and other Jews of the poorer sort; for though, in their destruction by the Romans, the far greater part shall, on account of their obstinacy in rejecting him, be utterly destroyed or reduced to misery, yet a remnant in that age, and especially in the millennial period, shall, through much tribulation, be turned to, claimed by, and openly avow, the promised Messiah.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Full forgiveness and reformation are closely connected with true faith and gospel repentance. Nor is any guilt or stain so deep, but Jesus, freely offered in the gospel, by his blood, his Spirit and work, can effectually wash it out. Yea, nothing more effectually dislodges idols, devils, and impostors, than the plain and powerful exhibition and application of a crucified Christ, as made of God unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.—Thrice happy is it when all ranks, in their respective callings, concur to promote reformation, and to extirpate false worship and delusion; and when regular censures and punishments make false teachers sensible and ashamed of their sin, and return to their duty. But how infinitely glorious is our Redeemer! Tremendous were the sufferings which he endured from his Father's just vengeance for our sin. And his death effectually issues in mercy, even to his deserters, betrayers, and murderers. By the most fearful calamities God often promotes the purification and happiness of his chosen people, and the establishment of his gospel and church in the world. And it is God's apprehending of us by his grace, that makes us apprehend him by faith, and seek him by fervent prayer.

CHAP. XIV. Perhaps this chapter had the first step of its fulfilment in the signal victories of the Maccabees over the Syro-grecians, who had taken Jerusalem by force and ravaged the country; and in the restoration of Jerusalem, and the reformation of religion that followed. But it had a more signal fulfilment in the destruction and dispersion of the Jewish nation by the Romans: afterwards of the heathen empire of Rome by the Goths; and the spread of the gospel, and erection, enlargement, or prosperity of the Christian church, which attended the same. Yet it will have a further accomplishment in God's destroying the Turks, who shall attack the newly returned Jews, and in the prosperity and reformation of the Jewish nation attending the same; in his destroying the Antichristian and Mahometan powers, when making their final attack upon the Christians; and in the powerful spread of the gospel, the subjection of all nations to Christ, and the remarkable devotion and holiness of church members, in the millennial period. And it will have its last step of fulfilment in God's destroying the armies of Gog and Magog, which attack his church, in the end of the millennium, and in the final extirpation and damnation of the wicked at the last day, and the glories of the new heaven and new earth in the eternal state. 4, 5. In consequence of Christ's ascension, he shall be manifested in the gospel preached by his apostles, according to the commission given them on mount Olivet; and the ceremonial worship shall be removed, and Jews and Gentiles, having equal admission, shall, in multitudes, eagerly flee to the Redeemer, and unite in the gospel church. 6, 7. For a time the condition of the Jews shall neither be happy nor absolutely miserable: for a time the ceremonies shall not seem wholly abolished; nay, for many ages, the Christian church shall have but a mixed lot of prosperity and adversity: but the Lord shall graciously take notice of and manage all; and at last, in the millennium, great shall be the prosperity and purity of the Jewish nation and gospel church. 8, 9. Issuing forth from Jerusalem and the church of God, the gospel shall, amidst prosperity and adversity, be preached by the apostles and others in all quarters of the world, till all nations be turned to the Lord: and men, renouncing all their idolatries and delusions, shall harmoniously unite in the faith, profession, and obedience of Christ. 10, 11. Every obstacle of conversion, and every noted abomination, shall be removed; and the Jews, happily settled in Canaan, shall gloriously and safely share the privileges of the gospel church. 12 ‡ Judah shall fight at Jerusalem.—That Jerusalem will again be "surrounded with armies" seems unquestionable; and, if the fighting of Judah signify anything beyond "the good fight of faith" (1 Tim. 6. 12.) to which every soldier of Christ is called (2 Tim. 2. 3.), the statement that the fight will be "at Jerusalem" indicates that it will merely be that defensive war for "brethren, for sons, for daughters, for wives, and for houses," (Neh. 4. 14. 2 Sam. 10. 12.) which, so far from being forbidden, may become a moral duty, the neglect of which would incur the deepest moral guilt.—Ed.

19 This shall be the [u] punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

20 ¶ In that day [x] shall there be upon the [*] bells of the horses, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD: and the [y] pots in the LORD's house shall be like the bowls before the altar.

21 Yea, [z] every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the LORD of hosts; and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein: and in that day there shall be no more the [a] Canaanite [†] in the [b] house of the LORD of hosts.

—15. By signal judgments, and mutual contentions, the opposers of the Jews and Christians shall be infatuated and destroyed, and their wealth left for a spoil, to enrich those whom they had attempted to destroy. 16—19. The keeping of the feast of tabernacles, denotes an observance of the various ordinances of the gospel filled with the consolations of Christ. 20, 21. Wars shall be exchanged for serious devotions; or, even in their war and most common employments, men shall act from gracious and holy motives, in a holy manner, and to holy ends; and the church shall be purged from all apparently unclean and mercenary ministers and professors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Judgments commonly begin at the house of God; where then shall the ungodly and sinner appear at last? Scarcely ever do nations or armies prosper much after they have imbrued their hands in the blood of God's people. Thrice happy is the gospel church, which hath Jesus Christ for her superintendent and her root, in which both Jews and Gentiles cordially unite! Open is the access to her made by his ascension and published gospel: and with great earnestness ought men to flee into her. It is new covenant relation to God that can alone render us happy amidst manifold commotions. And let providences be ever so dark and intermixed, if our God knows and manages them, they will all issue in a comfortable manner. It is a great honour to be a mother of churches, from whence gospel messengers, oracles, ordinances, and influences do spread into the world, and render the whole a united kingdom of Jesus Christ. Remarkable deliverances of the church are generally attended with terrible ruin to her opposers; if one plague answer not, another is inflicted; and it is for the honour of Jesus' grace, that the remnant of such are often converted by his Spirit, and saved by his blood. Divine influences effectually rectify men's devotions, with respect to their object, Mediator, manner, and seasons. And if men contemn and neglect the ordinances of God and means of grace, they forfeit not only the blessings of salvation, but even of common providence. But thrice happy shall be the blessed millennium, when holiness shall not only shine forth in every devotion, but even in the most ordinary business, and everything be used as devoted to the service of Christ.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ZECHARIAH.

Zechariah was contemporary with Haggai, and his coadjutor in the great national work of building the temple, reorganizing the worship of Jehovah, and reforming the principles and habits of the people. But, though there appear no companion but Haggai, it does not necessarily follow, that upon them alone the prophetic spirit was poured out, and the supply of instruction, so inadequate to the spiritual wants of the people. How few of our Lord's disciples and apostles have left any written record of their thoughts or labours!—Even so, there may have been many enlightened and faithful prophets in the days of Joshua the high priest—who laboured abundantly in the word and doctrine, who were living epistles addressed to all their countrymen—and who, yet, have transmitted no memorial of their persons or works to posterity. God desired not that his Bible should become a large book—(John 20. 30, 31. and 21. 25.)—a load for the memory, or a toil for the understanding—but merely that it should present such specimens of providence and grace, as would render it a book of sufficient precedents for all times and circumstances—of reproofs for all forms of sin, and of encouragement to all duties. Chap. 9. 9. & 12. 10. & 13. 7, seem evidently quoted or referred to in Matt. 21. 4, 5. & 26. 31. Mar. 14. 27. John 12. 14, 15. and 19. 37. Rev. 1. 7.

M A L A C H I.

MALACHI seems to have prophesied about A. M. 3600, contemporary with, or quickly after, the government of Nehemiah. His principal scope is to reprove the Jews for their neglect or profanation of God's ordinances; their sacrilege, heathen marriages, and other abominations; and to warn them of the approaching incarnation of the Messiah.

[Of Malachi, the last of the Old Testament prophets, the tribe and family, and even the precise date of his prophecy, are unknown; and the conjectural opinions of the learned, it is useless to detail. Three things only are certain.—(1) That he prophesied after Haggai; for at the time of his prophesying the temple was built, and the worship restored. (Chap. i. 7, 10, 12. & iii. 10.)—(2) That his book was, at all times, recognised as an inspired portion of the Jewish canon.—(3) That he was fully recognised by our Lord. (Matt. xi. 10.) The only probability which it seems important to notice is—that Malachi prophesied during, or shortly after, the administration of Nehemiah. Kennicott and Hales agree in assigning this prophecy to 420 B. C.—a long and dreary interval, during which no one arises whom the Jewish church recognises as an inspired ambassador of Jehovah.—ED.]

CHAPTER I.

God complains of Israel's ingratitude, threatens judgment, and condemns their irreligious worship and profanity.

THE [a] burden of the word of the LORD to Israel [*] by Malachi.

2 I have loved you, saith the LORD: yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the LORD: yet [b] I loved Jacob,

3 And I hated[†] Esau, and [c] laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the [d] dragons of the wilderness.

4 Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, [e] but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them, The [f] border of wickedness, and, [g] The people against whom the LORD hath indignation for ever.

5 And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, The LORD will be [h] magnified [‡] [§] from the border [‖] of Israel.

6 ¶ [i] A son honoureth his father, and [k] a servant his master: if then [l] I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a master, [m] where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, [n] O priests, that despise my name: and [o] ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?

7 [*] Ye offer [p] polluted bread[†] upon mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, The table of the LORD is contemptible.

8 And if ye offer the blind [‡] for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts.

9 And now, I pray you, [q] beseech [§] God that he will be gracious unto us: this hath been, [‖] by your means: will he regard your persons?[*] saith the LORD of hosts.

10 Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought.[†] [r] I have no pleasure in you, saith the LORD of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand.

11 For from the rising of the sun, even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense[*] shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering: for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 [s] But ye have profaned it, in that ye say, [t] The table of the LORD is polluted; and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible.

13 Ye said also, [u] Behold, what a weariness is it! [†] and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts; and ye brought [x] that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: should I accept this of your hand? saith the LORD.

14 ¶ But cursed be the [y] deceiver, which [‡] hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the LORD a corrupt thing: for [z] I am a great King, saith the LORD of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

CHAP. I.—Ver. 3—5. Their very eyes saw that the Lord had not only almost utterly destroyed the Edomites, but had rendered their country altogether desolate, and fruitful in nothing but serpents. 10, 11. Since ye are so mercenary, that, notwithstanding all that I have allotted to you as a reward, ye can scarcely think of shutting a door in my temple without some special hire, ye may withhold your sacrifices. I have provided for myself a people among the Gentile nations, to worship and to honour me with spiritual sacrifices of their persons, praises, thanksgivings, and alms-deeds.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Great is the sovereignty of divine grace with respect to persons and nations, in favouring and saving some, and in rejecting and destroying others for their sins. But if once ingratitude towards God prevail in the heart, nothing will appear too base to be done to or said of him. No greatness in him will awe, no relation engage, and no law will influence, nay, nor even self-interest move, us to serve him aright: and none are ever more noted profaners of God's worship than careless clergymen.——Let Britain beware! Let our behaviour correspond to God's distinguishing kindness and peculiar relations to us! Let bitter repentance, reverential fear, upright obedience, and fervent and holy devotions, prevent God's removing his gospel kingdom from us to another nation, and his executing his fearful and ruinous curse upon us!

CHAP. II.—Ver. 2—4. I will take your earthly enjoyments from you, or render them useless or hurtful to you. I will cause to rot, or otherwise spoil, your seed corn, will disdainfully reject your persons and services, and transfer you to foreign places, and even to hell, in your sins. Thus shall ye be convinced, that I have warned you in this manner, in order that my covenant of priesthood might continue with the tribe of Levi. 5—9. To reward the piety and zeal of their ancestors, I chose them and their posterity, by a lasting covenant, to be my ministers; and they, according to the law of their office, served me with sincerity and diligence; and, by their example and instructions, turned many from their wicked courses. But ye, instead of instructing the people from my word, lead them aside by your doctrine and example, and make them to abhor my service, and thus violate the terms on which ye hold your office: I will therefore punish your impiety caused many to [a] stumble at the law; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the LORD of hosts:

9 [q] Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, [r] according as ye have not kept my ways, but [†] [s] have been partial in the law.[‡]

10 ¶ [t] Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we [u] deal treacherously every man against his brother, by [x] profaning the covenant of our fathers?

11 [y] Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem: for Judah hath profaned [z] the holiness of the LORD which he [§] loved,[‖] and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

12 The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, [a] [*] the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

13 ¶ And this have ye done again,[†] [b] covering the altar of the LORD with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good-will at your hand.

CHAPTER III.

(1) The messenger of the covenant: 1—6. (2) The rebellion, sacrilege, and infidelity of Judah and Jerusalem: 7—15. (3) The association and blessing of them that feared God: 16—18.

BEHOLD, [a] I will send my messenger,[*] and he shall prepare the way before me: and [b] the LORD,[†] whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in:[‡] behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts.

2 But [c] who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap:

3 And he shall sit [d] as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness.

4 Then [e] shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in [§] former years.

5 And [f] I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that [‖] oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the LORD of hosts.

6 For I am the LORD, I change not; [g] therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

and partiality in your decisions, by rendering you openly contemptible. 10—12. Though, by having one father, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and one God, ye are all brethren in both a natural and spiritual relation, yet ye betray and deceive one another. Violating God's covenant of peculiarity with your nation, ye have acted treacherously and abominably, in profaning his institution of marriage, and your own persons, which are devoted to God, by marrying heathen women, worshippers of idols: therefore will the Lord punish you, both priest and people. 13—16. Moreover, by your cruelty, in divorcing or ill-treating your Jewish wives, ye force them to attend their sacrifices with bitter mournings, instead of praises and thanksgivings, so that I cannot but detest your oblations, having been a witness of the solemn vow which you made to them in marriage, never to neglect, reject, nor suffer any to rival them; and also of your treacherous usage of them.—Did not I, in creation, make only one wife for Adam, though I could as easily have created thousands? And for this reason, that thus an offspring might be produced in lawful wedlock, and trained up in my fear. Take heed therefore to your hearts and affections, that none of you treacherously neglect, abuse, desert, or divorce his lawful wife, or take another in her room: for I hate all such injurious divorces, whatever pretences ye may attempt to cover them with. 17. Ye have also provoked me, and wearied my patience, by your discontented murmurings at my providence; and by your declaring that wicked persons were as much regarded by me as the most pious; at least, that I was very slow and negligent in the punishing of such wretches.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Abandoned clergymen are generally most furious in impiety. No law can bind, no vow can hold, no motive engage, no pattern attract, them to their duty; no example or denunciation of wrath deter them from sin. It is indeed very honourable to be God's messengers in promoting the salvation of mankind, and to confirm our doctrines by our holy lives. But greatly offensive and reproachful to God, and hurtful to men's souls, are ministers unfaithful and unholy. They lose their credit and comfort, and bring fearful curses upon themselves, and all that they have. Yea, hateful is the conduct of professors, and especially ministers, when they profane the institutions of God, violate his laws, dishonour their character, and pour contempt on their fellow-professors, by unhallowed marriages with heathens and profane persons. But if men deal treacherously with God, no wonder they deal treacherously and abusively with their nearest relations. And scarcely anything can be more barbarous than to use wives ill. In marriages, great regard ought to be paid to the raising up of a godly seed to serve the Redeemer. And every one that would act well, must carefully take heed to his spirit.—No wonder that men's conduct is profane and treacherous when their principles are atheistical and blasphemous, and when they tempt God by stifling the convictions of his word, and justify themselves by murmurs at, and misrepresentations of, his providence. But denials and derision of God will but issue in the destruction of presumptuous sinners.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 1. John Baptist proclaimed that the Messiah was come in the flesh, and called the Jews to prepare for his manifestation of himself by faith and repentance.—Christ came in the flesh while the second temple was standing, and honoured it with his presence and ministrations. Though he was the same in nature, and equal in personal dignity, with his Father, he, as Mediator, was sent by him to declare and attest his will to men, and purchase and promote their salvation. The godly rejoiced in his person, incarnation, and work;—and even the wicked Jews were pleased with it, as they conceived hopes of temporal advantages thereby; 2—4. Yet few of the Jews will relish his coming when it shall take place; for they will be offended at his appearances and doctrines, to their own destruction: for his instructions and his conduct will tend to separate the precious from the vile, to sanctify the former and destroy the latter; and he will purify his ministers and people from their errors in doctrine, corruptions in worship, and unholiness in practice, that their services may be agreeable to his law and accepted of God through him, as well as those of their pious ancestors. 5, 6. I will speedily call you to an account for your sins; and, by punishing you, manifest that I have taken notice of them; and this ye may as certainly expect as I am not kept them. [i] Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the LORD of hosts. But ye said, [k] Wherein shall we return?

8 ¶ Will a man [l] rob God? yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.

9 Ye [m] are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

10 [n] Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and [o] prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the [p] windows of heaven, and [*] pour you out a blessing, [q] that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

11 And I will rebuke the [r] devourer [†] for your sakes, and he shall not [‡] destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts.

12 And [s] all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the LORD of hosts.

13 ¶ Your words have been [t] stout against me, saith the LORD: yet ye say, [u] What have we spoken so much against thee?

14 Ye have said, [x] It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept [§] his ordinance, and that we have walked [||] mournfully before the LORD of hosts?

15 And now we call the [y] proud happy; yea, [z] they that work wickedness [a] are set up; yea, they that [b] tempt God are even delivered.

16 ¶ Then they that [c] feared the LORD [d] spake often one to another; and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and [e] a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name.

17 And they shall be mine, saith the LORD of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels;[*] and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

18 Then shall ye return,[†] and discern between the righteous and the wicked; between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

* The dawn of this day commenced in the preaching of our Lord, whose words burned as fire upon the hypocrisy of the Scribes and Pharisees; it arose higher and burned more fiercely in the destruction of Jerusalem, and the ruin and dispersion of the remnant of the nation; but the completion of the prophecy is still future, as it is finally to burn so as to leave to the unbelieving and impenitent portion of the Jews "neither root nor branch" to perpetuate their principles.—ED.

the unchangeable JEHOVAH, who, according to my promises to your fathers, have hitherto refrained from punishing you according to your deserts. 8—12. Notwithstanding my being God, and your God, ye have robbed me of my tithes and offerings, and have thereby procured a curse, which, all through the land, hath blasted your crops. But let my justly-required oblations be brought to my temple, and I will abundantly bless you with refreshing and fructifying rains, and plentiful increase; and I will restrain caterpillars, locusts, drought, mildew, and blasting, and everything else that destroys the fruits of the earth; and all the nations around shall reckon you singularly happy, and worthy to be the object of their love and admiration, on account of your peace, plenty, and holy religion. 13—15. Some of you have indeed presumptuously quarrelled at my service and providences, as if the zealous observance of my laws did profit no one; as if the most proud and daring contemners of me and my service, and the most notorious workers of wickedness, were the only, at least the most, prosperous persons in the nation. 16—18. Yet know assuredly that I exactly observe, and infallibly remember, how the upright, who fear my name among you, exhort and encourage one another to duty; and, in the day of national judgments, especially in the last judgment, I will graciously reward them as my peculiar favourites and children. Then shall the most stupid and presumptuous of you be forced to observe, and feel, the difference that my providence puts between my righteous servants and the wicked contemners of my worship and service.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Unbounded is the excellency of Jesus' person and work; and great the joys, the blessings, and the terrors, which attend his coming. His word and Spirit have the most purifying influence on his chosen. But, alas! dreadful is the destruction of those that despise him and do the work of the devil. Great are the pleasures which they enjoy that seek and find Christ in his temple and in his ordinances. And it is by justification and sanctification that all the saints are consecrated spiritual priests unto God.—JEHOVAH'S unchangeableness secures the destruction of his enemies and the preservation of his people. Yet, alas, what fearful wickedness against God and men is to be found among hypocritical professors! But wickedness most surely ruins, and robbery, either of God or men, renders men still more poor and miserable. If we withhold their dues from God, or from his poor, he will make us to pay dear for it at last. Nor can his straitening us, to punish our robbery, ever excuse it. He must be served, not with our leavings, but with the first-fruits of our increase. And if by trusting in him we be liberal to him, we shall find ourselves gainers at last. If we honour and delight in him, he will make us an honour and delight before all around us; while presumptuous sinners, after a short prosperity, shall be eternally miserable. In evil times, therefore, when vice is daring, let us be bold and active in the cause of religion. If the servants of Satan dare to harden one another in sin, why should not Christ's servants encourage one another in holiness! He will honourably mark, kindly remember, and graciously reward all our services.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1, 3. The wicked shall be terribly, suddenly, and unavoidably destroyed by God's judgments, both parents and children; while the righteous shall triumph over them. 2. Jesus, the enlightener, quickener, and comforter of his people, shall appear in the flesh, and in the gospel, to heal sinners by his word, his blood, and Spirit, of all their spiritual diseases, and to make them beautifully increase in grace and holiness. 5. John Baptist is called Elijah; because like him in his appearances, work, and success. The time of Christ's manifestation is called great, as he made great alteration in the form and ordinances of the church; and dreadful, as, by rejecting him, the Jews brought on themselves dreadful destruction. 6. The work of John Baptist was to reconcile all their differences, by directing all parties to Christ as the only Saviour, that so the ruin of their nation might be prevented.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—The fire of God's wrath makes fearful work upon obstinate sinners, when ripened for it. But great is the joy, light, comfort, vigour, and victory over enemies, which believers find in the approaches and discoveries of Christ to their souls. And lasting are the honours of his faithful ministers. If we wish for happiness, or further knowledge of his will, let us adhere strictly to what he has commanded. And never let us complain for want of light as long as we have the oracles of God. The light of divine truth continues constant in the church; but the revelations thereof, and spiritual instructions therein, were and shall be gradually increased as occasion requires. The manifestations of the great God our Saviour are indeed events of vast importance, and the happiness or misery of mankind are deeply concerned therein. But what a marvellous turn may one man, remarkably assisted of God, give to the affairs of churches or nations! And dreadful are the curses, desolations, and miseries, which await those sinners that harden themselves against the distinguished means of God's grace.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MALACHI.

Here ends the long and illustrious line of the prophets of the Old Testament, whose writings, were the idea of their inspiration entirely laid aside, would suffice to set them as far above all the philanthropists, patriots, reformers, politicians, and moralists, of ancient and modern times, as heaven is elevated above the earth. But this very inspiration is their chief characteristic; and, blessed be God, the evidences of it are so plain, that if there be any that read them in the light of history, and yet deny their inspiration, "neither would they believe though one should rise from the dead."

Still, the office of the prophets will be very imperfectly understood, if they be considered merely as inspired with a knowledge of futurity. Whoever would duly estimate their character, must view them in all lights, and fairly bring them into comparison with other men living in similar times, and placed in similar circumstances, and seeking after somewhat similar ends. They must be tried by the disinterestedness, simplicity, boldness, and honesty, with which they executed their several commissions—by the impartiality with which they delivered their instructions, and dealt their stern rebukes to all ranks and conditions of men—by their patient and willing endurance of neglect, contempt, and persecution—and by the high and holy ends after which they always laboured. That the philosophers of Greece and Rome were, generally, not the mere authors of opinions and systems, is a fact universally known. They were, almost without exception, the advocates of national reformation, in the most extensive sense. Let us compare them with the prophets. But where shall we begin? Certainly with their ideas of God, the Author and end of all things. And what do we find? A few denying the being of any God at all—a few ridiculing the system of polytheism—all, however, conforming to the idolatry of their countrymen—and the wisest of them, with his dying breath, commending an idolatrous sacrifice. And let it be especially remembered, that this conformity arose not from any respect for idolatry—for, generally, the philosophers held it in contempt—but it arose altogether from the love of popular favour, which they would not forfeit, by denouncing superstition, from a cowardly dread of popular displeasure, which they would not encounter by disturbing prejudices, and from their preference of bodily and mental ease to the trouble of attempting even a philosophical reformation. With all this, compare the conduct of the prophets. Do they conform to the idolatry of their country? No! One houseless prophet, a wanderer in the mountains—the tenant of a cave—though he believes himself the last of the worshippers of Jehovah, denounces idolatry in the very presence of his idolatrous king—bound by a higher loyalty to the King of earth and heaven. And to his noble example do all his fellow-prophets adhere. Faithful to the worship of Jehovah, the one living and true God, they omit no opportunity of denouncing idolatry, though under the penalty of imprisonment, or at the risk of life. If viewed as philanthropists, a similar superiority will be found on the side of the prophets. The philosophic philanthropist, the professed friend of man—actuated by nothing higher than a worldly motive—will always be found the advocate of a class, among whom he takes refuge from the attacks of opponents, and from whom he draws the reward either of popularity or support. The prophets of the LORD were never the advocates of any mere class. The king and the peasant, the priest and the worshipper, the learned and the ignorant, the rich and the poor, were alike the objects of their exhortations or rebukes. "Ah! sinful nation! a people laden with iniquity! a seed of evil-doers! children that are corrupters! they have forsaken the LORD.—From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it." Such is the impartial testimony which the prophets bear against the sins, not of a class, but of a nation—neither inflaming the passions of the many, nor flattering the pride of the few—but honestly and fearlessly pronouncing condemnation upon the common defections of all. But as it has ever been found impossible to separate between the religion, morality, prosperity, and happiness of man, so has it been found impossible to interdict the prophets from a continual reference to the political affairs of their country. Nor is there any view of their character in which they appear to greater advantage than when contrasted with the selfish, ambitious, vacillating, and temporizing politicians of the world. The great political maxim of the prophets was simply this—"The LORD reigneth;" and hence flowed the great practical principle—"whatever is morally wrong can never be politically right." Upon this principle Samuel addressed himself to Saul; Nathan, to David; Elijah, to Ahab; Isaiah, to Hezekiah; Jeremiah, to the king and his princes; Daniel, to Nebuchadnezzar and Darius; Ezekiel to the wicked counsellors in the city; Jonah, to the Ninevites; Micah, to Samaria and Jerusalem; Haggai, to the governor; and Malachi, to both the priests and the people. And in all these efforts, no prophet ever sought after power or aggrandizement to himself; but, as a true and genuine patriot, the reformation and glory of his country.

Viewed in strict connexion with their inspiration, one of the most striking characteristics of all the prophets is their fulness of Christ. And though Isaiah has come to be distinguished as the evangelical prophet,—and the title is, no doubt, well deserved—yet as a peculiar characteristic, exclusive of all the other prophets, its application is questionable. "The things that are written of Christ in the Psalms" cannot be exceeded in perspicuous description of his incarnation, sufferings, atonement, and glory—while truly and fully, "to him gave all the prophets witness." Among these witness-bearers, Malachi, as the last, holds a peculiar place. His spirit looked out upon the dark futurity of above four hundred years, and beheld the bright and glorious "Sun of righteousness, with healing in his wings," rising upon that world of spiritual corruption and disease by which he was surrounded; and the church of the regenerate, delivered from a body of sin and death, go forth in youthful vigour, and grow into maturity "as calves of the stall"—clean and healthful as a sacrifice to the LORD; or strong and obedient and laborious as oxen, to "break up the fallow ground," and prepare him a glorious harvest.—Mat. 11. 10, 14. Mark 1. 2. Luke 1. 17, will be found to be quotations from chap. 3. 1. & 4. 6.

THE END OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

A BRIEF OUTLINE

OF THE

HISTORY OF THE PRINCIPAL PROPHETIC KINGDOMS OF THE EAST,

FROM THE TIMES OF MALACHI, THE LAST OF THE OLD TESTAMENT PROPHETS, UNTIL THE TIMES OF MATTHEW, THE FIRST OF THE NEW TESTAMENT EVANGELISTS.

In or about the year 445, B. C. Artaxerxes Longimanus granted a commission to Nehemiah to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, and to succeed Ezra in the government of Judea. This monarch was succeeded by Xerxes II.; he, by Sogdianus; and he, by Darius Nothus in the year 423, B. C., about which time Malachi preached reformation, and prophesied to his countrymen of the coming of Messiah. How long Nehemiah continued in the government is uncertain; but it is generally believed that about the year 409 B. C., he renewed and enforced the Mosaic prohibition of marriage between Hebrews and heathens (Neh. 13. 23—31. comp. with Deut. 7. 2—4.); upon which account and occasion, one of the sons of Joiada the high priest, unwilling to part from his heathen wife, retired to Samaria, accompanied with many others who were in the same condition, and there settled under Sanballat his father-in-law, who was governor of that city and district; where, by permission of Darius, a temple was built upon mount Gerizim; and the son of Joiada, whom Josephus calls Manasseh, was constituted high priest.

With these particulars the sacred history closes, and, what follows, until we arrive at the age of the Evangelists, we must derive from Josephus, the Maccabees, Philo-Judæus, and a few scattered fragments of the Greek and Latin writers.

After the death of Nehemiah there is no evidence of any civil governor having been appointed to succeed him in Judea; but it appears to have been subjected to the satrap or governor of Syria, by whom the high priests were appointed, and, under whom they appear to have exercised both civil and ecclesiastical jurisdiction at Jerusalem.

In the year 405, B. C., Artaxerxes Mnemon ascended the Persian throne, whose Syrian satrap, Bagoses, removed Johannan the son of Joiada from the high priesthood, and appointed his brother Jeshua; whereupon a riot ensued, in which Jeshua was slain in the inner court of the temple. For this act, a heinous crime in itself, and a personal insult to the satrap, he imposed a fine of fifty drachms upon every lamb offered in sacrifice, which, if all the lambs appointed for the morning, evening, and weekly, monthly, and other fixed solemnities be included, would amount to little more than seventeen hundred pounds. But, if to these are to be added all the lambs of the passover, with those of all private sacrifices of vows, peace-offerings, &c., the amount will be much larger. This odious impost lasted, however, only during seven years; for, on the death of Artaxerxes Mnemon and the accession of Ochus, in 359 B. C., the governor who succeeded Bagoses, either remitted, or ceased to exact it. On the accession of Ochus, a considerable portion of western Asia revolted, which revolt having subdued, he entered Judea in the eighth year of his reign, besieged Jericho, took a multitude of captives—part of whom he sent into Egypt—and settled the others on the shores of the Caspian, where, it is said, their descendants continue to reside in large, and concentrated numbers, till this day; some as Jews, and others as Nestorian Christians.

Nothing farther of importance is distinctly recorded of the Jews till the reign of Darius Codomannus, and the invasion of Asia by Alexander of Macedon, in 334 B. C. Alexander had now entered upon that rapid career of conquest so distinctly foretold by Daniel, and was about to supersede the Persian, and introduce the Grecian monarchy. During his memorable siege of Tyre, the Jews, it appears, continued to furnish supplies to the garrison as fellow-subjects of Persia; but, out of regard for their oath of allegiance to Darius, refused supplies to Alexander. In revenge for this refusal, the moment Tyre was taken, Alexander marched in great wrath to Jerusalem; when Jaddua, the high priest, in consequence of a dream, went out at the head of his priests—he and they being dressed in the robes which God had directed by the hand of Moses—and accompanied by a multitude of the people dressed in white. This procession advanced to a place called Sapha, which afforded a prospect of the temple and city; and there, in fear and hope, awaited the approach of the conqueror. The moment Alexander beheld the high priest he advanced to meet him, and, instead of anger, as was expected, saluted him with deep religious veneration. To his general Parmenio, who inquired into the cause of this sudden and unexpected transition from anger to amity, Alexander replied, that, when at Dio, in Macedonia, he was anxiously pondering on his contemplated invasion of Persia, this very high priest, in the same remarkable robes, had appeared to him in a dream, and confidently promised him, in the name of his God, the conquest of Asia; wherefore his homage was not now offered personally to the priest, but to that prescient God whose accredited servant he was. Upon this, Alexander entered Jerusalem as a friend, and offered up sacrifices to Jehovah in the temple; after which Jaddua showed him the prophecies of Daniel, promising the speedy conquest of Persia to a king of Greece. These prophecies, the ardent mind of Alexander, already flushed with the signal victories of the Granicus and the Issus, was not slow to appropriate; and what before was human calculation and hope, now appeared, as it really was, divine appointment and certainty. At his departure, Alexander granted to the Jews, not only perfect religious freedom, but also exemption from taxes every seventh year; during which, according to the law of Moses, their lands must remain uncultivated. Egypt speedily submitted to the conqueror, where, having with great judgment selected the site of a city, he built Alexandria, and settled in it a large multitude of Jews with all the privileges of his Macedonian subjects.

After the death of Alexander, in 323, B. C., his empire was divided according to prophecy, into four kingdoms; between two of which, the Egyptian and Syrian, Judea was frequently a subject of sanguinary contest. In 320, B. C., Ptolemy Lagus, afterwards called Soter, took military possession of Judea, and, in revenge for the faithful adherence of the Jews to their oath of allegiance to Laomedon of Mytilene, to whom they had been assigned, he carried 100,000 of them captive into Egypt. But there, on considering their loyalty to their former rulers, he treated them with kindness, advancing them to places of power and trust; so that many of their countrymen emigrated to Egypt, and settled in it of their own free will. Judea still continued to be the object of sanguinary wars, being sometimes held by Ptolemy, king of Egypt; sometimes by Antigonus, king of Syria. Ptolemy Soter was succeeded by his son Ptolemy Philadelphus in 284, B. C. He was also a generous friend to the Jews; and in his reign, and under his patronage, was the translation of the Hebrew Scriptures—called the Septuagint—commenced and completed. This was undoubtedly one of the most important events in the history of divine revelation. It transfused the Hebrew, one of the simplest languages, into the Greek, one of the most complex and copious; it settled many important translations, on Jewish authority, previous to any controversy with Christians; it diffused, during a literary and scientific age, an extensive knowledge of the Hebrew Scriptures; gave heathen, and, consequently, unsuspected testimony to their antiquity and authenticity, and prepared the way for the preaching of the gospel, by familiarizing the Gentiles to the prophetic authorities, to which our Lord and his apostles were afterwards to appeal.

To Philadelphus succeeded Ptolemy Euergetes, to whom the Jews, it appears, paid an annual tribute of twenty talents.

Ptolemy Philopator, son to the preceding, ascended the throne of Egypt in 221, B. C., and, having defeated Antiochus the Great, came to Jerusalem, and offered many sacrifices in the temple; but, being prevented by the high priest from entering into the Holy of Holies, he departed from Jerusalem full of wrath against all the Jews; withdrew all the privileges enjoyed by those of Alexandria, and collected a multitude of them into one place to be devoured by wild beasts; when the furious animals turned upon the spectators, and destroyed a great number of them instead of their intended victims.

Ptolemy Epiphanes, an infant, succeeded his father Philopator, in 204, B. C., when Antiochus took possession of Judea, which was retaken by Scopas the Egyptian general, five years afterwards; but who, within another year, was conquered by Antiochus; when Judea peaceably submitted to his authority, and rendered him most essential services. In gratitude for these services, Antiochus ordered Jerusalem to be repaired, and restored to the Jews the privileges originally granted by Alexander.

Seleucus Philopator succeeded Antiochus in the throne of Syria; and, being severely pressed for his tribute to the Romans, and informed by Simon, the governor of the temple, that it contained immense treasures, he sent to seize them; but his messengers, when on the point of entering, were struck with a panic, and fell down, as if dead. Seleucus, after an inglorious reign of eleven years, died in 176, B. C.

Antiochus Epiphanes succeeded to the throne of Syria, and being also pressed for the Roman tribute, deposed the good high priest Onias, and sold the office to Jason, his brother, for 360 talents; and afterwards deposed him, and sold it to his brother Menelaus for 660 talents, in the year 172, B. C.,—so venal had every office become, and so shamefully had even the high priests learned "to make merchandise of God's heritage."

While Antiochus was carrying on a successful war in Egypt, a false report of his death was spread in Judea; whereupon Jason collected a thousand men, with a view to recover the high priesthood; surprised Jerusalem; drove Menelaus into the castle, and put to the most cruel deaths all whom he considered his adversaries. Antiochus, being informed of these events, and supposing the whole Jewish nation had revolted, hastened out of Egypt; and, having been told that the citizens of Jerusalem had made great rejoicings at the report of his death, he immediately assailed and took it by storm; slew 40,000; sold as many more for slaves; pillaged the temple of its treasures and furniture, to the amount of 800 talents of gold; entered the Holy of Holies; sacrificed a sow upon the altar of burnt-offerings; and caused the broth of it to be sprinkled all over the temple. He then returned to Antioch, laden with the spoils of Egypt and Judea; leaving one Philip, a very barbarous man, governor of Judea; and, continuing the infamous Menelaus in the high priesthood. After this he twice invaded Egypt; but, on the second occasion, ambassadors from Rome charged him, on the peril of forfeiting their friendship, to withdraw his troops. This memorable interference, so strongly indicating the approaching fall of the third, and the rise and supremacy of the fourth prophetic monarchy, occurred in 168, B. C.

Mad with the disappointment, while marching back through Canaan, he detached above 20,000 men from his army under Apollonius, with orders to destroy Jerusalem, put all the men to the sword, and sell all the women and children for slaves. These barbarous orders were rigorously put in execution upon a Sabbath-day, when all the people were assembled at public worship; and none were permitted to escape but such as could hide themselves in caves, or escape to the mountains by flight. After having sacked the city, fired it in several places, demolished the houses, and pulled down the city walls, the army of Apollonius built, with the ruins, a fortress upon the eminence called Acra, from which they could overlook and command the temple, and sally out and kill any who might dare to meet for worship. After the infuriated monarch had returned to Antioch, he issued a decree, commanding all his subjects to conform to the religion of the Greeks; and sent one Athenæus to initiate the Jews in the doctrines and forms of idolatrous worship, and to punish with death any who refused obedience. Athenæus, upon his arrival at Jerusalem, being supported by the apostate Jews, interdicted all sacrifices to the God of Israel, suppressed all the peculiar observances of the Jewish religion, burned every copy of the law that could be discovered, dedicated the temple to Jupiter Olympius, erected his statue upon the altar of burnt-offerings, and put every one to death who had been found to neglect or contravene the royal decree.

During the persecution raised by this decree, Mattathias, grandson of Asmonæus (from whom the family were called "the Asmonæans,") had retired from Jerusalem with his five sons, John, Simon, Judas, Eleazar, and Jonathan, and taken refuge in Modin, his native town, in the tribe of Dan. To this place Apelles, one of the king's officers, came in the course of his idolatrous mission, and applied to Mattathias to persuade the people to renounce the worship of JEHOVAH, and embrace the heathenism of the king; promising to Mattathias royal favour and great riches as the reward of his compliance. This base proposal Mattathias, who was a priest, scornfully rejected; and, in the spirit of Phinehas, slew the first Jew that ventured to approach the idolatrous altar; then, with the assistance of his sons, despatched the commissioner and his whole party; and, putting himself at the head of his family and as many Jews as he could collect, he proceeded to destroy the heathen idols and altars, and retired for safety into the mountains. Here, being joined by numbers of the faithful adherents of the divine law, and especially by those called Assidæans,* he emerged from his retreat at the head of a considerable army, with which he marched through the cities of Judah, inflicting judgment upon all apostates and persecutors, pulled down the heathen altars, and, as far as circumstances permitted, re-established the ordinances and worship of JEHOVAH, B. C. 167. The next year Mattathias died, worn out by old age and fatigue, and was succeeded by his son Judas, surnamed Maccabeus,† who vanquished, in several successive battles, the armies of Antiochus under his local governors and most renowned generals, recovered the temple and purified it, kept the feast of the dedication, and fully restored the divine worship according to the Mosaic ritual. Antiochus was at this time engaged in a war against the Persians and Armenians, who had revolted from him; and, on hearing of the success of the Jews, vowed utterly to extirpate the Jewish nation, and to make Jerusalem their common grave. But while these proud and cruel words were in his mouth, the righteous judgment of God overtook him; for he was seized with a grievous and incurable disease, of which he died, B. C. 164.

He was succeeded by his son, Antiochus Eupator, a minor, Lysias being appointed regent, who, galled by the recollection of the defeat he had sustained from Judas, formed a coalition with the Idumeans and other neighbouring nations, for the avowed purpose of extirpating the whole Jewish nation. Maccabæus being informed of this, immediately carried the war into the enemy's country, and for many years proved a terrible scourge to the Idumeans, Syrians, Arabs, and other heathen nations around him, till he was slain, B. C. 161. He was succeeded by his brother Jonathan, who, with his brother Simon, continued to manage the affairs of the Jewish nation with great prudence and success, officiating both as high priests and civil governors. Jonathan, Simon, and his sons Judas and Matthias, having been cruelly murdered, the first by the Egyptian usurper Tryphon, the others by Ptolemy; John Hyrcanus, another son of Simon, succeeded to the high priesthood and government of Judea, B. C. 135. Hyrcanus was a man of great energy; he threw off the Syrian yoke on the accession of Demetrius Nicator, B. C. 130, and, during a stormy period, continued not only to maintain his independence, but to enlarge his territory by seizing upon various places in Syria, Phœnicia, and Arabia. He also regained Shechem, destroyed the temple on mount Gerizim, and extended his conquests over the Idumeans, whom he compelled to embrace the Jewish religion, B. C. 129. He also renewed the league with the Romans, which had been first made by his father Simon, and obtained greater advantages than the nation had ever enjoyed since the days of David and Solomon. Under the conduct of his sons Aristobulus and Antigonus, he utterly destroyed Samaria, B. C. 109; and, after a prosperous administration of thirty years, left the high priesthood and sovereignty to his eldest son Aristobulus, B. C. 107. This prince was the first who, since the captivity, had assumed the crown and title of king. He was succeeded by his brother Alexander Jannæus, who subdued the Philistines, burnt Gaza their capital, B. C. 97, and compelled them to embrace the Jewish religion. He also subdued the Moabites, Ammonites, and several of the Arabian tribes; and, after a reign of twenty-seven years, died at the siege of Ragaba, B. C. 79. He was succeeded by his widow Alexandra, who continued to govern the nation with great prudence, during nine years. But she was scarcely dead till Aristobulus, joined by a large party who hated the Pharisees for their tyranny in the administration during the preceding reign, disputed for the crown and high priesthood against his elder but indolent brother Hyrcanus, and succeeded in dispossessing him, after a reign of barely three months. Under these circumstances, Aretas the king of Arabia was called to the assistance of Hyrcanus, and besieged Aristobulus in the temple; whereupon Aristobulus calling upon the assistance of the Romans, Aretas was compelled to withdraw his army, B. C. 65. Hyrcanus, however, on application to Pompey, the Roman general, received a decision in his favour; after which he took Jerusalem, expelled Aristobulus, and seated Hyrcanus in the government—though he would not permit him to assume the royal crown—and converted Judea into a Roman province, B. C. 63. Pompey, with several of his officers, also profaned the temple, by entering into the Holy of Holies; after which it has been often observed, he never prospered. Soon after, Crassus, another distinguished Roman general, when setting forth on his expedition to Parthia, pillaged the temple of above 10,000 talents of silver, B. C. 54, and was soon after cut off, with his whole army,—another warning to all sacrilegious spoliators of the temple of JEHOVAH. In the mean time, Julius Cæsar having prevailed against Pompey, Antipater, a noble and crafty Idumean, so insinuated himself into the favour of Cæsar, that he was made procurator of Judea, while Hyrcanus was reduced to the high priesthood, B. C. 47. After the death of Antipater, his son Herod, called the Great, through favour of Anthony the Roman triumvir, and through much bloodshed, obtained the regal dignity, B. C. 40, which kingly dignity was afterwards confirmed by Julius Cesar, B. C. 30. This Herod continued to maintain his power with much ability, though with the most reckless cruelty towards many of his subjects, and especially towards his own family. He built many cities, and, to render himself popular with the Jews, he almost rebuilt the temple. During his reign JESUS was born, and his horrid attempt to murder him in his infancy is recorded by the Evangelist Matthew; soon after which murderous, though abortive attempt, he died most miserably, racked in body by disease, and tormented in spirit by the recollections of his crimes. The dominions of Herod continued for a short time to be governed by his sons, after which Judea became a Roman province, was placed under the exclusive control of Roman procurators, and even the last shadow of the sceptre departed from Judah; for SHILOH was now come, "whose right it was." In the mean time a large number of the Jews continued to occupy Judea, who, being goaded into rebellion, partly by the recollection of their former greatness, partly by the oppressive exactions of the Roman governors, and partly by the stimulus of the most turbulent factions—each bent upon its own aggrandizement and the extirpation of its rival—a war ensued, which terminated in the taking of Jerusalem, the total destruction of the temple, and the final subversion of the Jewish state by Titus, the son of Vespasian, A. D. 70.

THE GOSPEL

SAINT MATTHEW.

Nothing is of more importance, nothing more deserves a plain and fully-attested account, than the birth, life, death, and resurrection of our Redeemer, on which the eternal honour of God, and the salvation of men, so marvellously depend, and in which the scope and principal predictions of the Old Testament are so manifestly fulfilled. In the four gospels now before us, these things are plainly related, fully attested, and the accounts all deeply marked, not only with the utmost candour of the writers, but with the infallible direction and infinite authority of the Holy Ghost. Matthew and Luke trace our Saviour's history from his conception in the womb to his glorious ascension. Mark and John begin their accounts with his public appearances at his baptism and as a minister of the circumcision. Matthew and Mark (who often shortens, but sometimes adds to Matthew's accounts) chiefly insist on his acts. Luke, and especially John, on the divine discourses which he delivered. But, in all, the miracles which he wrought, the instructions which he inculcated, the conduct which he uniformly pursued, and the manner in which he endured his sufferings, plainly demonstrate him the Son of God and Saviour of the world. Matthew, Mark, and Luke, seem to have written their histories of Christ about thirty years after his death, without having previously seen one another's narrative.

[The inspired title is not "Gospel," but "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ." The word "Gospel," however, beautifully expresses the import of the sacred narrative. "Gospel" is derived from the Saxon god, good, and spel, a history or message; and is a translation of the Greek Εὐαγγέλιον, from εὖ, good, and ἀγγελία, a message.

Matthew, also called Levi (Luke v. 27) was a native of Galilee. He was a "publican,"—in modern language, a collector of rates or taxes; or, perhaps (see chap. ix. 9), he might receive the more dignified title of "custom-house officer." He was one of the twelve who were early called to the service and companionship of our Lord. He preached the gospel of his kingdom during our Lord's ministry (chap. x. 3); saw him after his resurrection; received the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; and afterwards preached with much success, especially in Judea. His gospel is believed to have been written about A.D. 41, or about eight or ten years after our Lord's ascension. As he wrote immediately for the Jewish converts, it has been conjectured that he wrote originally in Hebrew, and that his Gospel was translated into Greek, about A.D. 60, while the Evangelist was yet living; and there is no doubt that in very early times there were two copies (or MS. editions) of his Gospel, the one in Hebrew, the other in Greek. Nevertheless, from Matthew's interpretation of Hebrew words into Greek (see chap. i. 23. & xxvii. 33), and the perfect accordance of his phraseology, in such cases, with that of the other Evangelists, who unquestionably wrote in Greek (comp. Mark v. 41. & xv. 22, 34. John i. 38), the legitimate conclusion seems to be, that Matthew, as well as the other Evangelists, originally wrote in the Greek tongue. That he may have given an edition in Hebrew, is, no doubt, possible; but the existence of such a Hebrew original rests upon no authority of MSS., can never rise beyond the level of conjecture, and is, therefore, inadmissible as an item in legitimate Scripture criticism.—Ed.]

THE book of the generation* of Jesus Christ, the son of David,† the son of Abraham.

2 Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren,‡

3 And Judas§ begat Phares and Zara of Thamar,§ and Phares begat Esrom, and Esrom begat Aram,

4 And Aram begat Aminadab, and Aminadab begat Naasson, and Naasson begat Salmon,

5 And Salmon begat Booz of Rachab, and Booz begat Obed of Ruth, and Obed begat Jesse,

6 And Jesse begat David the king, and David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias,

7 And Solomon begat Roboam, and Roboam begat Abia, and Abia begat Asa,

8 And Asa begat Josaphat, and Josaphat begat Joram, and Joram begat Ozias,

9 And Ozias begat Joatham, and Joatham begat Achaz, and Achaz begat Ezekias,

10 And Ezekias begat Manasses, and Manasses begat Amon, and Amon begat Josias,

15 And Eliud begat Eleazar, and Eleazar begat Matthan, and Matthan begat Jacob,

16 And Jacob begat [b] Joseph* the husband of Mary, of [c] whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

§ A considerable difference in the spelling of several names will be observed—e. g. Judas is spelled Judah; Phares, Pharez, Gen. 46. 12; Thamar, Tamar, Gen. 38. 6; Esrom, Hezrom, Gen. 46. 12, &c. &c. This variety presents to the attentive reader of the scriptures no serious inconvenience. It would, however, have been well had the translators studied uniformity.—Ed.

‖ Only four women, out of forty-two, are mentioned in this register — Thamar, Rahab, Ruth, and Bathsheba, against each of whom there lies some charge, either of personal sin, heathenism, or poverty. These facts are, most probably, thus educed to obviate the cavils of the Jews against the poverty of our Lord's mother, and, historically, to show that he came to save both Jew and Gentile, guilty, not merely of original, but of the deepest actual transgression.—Ed.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—Chap. I. Ver. 1—17. In this genealogy of Christ, by his supposed father, we have four women inserted, three of them Gentiles; and Bathsheba, an adulteress; to discover him as the Saviour of the Gentiles and of the greatest sinners. The three immediate descendants of Joram by Athaliah are omitted, to mark the curse of God upon unhallowed marriages to the third and fourth generation. 18, 19. Mary's espousal to Joseph prevented the imputation of bastardy to her son, and secured her an assistant to bring him up.—Joseph was afraid of marrying an unchaste woman on the one hand; or, on the other, of publicly exposing to be stoned one whom he hoped might be innocent.

NOW, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men* from the east to Jerusalem,

2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews?† for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

3 ¶ When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4 And when he had gathered all the chief priests‡ and scribes§ of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

6 And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

7 Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9 ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

Year of the World 4000, and 4th before our common account, called Anno Domini.

* Wise men.—Magi. These were originally Persian philosophers and priests; but the name was applied to such men of other countries as applied themselves to the study of astronomy, theology, &c. Daniel was set over the Babylonian college of the Magi, Dan. 5. 11, wherebly we may learn the purity of their scientific pursuits and original religious principles. These visitants were probably Jews; but from what country east of Jerusalem does not appear.—Ed.

† Tacitus and Suetonius testify that, throughout the whole east there was, about this time, a general expectation of the birth of a king in Judea, who should reign over the whole world. This opinion would naturally arise from the prophecies concerning the birth of Christ, which, by means of the Septuagint translation, and the dispersion of the Jews, had now been extensively diffused through all that had once been the Greek, and now was, the Roman empire.—Ed.

‡ Chief priests.—The heads of families in the twenty-four courses (1 Chr. 24. 6), and all that were members of the sanhedrim, or Jewish senate. Mat. 26. 3. John 18. 3.—Ed.

§ Scribes.—Literally writers, because they were chiefly employed in writing copies of the law, and, because of their familiarity with it, in giving interpretations. From 1 Chr. 24. 6; 2 Chr. 34. 13; Ezra 7. 11, 12, it is evident that the scribes were exclusively of the tribe of Levi.—Ed.

[a] Luke 2. 10, 11. Deut. 32. 43. Ps. xcvi—c. & 105. 3.
[b] Ps. 2. 12. & 22. 29. & 45. 11. & 72. 17. John 5. 23. ch. 14. 23.

* Treasures.—Caskets or other receptacles, used by travellers. The special mention of "opening" seems to intimate that they were carefully sealed; a precaution very necessary for preserving the fragrance of the frankincense and myrrh.—Ed.

[c] Or, offered. Ps. 72. 10—15. Is. 60. 6. Gen. 43. 11, 25. 1 Sam. 9. 7, 8. & 10. 27. 1 Kin. 10. 2. Prov. 18. 16.
[d] Ex. 1. 17. Acts 4. 19. & 5. 29.
[e] Num. 12. 6. ch. 1. 20. Heb. 1. 1.
[f] Hos. 11. 1. Rev. 12. 4. ch. 10. 23.
[g] Num. 24. 8. Hos. 11. 1.
† This prophecy has been interpreted as a mere accommodation of the words of Hosea to our Lord. But the doctrine of accommodation is such that, if once admitted, it must introduce a constant uncertainty of interpretation, unless the accommodation be expressly declared. Here there is no such intimation. The words were, therefore, originally intended for Christ, and were never fulfilled, except in type and shadow, till Christ the Son of God, was literally "called out of Egypt."—Ed.
[h] Prov. 27. 3. Dan. 3. 13.
[i] Prov. 1. 16. & 20. 21. & 21. 30. Is. 59. 7. ch. 10. 34. John 15. 18. Thus the time of Christ's birth was publicly marked; and none left to rival his honours.
‡ Josephus does not specially mention the massacre, but most evidently alludes to it in these words: — "Many slaughters followed the prediction of a new king."—Antiq. B. 17, c. 17. Coasts, villages around Bethlehem.—Ed.
[k] Jer. 31. 15. & 40. 1. & 41. 5. Gen. 35. 19. Jos. 18. 21, 28. The 3d year before the account called Anno Domini.
§ Rachel weeping.—Rachel, neither personal—for she was dead; nor figurative—for that would be forced; but Rachel represented by her descendants—even as Levi is said to have "paid tithes in Abraham," Heb. 7. 9, 10. The prophecy was begun in the type (Jer. 40. 1), and now completed in the antitype.—Ed.
[l] Ch. 1. 20. ver. 13. Ps. 22. 7, 8. & 91. 11, 12. Prov. 3. 5, 6. L. 4. 10.
‖ They are dead.—Herod, and, most probably, his cruel son, Antipater, who died five days before his merciless father.—Ed.
* Who was very furious and cruel.
† Archelaus reigned as ethnarch, or governor, and appears to have inherited his father's cruel disposition.—Ed.
[m] Ps. 46. 1. & 82. 8. & 121. 3. & 18. 14. 1 Sam. 2. 9. John 7. 41, 42, 52.
‡ Galilee.—An obscure province in the north of the Holy Land, where Antipas, another son of Herod, was governor.—Ed.

10 When they saw the star, they [a] rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and [b] worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures,* they [c] presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, [d] they departed into their own country another way.

13 ¶ And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord [e] appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, [f] Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt;

15 And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, [g] Out of Egypt have I called my son.†

16 ¶ Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was [h] exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and [i] slew all the children‡ that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by [k] Jeremy the prophet, saying,

18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping§ for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

19 ¶ But when Herod was dead, [l] behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead‖ which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when he heard that *Archelaus† did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, [m] being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee;‡

Reflections upon Chap. I.—Though long delays of God's favours may much exercise our patience, they do not in the least weaken his promises. Full and convincing is the evidence that our Jesus is the true Messiah, the Saviour of Jews and Gentiles, males and females, of sinners, even the chief. Marvellous was the providence of God, that he should prepare him his holy manhood, through and from such abominable persons and acts. But strange alterations take place in the temporal condition and moral qualities of families in a few generations. How miraculous was our Saviour's conception and birth, and how honourably testified! With great wisdom and prudence God conducted every circumstance thereof, to his honour, and to the happiness of those concerned. Yet they, who receive remarkable honours from God, may expect remarkable trials; but if we keep a good conscience, God will maintain, or in due time vindicate, our honour. It is very comely when piety towards God, fidelity towards man, and tenderness of our reputation go together. And in suspicious cases we should always hope the best, and depend upon God for such solution of our doubts as may enable us to proceed with freedom and comfort. But nothing can more enliven a perplexed mind than discoveries of Jesus Christ as the great God-man, who effectually saves from sin and wrath.

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a [a]Nazarene.

CHAPTER III.

(1) John the Baptist, his office, manner of life, and baptism: 1—6. (2) He sharply reproves the Pharisees: 7—12. (3) Christ is baptized by him in Jordan: 13—17.

IN those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea,

2 And saying, Repent[*] ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey.

5 ¶ Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan,

6 And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.[†]

7 ¶ But when he saw many of the Pharisees[‡] and Sadducees[§] come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth therefore fruits [‖]meet for repentance.

9 And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: [a]therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

A. M. cir. 4031. A. D. cir. 27.

[*] The word here translated repent, is not the word used describing Judas, Mat. 27. 3. That word merely signifies, to be distressed when a thing is done. The word used by John signifies, to think after an action, so as to change the mind, and amend.—Ed.

[†] The statement in ver. 5, 6, contains a curious, succinct, and edifying notice of a great religious revival, such as God frequently bestows upon his church. That much proceeded from mere excitement, much from fashion, much from hypocrisy and base worldly feelings or motives, cannot be doubted. Still, in the midst of all that is thus transient or unreal, there is much that is real and abiding; and the work of God is not to be neglected because the world, or the flesh, or the devil, may attempt to disgrace the original by base and spurious imitations.—Ed.

[‡] Pharisees.—So called from a Hebrew word that signifies to separate; because they separated themselves by superior strictness of religious profession.—Ed.

[§] Sadducees.—A Jewish sect, said to derive their name from one Sadoc, who denied spiritual existence, and a future state of rewards or punishments.—Ed.

11 [b]I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:[*]

12 [c]Whose fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff[†] with unquenchable fire.

13 ¶ [d]Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

14 But John forbade him, saying, [e]I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for [f]thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness.[‡] Then he suffered him.

16 And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove,[§] and lighting upon him:

17 And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

THEN was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness, to be [a]tempted of the devil.

[a] Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 18. Gen. 3. 15. John 14. 30.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—How deep was the debasement, and early the sufferings, of our Redeemer! and yet attended with the honours of an extraordinary star directing to him; the devout visit of the wise men; and the repeated directions of God concerning him. How early the Gentiles begin their gathering to Shiloh! and often they, who live farthest from the means of grace, are first converted. Even in extraordinary appearances of nature, we ought to inquire after God's mind and will: and, if we be earnestly desirous to know and find Christ, neither pains nor perils will hinder us. Nothing produces so great a hatred of Christ and his kingdom as ignorance of their nature and design. And it is awful when repeated directions concerning him do but make men the more deceitful and desperately murderous. Adorable is the providence of God, which disappoints the devices of his crafty, powerful, and cruel enemies, and turns them into means or occasions of verifying his predictions and executing his purposes. He takes delight to encourage and direct young converts, who are ready humbly to give to Jesus themselves and all that they have. And the more nearly any are connected with Christ, the more divine protection and direction they may expect; and the more readily and cheerfully must God be obeyed. Into what monsters of wickedness has sin transformed some men! And wicked rulers will never want wicked instruments to act by. Children, life, lands, and all other created enjoyments, are certain sorrows, but very uncertain comforts. Let my care be to have God as my portion, and to live with him as my Father and companion, go where I will!

Chap. III.—Ver. 2. The kingdom of heaven often denotes the gospel dispensation; but sometimes the heavenly glory, or the work of grace in the heart. 7—10. Ye hypocritical Pharisees and irreligious Sadducees, who, like your father the devil, are full of malignant enmity to all real goodness, who hath instigated you to apply for my baptism, as a mean of escaping the temporal and eternal judgments to which ye are so exposed? Bring forth therefore good works in heart and life, suitable to the nature and evidential of the sincerity of your repentance, or else my baptism will do you no service. Imagine not that your not being profane Gentiles, but descendants of Abraham, will secure you from God's vengeance: for he will rather raise up a seed of believing and obedient followers of Abraham out of these Gentile soldiers, or even these stones, than save any of you who persist in your sins. God is now giving you the last trial. If ye reject the Messiah and his gospel offers, which shall soon be presented to you, his judgments, which are now waiting, shall quickly destroy your nation, and cast you into temporal and eternal miseries, on account of your wickedness. 11, 12. By my baptism, I am but attempting to prepare you for the infinitely more worthy Messiah, who will pour out upon you his Holy Spirit in a miraculous manner, and whose operations will be enlightening, warming, powerful, and purifying. He, by his infinite knowledge, by his gospel doctrines, and by his gracious and awful providences, will purify his Jewish church, and separate the precious from the vile; admitting every sincere believer into his gospel church and heavenly mansions, and casting out unbelievers, as light and vain, worthless and unprofitable, into lasting miseries on earth, and eternal torments in hell.

Reflections upon Chap. III.—No place on earth can shut us out from the visits of divine grace. And often the sweetest intercourse with God is enjoyed when we are most withdrawn from the world. Ministers should accommodate themselves to the circumstances in which God places them. They, who call others to self-denial, mourning for sin, and mortification of it, must show themselves as examples: and they who have experienced spiritual pleasures, must look upon carnal delights and enjoyments with a holy indifference. Thorough convictions of the horrible nature of sin, and of the vanity of earthly things, are good preparations for readily receiving the gospel. Even ministers and ordinances are but empty things without Christ. But the faithful work of ministers, and the almighty influences of God, are necessary to gain him admission into men's hearts. And it is the promises and power of the gospel which chiefly induce men to sincere grief for their sins. Yet, alas! multitudes often seem fond of hearing the gospel, while few really believe it: and most men are ready to rest in external professions or privileges, without any experience of the power of religion. Indispensable is the necessity of true repentance, marked by a holy life, under the influence of the Holy Ghost; and happy for ever are they who are once partakers of this grace! But awfully miserable are they who remain hypocritical and unfruitful hearers! Their day of grace soon comes to an end, when they shall be separated from the godly, and cast into endless destruction. God puts great honours upon such as, through a real sense of their own unworthiness, seek to shun it.—But what delight Jesus took to fulfil all righteousness, required from him as our Surety, and to honour all his Father's institutions! And great was the delight of Jehovah and his Spirit to qualify him for, and bear witness to, his work. May my soul therefore entertain the most exalted and endearing thoughts of him, as the Son of God and my Saviour, as the Father's beloved, in whom I am accepted to eternal life.

2 And when he had [b] fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward [c] an hungered.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, [d] If thou be the Son of God,* command that these stones be made bread.

4 But he answered and said, [e] It is written, [f] Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

5 [g] Then the devil taketh him up† into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down; for it is written, [h] He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, [i] Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

8 [k] Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and showeth‡ him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;

9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, [l] Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, [m] Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11 [n] Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

12 ¶ Now, when Jesus had heard that John was § cast into prison, he departed into Galilee;

13 [o] And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum,‖ which is upon the sea-coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim:

14 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

15 [p] The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles;

16 The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up.

17 ¶ [q] From that time* Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Reflections upon Chap. IV.—Astonishing is the love of our Redeemer, who so wrestled in prayer, so struggled with the temptations of Satan, so laboured in teaching and healing sinners of mankind,—all for the sake of his enemies, and that he might succour them that are tempted! It is necessary that preachers be fitted for their work by remarkable endowments of the Holy Ghost, solemn prayers and fasting, and even by experience of manifold temptations. And never is Satan more ready to harass souls, than immediately after solemn fellowship with God, or while employed in extraordinary devotion. He leaves no circumstance unimproved for his purpose: and nothing is too horrid, atheistical, unbelieving, murderous, or idolatrous, for him to insist on; nor any worldly advantages too great for him to promise. If therefore we hope to defeat him, we must undertake it, not by carnal reasoning, but by a believing use of the oracles of God answerable to his temptations. And God and his angels take pleasure to honour those who faithfully resist Satan. In vain do sinners attempt to stop the gospel of Christ. If one preacher be laid aside by death or imprisonment, God can raise up another more excellent: and if some thrust the gospel from them, he will make others gladly receive it. —Infinite is the excellency and usefulness of our Redeemer in publishing the gospel; in enlightening the world by his truth; in healing diseases unnumbered of soul and body; in dispossessing devils, and raising up ministers to win sinners to himself. No natural unfitness can hinder his qualifications, and no obstinacy can withstand his call. May the grace of his kingdom induce multitudes to repentance, and his instructions make many light in the Lord! May his grace afford us pastors according to his own heart, by whose ministrations many may be converted to himself!

Chap. V.—Ver. 3. Truly happy they are, and shall be, who are sensible of their own ignorance, sinfulness, and insufficiency, and depend on God's free grace for instruction, forgiveness, and supply; and whose hearts are so weaned from the riches, honours, and pleasures of this life, that they readily submit to God's disposals, and part with everything temporal for the gospel's sake;—for they have a full and everlasting interest in all the riches and honours of the kingdom of grace here, and of the kingdom of glory hereafter. 4. Happy are they who evangelically mourn under a deep sense of their own sinfulness of heart and life, and the miseries to which they are thereby exposed, and for the dishonour done to God by others, or the miseries inflicted on them;—for they shall, in due season, be revived by the comforts of the Holy Ghost, and shall at last enter into the full and everlasting joy of their Lord. 5. Happy are they who, sensible of their own unworthiness, and of God's great goodness, readily submit to his will in all things, without murmuring, and who are gentle and patient to their fellow-creatures, hardly provoked

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

7 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

8 Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

9 Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God.

10 Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

11 Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you [*] falsely for my sake.

12 Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

13 ¶ Ye are the salt[†] of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

14 Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.

15 Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

16 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

17 ¶ Think not that I am come to destroy[‡] the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle[*] shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.[†]

19 [*] Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments,[‡] and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least[§] in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be [‖]called great in the kingdom of heaven.

20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness[‖] shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

21 ¶ Ye have heard that it was said [*] by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment:

22 But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell-fire.

23 Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee;[†]

24 Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

[†] Salt is a compound body, whether natural or artificial. Its general character is acidity, and a preservative power when combined with animal substances. But if, by any chemical agency, one or more of its constituents be separated from the others, the part remaining may retain much of the appearance of the original compound, and yet have lost its most remarkable and valuable properties. Maundrel declares that when, in the valley of Jordan, near Gebul, he broke a piece that had been exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it retained the sparkling appearance of the salt, it had totally lost its savour, in conformity to our Lord's description.—Note. The disciples were commissioned by the salt of truth, by the example of self-denial, purity of life, and piety, to counteract the corruption of falsehood, covetousness, licentiousness, forgetfulness of God, and idolatry. But if the salt (Christians themselves) have lost its savour, wherewith shall it (the salt itself) be salted?—Ed.

[‡] Neither to abrogate nor repeal the moral law, to which it is evident he refers, for he proceeds to vindicate it from the false glosses of the scribes and Pharisees. But neither did he formally abrogate or repeal the ceremonial law, though it be also fulfilled. The ceremonial law ceased among the Jews when Providence rendered its observances impossible.—Upon the gentiles it was never binding. See Acts 21. 20—25. & 15. 1, 23—29.—Ed.

[‖] Your righteousness, can never mean personal righteousness in an acknowledged sinner, for the two ideas are utterly incompatible. (See Rom. 3. 10.) There is no righteousness but that of God through faith, Rom. 3. 22.—This righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees—1. In its Origin and Author—God in Christ.—2. In its perfection — having the excellency of God's work in the flesh.—3. In its efficacy upon the conscience, to purge it; and upon the heart, to write the law on it, Heb. 9. 14. & 8. 10—12.—Ed.

and easily appeased: for they, with God's friendship, and with inward satisfaction in their own minds, shall enjoy whatever of the good things of this world are most for their real advantage, and shall have their happy share in the new heavens and the new earth. 6. Happy are they who highly value, and earnestly desire and apply, my imputed righteousness for their justification, and my word and Spirit for the sanctification of their nature; for their desires shall be granted, and their souls eternally filled with all possible graces and comforts. 7. Happy are they who, from an unfeigned faith in God's special mercy to themselves, are tender-hearted towards others, readily forbearing severities, forgiving injuries, pitying and relieving the distressed; for God, in his unbounded kindness, will reward them with mercies inexpressibly more valuable. 8. Happy are they, whose religion is pure and undefiled, whose hearts are purified by faith, their consciences washed in the blood of Jesus from guilt, their natures and tempers rendered holy by his Spirit, and who allow themselves in no hypocrisy, pride, or sensuality; for they shall enjoy delightful fellowship with God here, and the full and immediate vision and enjoyment of him for ever. 9. Happy, and that eternally, shall they be, who, being reconciled to God through Christ, have his peace filling their hearts, and rendering them earnestly diligent to maintain and promote peace in every society they are connected with, as far as they can, in a consistence with truth and holiness; for this manifests them to be the children of God, who shall be openly and eternally owned as such, and enjoy all the privileges that belong to the adoption of sons. 10—12. Happy are they who, with faith and patience, undergo the severest persecutions for their adherence to me, my truths and ways; for they are interested in, and shall enjoy, all the blessings of the gospel and of the heavenly state.—Do ye therefore, my disciples, reckon it a real happiness, and rejoice and glory in it, if, while ye live soberly, righteously, and godly, ye be reproached and persecuted for preaching my gospel, and following my example in holiness; for God will graciously reward you, and make even your troubles work for you an exceeding and eternal weight of glory: and know, for your encouragement, that in this path of persecution all the ancient prophets, those favourites of heaven, travelled to, and obtained, their heavenly, their distinguished rewards. 13. Ye are appointed, by your instructions and example, to spread abroad the savour of my knowledge wherever ye go, to reform the world, and preserve it from utter corruption and ruin. If therefore your hearts be gracious, your doctrines sound, and your lives exemplary, ye will be the blessed means of purging out corruptions in faith and manners, and of making multitudes of converts acceptable to God and useful to man. But if ye degenerate into unfaithful, cold, and carnal tempers, corrupt notions, and licentious lives, ye will become the most unprofitable, worthless, and contemptible of men. 14—16. Ye are appointed, in the most public manner, to spread abroad the light of my gospel in a dark world, and, by your instructions and example, to direct sinners into the way of salvation. Take care, therefore, that your doctrine and conversation shine with such lustre and purity before all men wherever ye go, that, by means thereof, they, under the influence of divine grace, may be brought to esteem, acknowledge, and admire the great excellency of real religion, as displayed in you, and to embrace and practise it themselves, to the glory of your heavenly Father. 17, 18. Think not that I am come to abrogate the moral law, or to set aside the writings of the Old Testament, or to teach anything contrary thereto. No, my great aim and work is to confirm them. I am come to explain, enforce, and establish the moral law, as an everlasting rule of righteousness, and to vindicate it from the injurious glosses which have been put upon it. I am come to fulfil all its precepts and its penalty, as a broken covenant, in the room of elect sinners; and, in so doing, to answer all the types, accomplish the prophecies and promises, and to fill up all the defects of the Old Testament dispensation. For I assure you, in the most solemn manner, that no part of the typical ceremonies, or of the Old Testament predictions, shall be left unfulfilled, and no obligation of the moral law shall ever be set aside. And as I myself will persevere in the most exact obedience till the last moment of my humbled life, so will I excite and enable my followers to persevere in their obedience till the end of the world. 19. Whoever therefore shall wilfully set aside and transgress even the least of these moral commands, or teach or encourage others to do so, shall be held unworthy to be a subject, and much more an officer, in the gospel church, or of admission into the heavenly glory; and he who, from a principle of faith and love, shall conscientiously respect all these commandments, and teach and encourage others to do so, shall be highly honoured among my subjects and servants. 20. I assure you that, unless ye be interested in my complete fulfilment of the law in your stead, and unless your personal conformity to the law be more excellent, spiritual, and extensive, than that of the highest Pharisaical pretenders to holiness, ye can never be admitted to the blessings of the kingdom of grace here, or of glory hereafter. 21, 22. For, to give you some specimens of their defective interpretations and observances of the moral law, they pretend that there is no disobedience to the ancient command prohibiting murder, and adjudging murderers to death, but in wilfully and unjustly taking away a man's life. But such is the spirituality and extent of this commandment, that whosoever indulges rash, wrathful, and causeless anger, or a malicious and revengeful temper, is, in God's account, guilty of murder in his heart, and thereby exposed to his righteous judgment; and whoever in pride and passion revile their neighbours, as worthless empty wretches, or as profane reprobate brands of hell, involve themselves in still deeper guilt, and ought to be punished by men, but shall not escape the far more severe and everlasting vengeance of God. 23, 24. Never therefore presume to perform any act of religious worship, or to hope for its acceptance with God, while ye indulge yourselves in causeless and sinful anger, or in evil speaking; but if ye have offended a brother, first humbly confess your fault, ask his pardon, and satisfy him for the wrong you have done him, and then present your devotions to God, in hopes of forgiveness and acceptance. 25, 26. And as both God and your brother are jointly offended, without delay embrace the reconciliation which God offers you in his promises, and be reconciled to your offended brother while ye are in the way of mercy, lest death cut you off in your sins, and drag you to the tribunal of God, that you may be condemned and cast into hell, from whence ye can never be released, since the satisfaction of divine justice for your sins can never be there completed. 27—30. The scribes and Pharisees pretend that nothing else is prohibited by the ancient commandment respecting adultery, but a man's actually lying with a woman who is not his wife. But I assure you that, according to the mind of God in this precept, every man who looks upon any woman with unchaste desires after her, and contrives how to accomplish them, is guilty of adultery in his heart, though he has not had opportunity to commit it in fact: and therefore, if this, or any other sin, should be ever so dear, apparently pleasant, or profitable to you, and though it should require great self-denial, and be very painful for you to part with it; yet, as the loving, harbouring, or practising it, would defile and endanger your soul, offend God, and expose you to his everlasting wrath, mortify, detest, and abhor it without delay: it is better to suffer the greatest uneasiness and temporal loss in so doing, than that your whole man should be eternally tormented in hell on account of your indulging and practising it. 33—37. Your scribes and Pharisees pretend, that the ancient command relative to swearing prohibits only the breach of such oaths as are sworn by God himself, or the swearing by his name in ordinary conversation: but I assure you, that it prohibits the swearing by any creature, and the violation of such oaths as are sworn by them, since God is represented in, and connected with, every creature ye can swear by. Do not therefore swear at all by creatures, or in common conversation, but merely affirm or deny things as they really are: for all other means to gain credit to what you say, in the common affairs of life, proceed from the devil and your own sinful habits or lusts, and imply that yourselves are unworthy to be believed, or that your hearers are unreasonably incredulous. 38—42. The ancient law prescribed only for the direction of magistrates, in the retaliation of injuries done by their subjects one to another, is understood, by your scribes and Pharisees, as if it warranted private persons to indulge a malicious temper, and revenge themselves in lawsuits or otherwise: but I admonish and charge you, never to avenge yourselves by rendering evil for evil; and, in lesser matters, bear even repeated affronts and injuries with patience, rather than retaliate in a contentious, revengeful, and furious manner;—and, as far as ye can, without embarrassing your own worldly circumstances, be always ready, by giving or lending, to relieve the necessities of others, especially if they humbly apply to you for help. 43—48. Your scribes and Pharisees have further pretended, that the ancient law, of loving your neighbours, warrants you to hate all those who are not of your kindred and religion; but though ye ought never to approve the wickedness of your enemies, I solemnly charge you to love their persons, as partakers of the same human nature with yourselves, speak good of them as far as ye justly can, and heartily wish them all temporal and eternal happiness; take all opportunities of doing good to them, and earnestly pray for their conversion and salvation, who hate, curse, despitefully use, and persecute you, that ye may appear the genuine children of that God, and perfectly conformed to his image, who is so graciously liberal of his providential favours, even to his wicked and unreasonable enemies of mankind; for if ye only love them who are affectionate and kind to you, or be friendly to those of your own kindred, religion, or party, what peculiar excellency is in that conduct, or what gracious reward can ye expect for it? It is no more than even the worst of men think themselves obliged to, by the common ties of gratitude, nature, or society. Study therefore to have your principles and behaviour greatly superior to all this, and rising to the highest resemblance of your heavenly Father, whose tender mercies are over all his works, in the displays of his goodness and all his other moral perfections.

Reflections upon Chap. V.—Carnal men have very mistaken views of real happiness: it is vain to expect it without being made truly holy. TAKE heed that ye do not your [a] alms before men, to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward [*] of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore, when thou doest thine alms, [b] do not sound a trumpet [†] before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth;

4 [c] That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.

5 ¶ And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites [‡] are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. [§]

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. [‖]

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: [d] for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.

† As there is no rabbinical record of the custom of sounding a trumpet before almsgivers, this expression has been generally interpreted as a metaphorical expression for ostentation. This supposition, however, seems inconsistent with our Lord's usual graphic delineation of existing manners. And that a people who "loved to pray in the corners of the streets, that they might be seen of men" (ver. 5), should also court a like publicity for their almsdeeds, is perfectly consistent with that uniformity that generally prevails in human character.—Ed.

encourage their holy desires, faith and hope, meekness and patience, humility, love, self-denial, peace, and joy! And marvellous is their happiness in the full enjoyment of God. Delightful are the hints of gospel grace, given by our Saviour, which were to be more clearly manifested after his ascension to heaven. And great glory to God, honour to themselves, and profit to their neighbours, do professors, and especially ministers, bring forth when they act in due character. How indispensable and broad, how holy, just, and good, are all the commandments and oracles of God! And great is his grace, and excellent his righteousness, who magnified and made them honourable in the room of guilty men. It is highly necessary to be clothed with his righteousness, endowed with his grace, and conformed to his pattern, in every good word or work. But base is their temper, criminal their conduct, and fearful their danger, who attempt to relax the obligation, or contract the obedience of God's law. And it is impossible to have fellowship with him, or have our services accepted by him, while we indulge hatred of brethren, or any other sinful lust. Yea, great reverence of God, and his name and ordinances; great chastity and purity of heart and life; universal mortification of indwelling lusts, and dominion over our appetites and passions; a sacred guard upon our speech; and forbearance under injuries; a diffusive beneficence to mankind, and imitation of our heavenly Father; are necessary to manifest us Christians indeed! Are these, my soul, the laws of the great God my Saviour, and I so unlike them? Are these the laws by which I shall quickly be judged, and do I so little regard them? Let these considerations quicken my soul, and animate me to more serious attention and exact conformity.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 7, 8. Though in prayer ye may very properly repeat some important and affecting terms to express the fervent requests of your hearts, and, on some occasions, enlarge your supplications or thanksgivings; yet never multiply words merely to spin out your prayers, or as if ye were praying to heathen idols, which are inattentive, unable, or unwilling to understand or answer your requests; for your heavenly Father, who loves you, and takes pleasure in blessing you, is thoroughly acquainted with all your wants and desires. 9—13. Therefore draw near to him with reverence and confidence, as children to a Father, infinitely kind and exalted, able and ready to help you and others around you, and acknowledge your own unworthiness, weakness, sinfulness, wants, and dangers; entreat and plead that he would, by his grace, enable you and others to glorify him in all things whereby he makes himself known: and that he would dispose all things in the church and world to his own glory; that Satan's dominion in the world and the hearts of men may be destroyed, and the kingdom of grace set up in the gospel dispensation, and daily advanced, by the bringing of multitudes into the church, and into a state of real fellowship with Christ, preserving them therein, and increasing their knowledge, comfort, and holiness, till at length they be admitted to an eternal triumph in the kingdom of glory: that, by his grace, ye and others may be enabled to know, obey, and submit to his will in all things, as glorified saints and holy angels do in heaven: and that of his free gift, even in the most perilous times, ye may receive a competent portion of the good things of this life, and his blessing with them; and that, for Christ's sake, he may freely pardon all your sins of omission and commission in heart and life, by which ye have forfeited all enjoyments, and owe a debt of satisfaction to his injured law and justice, especially as his mercy is so infinitely superior to yours, whom, by his grace, he has enabled from the heart to forgive the injuries done to you: and that he would either keep you from being tempted to sin, or support and deliver you when ye are tempted. And take all your encouragement in prayer from God's own perfections, characters, and promises; and in all your prayers praise him for what he is, what he has done, is doing, or will do: and let both prayers and praises be offered up with earnest desire, and in full assurance of being acceptably regarded. 14, 15. And remember that your hearty forgiving of injuries done you, is of inexpressible importance in your supplications; for if God's grace enable you to do this, it is a certain evidence of your being his children, whose iniquities he is engaged, by covenant and promise, to pardon: but if ye indulge an implacable and revengeful temper, which makes you averse to forgive injuries done against you, your prayers for pardon are a contradiction to the design of the gospel, and a mocking of God, and ye in vain expect that he will be merciful in pardoning your infinitely greater provocations against himself. 16—18. When ye keep a private fast, on a religious account, never affect to make it known to the world around you, by demure looks, disfigured faces, or slovenly airs, that ye may be extolled as wonderfully pious and mortified men. But, instead thereof, conceal your work as much as ye can from the world, and let it lie between God and your soul, in great searchings of heart, ingenuous confessions of sin, deep contrition and humiliation for it, and in serious meditation and solemn prayer. Then shall your all-seeing heavenly Father publicly own and bless you in this world and in that which is to come. 19—24. Never let your chief care and pains be exerted in getting and hoarding up earthly treasures, which are so perishing and apt to be lost, or even to endanger your lives; but chiefly esteem and labour to enjoy the favour of God, the graces of his Spirit, and the complete enjoyment of him hereafter, which are heavenly treasures that can neither perish nor be taken from you. For whatever you reckon your chief treasure will command your thoughts and affections, aims and pursuits; and ye will be either earthly or heavenly minded, and all your happiness either mean and perishing, or great and everlasting, according as earthly or heavenly things are the chief good in your account. Ye have therefore great need of a true spiritual judgment in making your choice; for if, the heart being weaned from this world, your mind has a right and clear discerning of the excellency of spiritual things, all the other faculties of your soul will be well directed in their pursuits after them. But if, through an inordinate affection to the world, your mind be blind or biassed with respect to spiritual things, the other faculties of your soul will, to your inexpressible hurt, be misguided and perverted by it: and remember, that as no man can, at one and the same time, heartily, truly, and perseveringly serve two masters of contrary tempers, commands, and interests, no more can your hearts and lives be at once devoted to the service of God and seeking after the riches, gains, and treasures of this world. 25—30. Never be anxiously or distrustfully careful about the necessaries or conveniences of this present life; but, in the way of dutiful diligence in your callings, quietly depend upon God for what he, in his infinite wisdom, sees best for you: for if, without your care, he gave you your life and being, which are more valuable, why not trust him for whatever is necessary to support them in his service? Will your heavenly Father, who, without their anxious care or labour, provides necessary food for the fowls of the air, ever neglect to provide for you, his dear children and redeemed servants? And when all your anxious care cannot add to the height of your body, or the length of your life, why should ye not entirely rely on the all-giving and all-governing providence of God to nourish and preserve them! And with respect to your raiment, if God so protect and gloriously adorn the flowers of the field, which are so quickly to wither and be burnt, what a shameful weakness of faith it betrays in you to doubt of his providing proper raiment for you, who are made and redeemed for infinitely more noble and lasting purposes? 31—34. Never therefore, as if ye were mere heathens, be distracted and torn to pieces with anxious cares about your food, raiment, or other temporal enjoyments; but quietly and firmly depend on your heavenly Father, who knows your necessities, and has given you his promises that he will supply you with everything truly good and useful. And let it be your first and principal concern, to mind what pertains to the glory of God and the eternal salvation of your own souls, as set before you in the gospel; seek, without delay, all the rich advantages of his kingdom of grace and glory; seek that imputed righteousness, by which ye are entitled to the same, and that implanted grace, and holiness of conversation, which qualifies you for the enjoyment of the eternal blessedness in heaven; and then ye may safely trust God to provide for you the necessaries of life. Be therefore content with such things as ye have, and never distress your minds with fears about future wants and troubles in this world. For God has promised, that as your days are, so your strength shall be; and ye will always find enough of present trouble to exercise all the grace ye have at the time.

* Judge not.—The words do not forbid a "righteous judgment" of men's characters and actions, but a curious and inquisitorial search into men's failings and faults, for the purpose, not of reforming them, or admonishing ourselves;—but for the purpose of enabling us to condemn them, and, by the comparison, to magnify ourselves.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VI.—Alas, what a general and powerful evil is pride? Fearfully it spreads into and corrupts men's actions, even those which are good in themselves. But no religious exercise can be truly sincere, and acceptable to God, that does not flow from union to, and regeneration by Christ. Without sanctified and upright hearts, bodily service will profit nothing, but to procure men's empty applause. And in all our prayers we must view God as our Father in Christ, and prefer the concerns of his glory to our own comforts. Never must we draw our encouragement in prayer from anything but from God himself: and never must we pray under the power of malice, hatred, or envy of our neighbour: nor give our alms, pray, or fast, but with a view to his glory as our chief end. Insignificant, perishing, and uncertain are all the advantages of this world, when compared with the great, the solemn, and eternal realities of the heavenly inheritance. Surely then it is highly absurd to be eager in our contrivances and labours, hopes and fears, wishes and cares, about them, while we are so indolent and unmoved about the things of God. If we are interested in Jesus' kingdom and righteousness, it is very unbecoming to distrust our divine Father, and torment ourselves with anxious cares about the necessaries of life. Will the God, who largely sheds his bounty on fowls and flowers, deny what is necessary to his redeemed children, to whom he has given his Son,—given himself?

Chap. VII.—Ver. 1, 2. Never be rash, unmerciful, or severe, in suspecting, judging, or censuring the conduct, designs, and especially the eternal state, of others, lest ye provoke them to be as severe against you, and even provoke God to pass judgment without mercy upon you: for in the same manner that ye deal with others in judging them, ye must expect to be dealt with by them, and especially by God in the last judgment. 3—5. And how unreasonable and unrighteous is it for any of you readily to spy every little fault in your neighbour, and aggravate it with severity, while ye take no notice of, or even excuse, extenuate, and indulge much greater crimes in yourselves? or with what face, or to what purpose, would ye offer to condemn, correct, or reprove your brother for lesser sins, while your own heart and life are corrupted, and your judgment blinded, with much more heinous crimes? What is this but the grossest hypocrisy, under a pretence of zeal against sin? If therefore ye would be able with judgment and conscience, with decency, authority and success, to reprove and reform others, begin with 18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 [h] Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

21 ¶ Not every one that saith unto me, [i] Lord, Lord, shall enter[*] into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father[†] which is in heaven.

22 [k] Many will say to me in that day,[‡] Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And [l] then will I profess unto them, I never knew[§] you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 ¶ Therefore [m] whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock;

25 [n] And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and [o] it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand;

27 [p] And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew,[‖] and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28 ¶ [q] And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine:

29 For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

reforming yourselves. 6. And never unseasonably throw away the best counsels and reproofs, any more than the seals of God's covenant, upon hardened, profane, and incorrigible sinners, who will pour contempt upon them, and outrageously hate and persecute you on account of them. 7, 8. But in order to qualify you for these and all other duties, be much employed in fervent, importunate, and persevering prayer for direction and assistance: thus shall you receive from God your heavenly Father whatever blessings he has promised. 9—11. For if none of you, however wicked or hardhearted, would give a needy and importunate child that which is useless or destructive, how is it possible that your infinitely gracious God and Father can withhold what is good and needful from his fervently supplicant children? 12. And if God be so incomparably gracious to you, see that, in all your dealings with men, ye act in the same upright, just, and kind manner, as ye would reasonably wish them to act towards you if they were in your circumstances and you in theirs. 13, 14. And if you would be holy and happy members of my kingdom of grace or glory, ye must enter in at the strait gate of regeneration, faith and repentance, however self-humbling and self-denying it be: for as the entrance into, or progress in, sin and self-seeking, which leads to everlasting misery, is agreeable to the corrupt inclinations of men, multitudes follow after it to their eternal perdition: but the entrance into my kingdom by the new birth being painful and difficult, and the way of true gospel holiness, which leads to everlasting life, being disagreeable to flesh and sense, and beset with manifold tribulations, there are few that enter into and persevere in it. 15—20. Beware of false teachers, who pretend to lead you by an easy and wide path to everlasting happiness, and who, under a mask of sanctity, meekness, and concern for your welfare, remain under the power of their own lusts, and labour to make a prey of you to their own carnal ends and your everlasting destruction. By the evil tendency and influence of their doctrine, and by the pride, covetousness, or sensuality of their practice, ye may discern them from my faithful servants. For according as men's inward and reigning principles are good or bad, such are, and must be, their designs and actions: and however fair men's professions and appearances be, yet, if their inward principles of action are unsound, their doctrines erroneous, and their lives immoral, they are but plagues to the church, and shall, in the righteous judgment of God, be cut down by death, and cast into everlasting burnings. 21—23. It is not even the highest professions of regard to me as their Lord and Master, or a seeming fervency in calling on my name, that can manifest men real subjects in my kingdom of grace, or heirs of my kingdom of glory, but a cordial faith in my person and character, and unfeigned obedience to my heavenly Father's commands. In that awful day in which I will judge the quick and the dead, many, who have preached as my ministers, and even wrought miracles in my name, shall have their hypocrisy and wickedness publicly exposed; and shall, as objects of my detestation, be, for their iniquities, banished from my blissful presence into everlasting misery. 24—27. Whoever therefore hears, seriously considers, embraces by faith and love, and acts according to the doctrines which I have been delivering, shall have my unchangeable person and character for his foundation; and whatever temptations and persecutions, doubts, fears, and dangers, may assault him in life or in death, his hope in me shall never make him ashamed. But he that hears them, without cordially believing and uprightly practising them, having nothing to support him in a time of temptation, danger, death, or judgment, but his empty hypocritical profession of religion, shall, to his dreadful disappointment, inevitably and miserably perish for ever. 29. He spake with surprising majesty and authority, and with an evidence of truth and importance, which could not be contradicted.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—All our religion should begin at home; and instead of being uncharitably severe in censuring others, we should carefully look into our own hearts and ways, observe and condemn what is amiss in ourselves, and, through grace, labour to reform it. Let us then take heed, not only how, but also to whom, we give good counsels and reproofs. With earnestness, faith, and resignation, let us always address our heavenly Father for every necessary blessing: and let Jesus' law of honesty and kindness be the constant rule of all our conduct. It is a great blessing to the place, where Christianity is duly possessed and practised. But there is an indispensable necessity of heart-renewing grace, and of

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 [a] And, behold, there came a leper [*] and worshipped him, saying, Lord, [b] if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 [c] And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; [†] be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, [d] See thou tell no man; [‡] but go thy way, [e] show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, [f] for a testimony unto them.

5 [g] And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a [h] centurion, beseeching him,

6 And saying, Lord, [i] my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, [§] grievously tormented.

7 And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord, [k] I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof; [l] but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For [l] I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

10 When Jesus heard it, [m] he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, [n] That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down [*] with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven:

12 [o] But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, [p] Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour.

14 ¶ [q] And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

15 And [r] he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and [s] she arose, and ministered unto them.

16 ¶ When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick;

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, [t] Himself took our infirmities, [*] and bare our sicknesses.

18 ¶ Now, when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side. [†]

19 And a certain scribe [‡] came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; [u] but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. [§]

21 And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

22 But Jesus said unto him, [x] Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

23 ¶ And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 [y] And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves: [‖] but he was asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, [z] Lord, save us: we perish.

26 And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and [a] rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

28 ¶ [b] And when he was come to the other side, into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, [*] exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29 And, behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

30 And there was a good way off from them [c] an herd of many swine feeding.

implanted principles of holiness, before our practice can be really good. The work of conversion is hard, but necessary. And there is need carefully to try those whom we receive as ambassadors of Christ, both with respect to the nature and tendency of their doctrine. What alarming lengths may men go in the church of Christ, and yet, being destitute of real holiness, eternally perish! We should dread the thoughts of following the multitude, lest we follow them to hell; or of building our hopes of happiness upon insufficient grounds, lest they fail us, to our final and aggravated destruction. Let nothing therefore short of an assured faith on the Son of God, attended with gospel holiness in all manner of conversation, satisfy us.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 4. Christ often required the Jews, who were healed, to conceal his miracles, that he might manifest that he sought not his own glory; that he might not confound them with too great a blaze of miraculous power; and that he might not provoke his enemies too eagerly to attempt his ruin; but (perhaps as a token of his extending the gospel dispensation to the Gentiles) he never prohibited a Gentile to divulge them. 9. If I, a poor inferior officer, have such power over my soldiers, how much more canst thou, the Almighty Messiah, at thy pleasure, remove this distemper from my servant, where and whensoever thou wilt? 10—12. Publicly declaring the wonderful strength of the Gentile centurion's faith, he intimated that it foreboded the gathering of multitudes of Gentiles from all quarters of the world into the gospel church, and new covenant state of grace and glory, as spiritual children of the ancient patriarchs; while their Jewish natural posterity, who had been so long the peculiar people of God, should be cast off into lasting miseries on earth, and eternal torments in hell. 17. His sympathy with the distressed was a part of his suffering; and his removal of the diseases was the fruit of his bearing our sins, and the punishment of them. 20. You must expect no worldly advantage by following me, who have not so much as any abode of my own to lodge in. 21.

* This miraculous permission has been charged against our Lord as an act of injustice. If so, then must every disease causing death in flocks and herds, be charged as injustice against God; for infidels will scarcely affirm that disease and death can occur without God's permission. To the rational believer in Providence, and the divine mission of Jesus, the miracle presents a special proof of that mission — inasmuch as it removed all idea of the possibility of collusion between our Lord and the demoniacs; for though men might be bribed to feign both a disease and a cure, no human motive could reach the swine.—Ed.

receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed* him.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many [m]publicans and sinners† came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, [n]Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, [o]They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what that meaneth, [p]I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

14 ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, [q]Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can [r]the children of the bride-chamber mourn as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they [s]fast.

16 [t]No man putteth a piece of ‡new cloth unto an old garment; for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles;§ else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

18 ¶ [u]While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler,‖ and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: [w]but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

19 And [x]Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.

20 ¶ (And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an [y]issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and [z]touched the hem* of his garment:

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about; and when

Better the dead should be unburied, or that sinners, dead in trespasses and sins, should bury them, than that my infinitely more important work should be hindered. 32. By this Jesus gave a sensible proof of the existence of evil spirits against the Sadducees, of the reality of the possession, and of the mercy of the dislodgment; and also punished the Jews for bringing up herds of swine.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—How great is our Redeemer, who could make diseases, storms, and devils, obey him at pleasure! But marvellous was his debasement for our sakes, and tender his sympathy and compassion: and he now takes the greatest delight in the strength of faith, and in the gathering of the Gentiles to himself. But (awful thought) our calling is balanced with the tremendous and lasting rejection of the long favourite people of God! Let us then not be high minded, but fear! Let us never take up with external privileges in the church, nor aim at any secular advantages in our following of Christ. For if such be our temper, we shall be excluded from the joys of heaven, and cast into all the darkness and horrors of hell! Base are their hearts who form excuses to keep them from his service, and who prefer their swine, their sordid gains and traffic, to him. But it is the truest wisdom, in all our sorrows, our fears, and our dangers, to apply to him, as able and willing to save us. And never shall such meet with a disappointment.

Chap. IX.—Ver. 5. Is it not as easy to remove the sinful cause as to remove the punishment? 12, 13. It is only they who are plagued with the guilt and corruption of sin that need the Physician of souls; and the more sensible they are of their sinfulness and guilt, there is the more hope of doing them good.—God has declared, that acts of compassion to others, and especially to their souls, in turning them from their sins, is more acceptable to him than the most costly observance of his own positive institutions. I am come into the world to reform and save, not righteous persons, but guilty and polluted sinners, even the chief; and that by convincing them of their sinfulness and danger, and their need of righteousness and grace. 15—17. Since, as your master John hath testified, I am the Bridegroom of the church, and consequently my disciples guests of the marriage feast, who are to rejoice with me, it would be very absurd for them to practise abstemious and mournful severities while I am with them. But when I shall be taken from them by my death and ascension, the hardships and dangers to which they shall be

23 ¶ And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw [b] the minstrels† and the people making a noise,

24 He said unto them, [c] Give place; for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth.‡ And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people [d] were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And [§] the [e] fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, [f] crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, [g] Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, [h] According to your faith be it unto you.

30 [i] And their eyes were opened: and Jesus [k] straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it.[l]

31 But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 ¶ [l] As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, [m] It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees [n] said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

35 [o] And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

36 ¶ [p] But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they [q] fainted,* and were scattered abroad, [r] as sheep having no shepherd.

CHAPTER X.

(1) The twelve disciples named: 1—4. (2) Commissioned, and instructed, and warned: 5—39. (3) He that receiveth them reckoned as receiving their Lord: 40—42.

AND [a] when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power* †against unclean spirits, to [b] cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease.

2 Now [c] the names of the twelve apostles are these; The first, Simon,‡ who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother;

3 [d] Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; [e] James the son of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was [f] Thaddeus;

4 Simon [g] the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot,[h] who also betrayed him.

5 ¶ These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans[i] enter ye not:

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And as ye go, [h] preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

9 [i] Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass, in your purses,*

10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves:† for the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 [k] And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into an house, salute it.

13 And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace return‡ to you.

14 [l] And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment than for that city.

exposed will render fasting and mourning seasonable for them. Such occasional duties must be proportioned to the circumstances of persons and things, otherwise they do more harm than good; and are rather attempts towards a legal and Pharisaical righteousness, than any part of real religion.

Reflections upon Chap. IX.—Quickly Jesus leaves them in wrath who would drive him from them! and readily relieves the wants of those who seek to him. But how manifest is his supreme Godhead: he knows men's secret thoughts, forgives their sins, heals their souls, removes palsies, unstops the ears of the deaf, opens the eyes of the blind, looses the tongue of the dumb, heals all manner of diseases, casts out devils, and raises the dead, with all the sovereignty, wisdom, and grace, the majesty and authority of a God! Nothing is too hard, and nothing too great or good for him to effect. None that apply to him for relief, whether high or low, whether more or less wicked, are ever cast out. To sanctify and save the most notorious sinners is his peculiar delight. Tenderly he suits the duties of his disciples to their circumstances and strength, and vindicates them when they cannot answer for themselves. The stronger our faith in him is, the more profitable is it to ourselves, as well as honourable to him. And the more of fervent prayer, and the less of carnal contrivances, are employed for a gospel ministry, the more faithful and successful is it likely to prove. Let me therefore, in every distress, however desperate, employ him as my helper and healer. Let me never scoff at his words, never envy him his honours, nor his people the liberties and privileges which he bestows upon them. Let me never imagine that my importunity can trouble him, or my sins debar me from him as a Saviour. Let neither shame nor death keep me from him. And, if my poverty be deep, and my case deplorable, let my faith be the stronger; so shall my deliverance be glorious. Let me admire his mighty works, glorify God on their account, and obey his calls to work or warfare; but never manifest my emptiness, by boasting of my external devotions. And while I follow Jesus myself, let me study to bring all my friends into acquaintance with him, and labour to have the whole earth filled with his glory.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 16. I send you forth as meek, harmless, and unable to defend yourselves, among furious and implacable men. Behave therefore with the utmost prudence, never giving any causeless provocation, nor needlessly exposing yourselves to danger; and be inoffensive, sincere, and meek, that ye may win upon some, and turn away the wrath of others. 17. And, after all, never trust yourselves with wicked men, nor expect from them anything better than persecution. 18. Your sufferings, on account of your professing and preaching my gospel, will be a public testimony to the truth of my doctrines, and of the inexcusable guilt of both Jews and Gentiles who reject them. 26, 27. Since ye must be partakers of my sufferings and glory in due order, never let anything which your adversaries can do terrify you from, or discourage you in, your work: for your whole doctrine, and your integrity in professing and preaching it, shall be openly manifested to your honour as well as mine, in the spread and success of the gospel, and in the last judgment. Whatever therefore I privately teach you, preach ye to others, in the most plain, bold, and public manner. 34, 35. I am not come to spread outward peace and prosperity through the world, as many expect; nay, through the corruption of their own hearts, many will make my gospel of peace with God and men an occasion of terrible hatred and persecution against the steady believers and preachers of it. 37—39. And he that is not willing to incur hatred and persecution, even from his nearest relations, for the sake of my doctrines and institutions, and that he may follow my example, cannot be justly owned as one of my disciples, or expect a share in my eternal glory. He, who through the fear of man preserves his life and temporal advantages at the expense of his religion, his conscience, and regard to me, shall lose the blessing and true comfort of these, if not the things themselves, and shall fall short of eternal happiness; but he who risks or loses his temporal life, or the enjoyments of it, through his conscientious adherence to my truths, shall find real happiness and comfort therein, and be graciously rewarded with everlasting life in the world to come. 40—42. Whatever kind reception your persons and doctrines meet with, shall be accounted as given to me and my Father: and whatever kindness is done to any of my ministers or disciples, as such, from faith in and regard to me, shall be richly and graciously rewarded in the present, and especially in the eternal state.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Christ graciously provides preachers when there is great need for them, and success to be expected. And it is necessary that such be prepared by fellowship with, and instruction from him; that their call should be plainly manifested to themselves and others; and that they should assist one another in their work. But, alas, that in the best of times there should be traitors to Jesus among them! The great design of his gospel is to overthrow the power of Satan in and over men; and in his grace there is an effectual remedy for every evil. But sovereign is his giving or withholding his special favours. Perpetually uniform are his truths, and quickening to diligence the consideration of his approaches in grace or glory.—By no carnal cares, by no greediness of filthy lucre,

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, [a] he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ [b] Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art [c] thou he that should come, or do we look for another?*

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see:

5 The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor† have the gospel preached to them.

6 [d] And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended‡ in me.

7 ¶ And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye [e] out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more§ than a prophet.

10 For this is he of whom it is written, [f] Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a [g] greater‖ than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

12 And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven [h] suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is [i] Elias, which was for to come.

15 [k] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 ¶ [l] But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17 And saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 [m] For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil.

19 [n] The Son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners: [o] but Wisdom* is justified of her children.

20 ¶ [p] Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not.

21 Wo unto thee, Chorazin! wo unto thee, Bethsaida! [q] for if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago† in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you.

23 And thou, Capernaum, [r] which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in [s] Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, [t] That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee.

25 ¶ [u] At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things‡ from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father; [x] for so it seemed good in thy sight.

no peevish moroseness, no intimacy with persons of dishonourable characters, by no infamous reproaches, no fear of men, no dread of persecution, and no regard to carnal relations, ought ministers of the gospel to be ever hindered in their work. But they have great need of a fixed contentment, cautious prudence, and constant dependence on God as their Father. If they be faithful, prudent, and active, Jesus will protect, provide for, and honourably reward them, and every kindness done to them. And it is at the dreadful peril of their hearers if they either neglect their subsistence, contemn their messages, or persecute their persons. Whatever is done to Jesus' favourites, he takes as done to himself and his Father. And if it be honourable to suffer with Christ, what must it be to be glorified together, and reign with him on his throne!

CHAP. XI.—Ver. 2—5. Though his own long confinement, and the low figure which Christ made in the world, were great trials of John's belief of his being the true Messiah, yet it was probably more for the satisfaction of his disciples than for his own that he now sent them to Christ; and Christ refers them to the works which they saw him do as unanswerable proofs of his true Messiahship. 6. Blessed only is he, who, upon the evidence I give, is so well satisfied of my divinity and Messiahship, that no prejudices nor discouragements can make him reject or disown me. 7—13. John, whom ye heard preach in the wilderness of Judea, was no unstable pleaser of men, no delicate gentleman, but an inspired prophet, and greater than all his predecessors, since he pointed me out as already come in the flesh; and yet every gospel minister will be still more honourable, having much clearer views of my person, obedience, and sufferings, grace and glory, and of the spiritual design of my kingdom.—Since John began to preach, great multitudes have crowded to hear the gospel; and many, even publicans and other notorious sinners, have, with eagerness and vehemence, sought after the gracious and saving blessings of it; and my coming, and blessings, represented by Moses and the prophets as future and distant, are now considered as present. 16—19. The body of the Jews, now living, are so senseless, peevish, and perverse, that they relish no form of instruction, whether mournful or cheerful. John Baptist recommended his doctrine of humiliation and repentance by a severe and solitary life of fasting and self-denial; and they, instead of mourning with him for their sins, reproached him as a sullen unsociable man, possessed by the devil. And when I, the Messiah, recommended my glad tidings of salvation by a more free, friendly, and social conversation, they reproached me as a gluttonous and drunken companion of the vilest miscreants. But let envy and malice suggest what they will, the wisdom of God in these doctrines, and in the manner of manifesting them, and I, as the Messiah, are, and will be, approved, attested, and vindicated, in and by every true believer. 20—24. Christ does not affirm that the extremely wicked inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Sodom, would have repented after a godly sort, but so as to prevent the fearful judgments which came upon them. 25, 26. In thy high sovereignty, and that none may glory in himself, thou hast savingly manifested the doctrines and blessings of the gospel, not to men famous for learning and worldly policy, but to the lowest, plainest, and weakest of men. 27—30. Since my Father, who alone fully knows my nature, character, and work, and whom I fully know, and savingly manifest, has intrusted to my care and management all persons and things relative to the redemption of men, I invite and call every one that labours in, or is laden with, guilt, corruption, burdensome ceremonies, or attempts after legal righteousness, to receive me and my full salvation by faith, as the only effectual means of rest and relief. And since I am gracious, gentle, and condescending, yield yourselves to my instructions and influence, and follow my example, that ye may find refreshment and satisfaction to your souls. For my service is perfect freedom; my commands, particularly under the gospel dispensation, are not grievous; and I will lay no burdens upon my disciples which I will not enable them to bear.

Reflections upon Chap. XI.—Graciously God raises up one minister when he has removed another. And all faithful preachers lead their hearers only to Christ and his truths. Yea, Jesus takes delight in honouring them who honour God; and in satisfying a humble, though doubting, faith, while wilful obstinacy is confounded. It is not outward splendours, but eminent gifts, graces, and faithfulness, that truly commend preachers. And it adds to their honour if by their means poor sinners be cast into the mould of the gospel, or multitudes awakened to an earnest concern about their salvation. But let faithful ministers behave as they will, they must expect reproach and persecution. Nor can the best qualified and most diligent effectually convert their hearers. But, alas, tremendous and infinite is their danger, who obstinately rebel against the light and grace of the gospel, stumble at the Redeemer, abuse the means of his grace, and insolently reproach him and his servants! Redoubled vengeance must be their everlasting portion. Let Britain, let my soul, think and tremble! But O how delightful and unbounded are the fitness and fulness of Christ to save sinners, even the chief! And that not by natural qualifications, or by works of righteousness, but according to his own and his Father's rich and sovereign grace. Yet tender, extensive, and free, are his invitations of self-destroyed and self-deceiving sinners to himself; and full are his assurances of salvation directed to them. Yea, the views of his love, and influences of his Spirit, render their service pleasant, and make his cross easy and light in the way to their glorious crown.

against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

27 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out?* therefore they shall be your judges.

28 But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.

29 [f]Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

30 He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost,† [g]it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.‡

34 O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

35 A [h]good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things.

36 But I say unto you, That every idle§ word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

* Our Lord does not affirm that the children, the families, or disciples, of the Pharisees, did actually cast out demons; but since they boldly professed to cast them out — even as the priests of Rome still continue to assert the power of their exorcism—he demands by what power they professed to work the miracle; and, if they professed to cast out demons by the power of God, why should Christ be accused of casting them out by the power of Beelzebub?—Ed.

† What particular sin constitutes the unpardonable sin against the Holy Ghost, has been the subject of much and anxious inquiry; and by the marginal references of many Bibles to 1 John 5. 16, which has no relation whatever to the subject, the perplexities of many have been greatly increased. The following suggestions, it is hoped, may serve to obviate the difficulties of the question: —Our Lord declares, "No man cometh to the Father, but by me," John 14. 6.—And again, "I go unto the Father:" and, "I am the way." John 14. 12. 6; and, "I am the door," John 10. 9. Now, let it be recollected that all forgiveness of sin lies in Jesus—(see Mat. 26. 28; Eph. 1. 7; Acts 5. 31; Rev. 1. 5) —and that the Father dispenses it only for "his name's sake," (1 John 2. 12).—Wherefore, if it shall appear, that no man can come to Jesus but by the Holy Ghost (see John 3. 5; 1 Cor. 12. 3; 1 John 5. 6), it will follow, that he who blasphemes the Holy Ghost, and pronounces "him a liar," can never, so long as he abides in that blasphemy, obtain forgiveness—because he refuses to come to Jesus, in whom alone forgiveness rests.—Ed.

† The Evangelists, being Jews, would understand by unclean, whatever defilement of the person the law had condemned—(see, for example, Lev. 5. 2, 3. & 13. 3, &c. 14. 40, & 22. 5, 6.); — consequently, an "unclean spirit" would convey to them the idea of one tempting to acts, or producing diseases, pronounced unclean. This spirit, be it observed, is described as "gone out" of his own accord, not "cast out" by the power of God; and then it is added, "he (that is, the spirit) walketh through dry places" where is no water of life—(see Ps. 63. 1. Is. 55. 1. Jer. 2. 13. Rev. 7. 17)—"seeking rest"—endeavouring, it would appear, as wicked men often do, to escape from the sound of the gospel, as come to torment them before the time (Mat. 8. 29). Then, returning, "he findeth his house (the soul) empty" of the love and fear of God —"swept" from every undignified and unpopular sin—and "garnished" with many an ornament of literature, science, civilization, and, it may be, religious profession.— "Then taketh he seven spirits"—a number equal to every day's occurrences— "more wicked than himself." But how is this possible? He was merely "unclean," these are infernal. Behold how readily they may be discovered! — Infidelity, that denieth God!— Impiety, that blasphemeth him!—Idolatry, bowing down to stocks and stones, or Covetousness selling the true God for gold! —Cowardice, shrinking from the cross, and faithlessly betraying friends, and country, and church! —Falsehood, belying God, and calumniating man! — Pride, "clothed in purple and fine linen, and faring sumptuously every day," yet utterly forgetful of the Lord the Provider! —with Cruelty, persecuting the children of God, and blasphemously singing Te Deum, amid the groans of confessors and martyrs.—Ed.

k Ch. 10. 2—4. Luke 6. 13—16. Acts 1. 13.

An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

40 [i]For as Jonas was three days and three nights* in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41 The men of Nineve shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

42 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

43 When the unclean† spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none.

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 ¶ While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

49 And he stretched forth his hand toward [k]his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

50 For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

And if ye will pretend that I cast out devils by a diabolical influence, by what do your own applauded disciples undertake to cast them out? They shall therefore be witnesses, and give judgment against your partial and unjust accusation of me. And, if it be incontrovertibly evident that I cast them out by the almighty influence of God's Spirit, it is then plain that I am come with sovereign authority to destroy the kingdom of the devil, irresistibly dislodging him from men's bodies and souls, and to set up a spiritual, merciful, and holy kingdom among you: and whoever will not own and join me in my opposition to him, and in gathering sinners out of his kingdom into mine, must be held as an enemy to me, and to the conversion of mankind. 31, 32. Whatever blasphemous reproaches ye utter against me, in my present debasement, may be pardoned; but if, in this approaching dispensation of the Holy Ghost, ye blaspheme his marvellous gifts and operations as devilish, and contrary to his remarkable convictions, wilfully and maliciously oppose the method of redemption which he comes to apply, it shall never be forgiven you, but the most fearful judgment shall overtake you, both in this world and in the next. 33—37. Nay, your present words manifest the inward wickedness and malice of your heart, and that ye are indeed the children of the devil; for as men's hearts are good or bad, so will be their words and actions. And know, that even your trifling and unprofitable talk, and much more your blasphemous reproaches, must be reckoned for, to your condemnation, in the day of judgment. 41, 42. Christ's divine dignity and authority were manifest; his wisdom was infinite; his preaching frequent, plain, powerful, and long continued; his doctrines were confirmed by miracles unnumbered, and at last by his resurrection, and the effusion of the Holy Ghost. 43—45. This parable means, that Satan, being frequently baffled by the miracles of Christ and his apostles, and by the light and power of the gospel among the Jews, should, in great vexation, retire to the Gentile world, hoping to meet with less disturbance among them; but finding himself quickly pursued thither by the still more remarkable influences and success of the gospel, and more abundantly harassed and defeated, he should return to the Jews: and finding most of them destitute of grace, notwithstanding all their pretences to purity and religion, and more ready to resign up themselves to him than before, he would seduce them more powerfully than ever; and by filling them with more obstinate hardness of heart, render their wickedness and ruin altogether remediless.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Be content, my soul, to endure hardships or hunger, and to live on coarse fare, and to put up with ignorant reproaches in following Christ. And in all let me rejoice that he is my advocate and justifier, and the Lord of the sabbath, who can prescribe the work of it at his pleasure, and has appointed it as his great opportunity of distributing blessings to sinful men. If either diseases or devils plague me, let me cast my burden on the Lord. And, if my heart or hand be withered, let me stretch it forth at his power-conveying call. Let me copy his example of constant and humble activity in doing good, or of meekly bearing the vilest reproaches. And let me never check them by passionate returns, or by revengeful recrimination, but by unanswerable, and especially practical, refutation. Empty professors are very prone to carp at things trifling or lawful, while they indulge an ignorance of the oracles of God. But full of blindness, prejudice, and malignity against Jesus Christ and the gospel, must they be,

A. M. cir. 4035.
A. D. cir. 31.

THE [a]same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea-side.

2 And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship,* and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them [b]in parables,† saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow:

4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way-side; and the fowls came and devoured them up.

5 Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth; and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up,‡ they were scorched; and, because they had no [c]root, they withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them.

8 But other fell into [d]good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold.

9 Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ And the disciples came and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries§ of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

12 For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, [e]By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

16 [f]But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, [g]That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 ¶ Hear ye [h]therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth [i]the word of the kingdom, and [k]understandeth it not, then cometh [l]the wicked one, and catcheth* away that which was [m]sown in his heart. [n]This is he which received seed by the way-side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon [o]with joy receiveth it;

21 Yet hath he not [p]root in himself, but dureth for a while: [q]for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.

22 [r]He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the [s]deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23 [t]But he that received seed into the good ground† is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty.

† The parables of our Lord are short descriptions of natural objects or events; the several parts of which are employed to illustrate some corresponding spiritual truth. With one single exception—that of the rich man and Lazarus—all are confined within the limits of this world. Our Lord commenced his preaching by plain exposition of the word, and unsparing correction and reproof of the Pharisaic perversions of Scripture. This method gave offence;—wherefore he who "knew what was in man," changes his mode of address—by which prejudice was less excited, attention secured, and truth insinuated by the aid of curiosity.—Ed.

and fearful is their guilt, and dreadful their danger, who, contrary to strong evidence and deep convictions, blaspheme Jesus Christ and his Spirit. No heathens can sin so heinously, nor be damned so dreadfully! There is an absolute necessity of almighty power and grace to convert men from Satan to God; and to have gracious principles implanted in our hearts, in order to practical holiness. No gracious acts can ever take place till gracious qualities be divinely created in us. But surely we should be very careful to act always as under God's eye, when our final account is to be so strict, and the issues of it so infinitely important! Near relations, or even real saints, are often Satan's instruments to hinder Jesus or his faithful servants in their work. Yet, great is his love to, and care for, such as truly believe and obey him: and if I be spiritually related and conformed to him, let the world contemn and reject me as they please. But it is very desirable and honourable that all the lovers of Jesus should be as united in promoting the interests of the gospel, as Satan and his subjects are in their opposition to it.

CHAP. XIII.—Ver. 10—15. Our Saviour taught much in parables. (1) That he might fulfil Old Testament predictions; Psal. lxxviii. 1, 2; and xlix. 3, 4; ver. 34, 35. (2) That, in manifesting the spiritual turn of his own mind, he might set us an example to improve everything as a mean of spiritual instruction; John iii. 12, 13. (3) That he might the more effectually reprove the Jews, without putting them into a rage; chap. xxi. 28—46. (4) That he might the more easily instruct the attentive and thoughtful, in a manner much used in the East, delightful to the mind and helpful to the memory; Hos. xii. 10. (5) That he might justly permit the blindness and ruin of such as hated instruction; ver. 13. Ver. 3—9, 18—23. The parable of the soils or sower represents the different issues of the gospel ministrations on different sorts of hearers, and the causes of them. The sower is Jesus Christ, by himself and his ministers, painfully, carefully, and faithfully preaching gospel truths, which, like good seed, are precious, uncorrupted, and calculated to produce fruits of faith and holiness, glory to God, and eternal happiness to men. The way-side denotes careless hearers, who never seriously regard or think about those divine truths which they hear; while the devil and his agents divert their mind with other thoughts, to make them entirely forget them. The stony ground denotes them who hear the gospel with some delightful conceptions of its glories, sudden flashes of joy in their affections, and some slight purposes and desires towards that which is good; but, their hearts never being savingly renewed, they do not receive it by faith and love, as an abiding and governing principle of action: and hence, whenever they meet with violent and lasting temptations or persecutions, for the sake of religion, they apostatize from it. The thorny ground denotes them who hear the gospel with remarkable attention; and are so affected by it, that, for a considerable time they appear to make progress in the knowledge, profession, and practice of religion; but at last their cares about worldly things, and expectations and desires of happiness in them, and their eager pursuits after riches and pleasures, so entangle, deceive, and overset them, that they never attain to any true holiness of heart or life. The good ground denotes those hearers who receive the truths of the gospel into their hearts, renewed by the Spirit of God, and through the daily influences of his grace, improve them to their spiritual fruitful-

24 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed [u] good seed in his field:

25 But while men slept, his [x] enemy came and sowed [y] tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the [z] servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?*

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, [a] Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest, while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both [b] grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.

31 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, [c] The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed,† which a man took and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 ¶ Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three‡ § measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 [d] All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them:

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

36 ¶ Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house; and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare‖ unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man;

38 The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom;* but the tares are the children of the wicked one;

39 The enemy that sowed them is the devil;† the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.

40 As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all ‡ things that offend, and them which do iniquity, 42 And shall cast them into a furnace of fire:§ there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. *Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

44 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field;‖ the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man seeking goodly pearls:

46 Who, when he had found one pearl of great price,* went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net† that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind:

48 Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just,

50 And shall cast them into the furnace of fire:‡ there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, [f] Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

* The word Zizania, erroneously translated tares, does not occur elsewhere in Scripture, nor in any ancient Greek writer. The most probable interpretation is "darnel," the Lolium temulentum of Linnæus. Forskal says it grows abundantly at Aleppo; and that if the seed remain mixed with the wheat, the bread causes dizziness and sickness. The darnel is common in light soils throughout Europe, and possesses the same deleterious properties ascribed to it by Forskal.—Ed.

† The ordinary mustard of Europe cannot be the plant here intended. Linnæus mentions a species, whose branches become real wood, which he names Sinapis arvoides. Frost, however, thinks this cannot be the plant intended; for though it becomes a mustard tree, its seeds are of considerable size. He thinks that our Lord referred to the Phytolacca Dodecandra, which grows abundantly in Palestine, has really "the least of all (tree) seeds," yet rises to as great an altitude as any other tree in the country of which it is a native. The little seed represents our Lord and his apostles — the umbrageous tree, the present attainments, and future spread of Christianity.—Ed.

The parable also affords an instance among many others in the Scriptures, of the manner in which they assert the proper equality of woman with man —and truly the Scriptures concur with Christian biography and daily observation, in largely ascribing the Christian character of families to the influence of maternal instruction and example.—Ed.

† To deny the individuality of the DEVIL, and to represent him, not as a spirit, but as a mere abstract principle of evil, is not uncommon. But the contrast here between the DEVIL and the ANGELS, must either reduce the angels to "abstract principles," or declare the devil to be an actual "evil spirit." But as the personal character of angels is, to all but SADDUCEES, beyond dispute,—so must the personal character of the devil be equally evident to all, except those, his servants, who question his existence, that they may best, because most covertly, promote his power.—Ed.

ness in holy dispositions, thoughts, words, and actions, in different degrees. 24—30, 36—43. The sowing of the good seed represents Christ as planting his grace in the hearts of men by the ministry of the gospel, to render them true members of his church; these, in due time, discover themselves by their open profession of their faith, and by their holy practice. The tares denote hypocritical professors, or ministers; these, Satan, especially in a time of prosperity, and when ministers and people are unwatchful, secretly raises up in the church, and causes gradually to discover themselves. It is a grief to the faithful servants and people of Christ to see the gospel so perverted and abused, by any of its preachers or professors, to the introducing of errors and immoralities into the church or world; and yet, till the harvest of the last judgment, such can never be wholly separated from the godly and faithful. 31, 32. The marvellous growth of the grain of mustard-seed represents Christ's gospel and church in the world, and his grace in the soul; extremely small and obscure in their beginnings, but gradually increasing, till they fill the heart, and even the earth; so that both Jews and Gentiles find refreshment and rest in them. 33. The hidden leaven, affecting three measures of meal, represents Christ's gospel and grace implanted in the hearts of men, and secretly working with such divine efficacy as to sanctify all the faculties of the soul and members of the body, and gradually spreading themselves through all nations, to captivate them to the obedience of faith. 44. The TREASURE hid in the field, &c. represents Christ and the rich blessings of the gospel as lying hid in the oracles of God from carnal men; but when manifested by the Spirit, eagerly apprehended, and joyfully received into the heart; and an interest in them esteemed so valuable, that a man is ready to part with all things in the world to enjoy fellowship therein through the word. 45, 46. The PEARL of great price denotes Christ and his inestimable blessings, which, being once discovered by earnest seekers after true happiness, renders them willing to part with all the riches and enjoyments of this world, rather than not obtain a property therein. 47—50. The NET cast into the sea, &c. represents the gospel as laboriously and faithfully preached in this confused, wicked, and unquiet world, and as being the mean of gathering multitudes, some saints and some hypocrites, into a visible church state, in which they shall remain connected till the angels make an awful separation between them in the last judgment. 52. The HOUSEHOLDER represents preachers treasuring up divine truths in their minds and hearts, that, out of the Old and New Testaments, and out of their new and

† The words "brethren and sisters," do not, in Hebrew usage, necessarily imply that the persons so called were the children of Joseph and Mary; but the silence of the speakers about any other relation, naturally leads to the conclusion that they were literally our Lord's brethren and sisters. (1) Herod thinks JESUS to be the BAPTIST risen from the dead: 1, 2. (2) The narrative of John's death: 3—12. (3) The miracle of the five loaves and two fishes: 13—21. (4) Jesus walks on the sea: 22—33. (5) He heals the sick in Gennesaret: 34—36.

AT that time Herod[*] the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus,[†]

2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist: he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works do show forth themselves in him.

3 ¶ For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias'[‡] sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

9 And the king was sorry: nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent, and beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.[*]

12 [a] And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.[*]

13 ¶ When Jesus heard of it, he departed[†] thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.

14 [b] And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

15 And when it was evening,[‡] his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

16 But Jesus said unto them, [c] They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

17 And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me.

19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and, looking up to heaven, he blessed,[d] and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

20 And they [e] did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets[§] full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, besides women and children.

22 ¶ [f] And straightway Jesus constrained[‖] his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening[*] was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

25 And in the fourth watch[†] of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

* This was not Herod called the Great (ch. 2. 19), but Herod Antipas, his son, who was tetrarch, that is, literally, though not always practically, ruler over a "fourth part" of a kingdom. The government of Herod extended over Perea and Galilee.—Ed.

† How Herod did not sooner hear of "the fame of Jesus," will not seem strange to those who consider his principles, as a Sadducee, which would lead him to despise religious men, and his constant engagements as an intriguing and ambitious politician — or as a general, either preparing for, or actually at, war—in which his army was totally overthrown. By the Roman emperor Caius, he was finally deprived of his government; first banished to Lyons, and then to Spain, where he died.—Ed.

§ Perhaps no other nation on earth could have produced twelve baskets upon such an occasion. But "the basket-carrying Jews"—literally, pedlars, as they are called by Juvenal (Sat. 6. 542), could readily furnish one for each apostle—one for each tribe. The incidental mention of so many baskets, forms a curious, and not unimportant, evidence of the truth of the narrative.—Ed.

‖ Constrained.—This translation has led some to conclude the disciples were unwilling to go, ambitiously hoping to see Jesus made a king—or, what is more natural, affectionately unwilling to part from their Lord, or timorously shrinking from going to sea without him. Bloomfield, however, has shown that the original may well be translated "caused," which would intimate no reluctance in the disciples, but merely a direction on the part of Jesus, the more readily to induce the multitude to disperse, by the sight of the previous departure of the disciples.—Ed.

old instructions, observations, and experiences, they may seasonably and profitably bring forth doctrines suited to all persons and cases.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Astonishing was the care, the condescension, the labours of our Redeemer, to instruct men in the important truths of the gospel. And inestimably valuable and useful is his gospel, especially in its New Testament dispensation. As seed, it produces saints and good works; as leaven, it happily impregnates and captivates our hearts; as a treasure and a pearl, its blessings enrich and deck us for time and eternity; and as a net, it draws us to him, his church, and his throne. It is openly preached to all sorts of sinful men. But, through the want of inward principles of grace, the temptations of Satan, and influence of the world, how diversified is its success! While God, in high sovereignty, withholds or exerts his almighty power, it is to some, through their obstinacy and perverseness, the occasion of blindness and the savour of death, and to others the mean of light, and the savour of life. Nor can men expect true blessedness unless they really understand it. But, alas, many, by their careless hearing, tempt Satan to carry away gospel truths from their memories, understandings, or consciences. And many, though better than others, rest short of the one thing needful. Never in this world will Satan and indwelling lusts suffer either hearts or churches to be perfectly pure. And never are either more ready to be fearfully infected than in a time of sloth, unwatchfulness, and outward prosperity. But dreadful is their destruction who, after a profession and some experience of gospel truth, die in their sins. Let me therefore take heed how I have received and heard; and think, as a member of the church, what I am. If grace be really planted in my heart, it will continue and grow notwithstanding all opposition. And if Jesus Christ be my roof, my righteousness, my riches, my ornament, great, inexpressibly great, shall be my everlasting happiness and honour! While millions are connected together for their additional misery, and are tormented in hell, I, with the ransomed of the Lord, shall triumph in the praises of his sovereign grace!—But, alas, how many,

* A spirit.—Rather, "an apparition"—The idea of the spirits of the dead, or, rather, unimbodied spirits, appearing by night, seems to have been, and to be, common to all nations. The idea of such apparitions is said to be exceedingly prevalent among sailors, who look upon them as ominous of shipwreck—which feeling may have produced such terror in the disciples. And though such dread may be largely the effect of misdirected education and superstition, the prevalence of the opinion proves, either that the belief of a spiritual world and immortality is natural to man, or that it proceeds from some original fact, or doctrine, communicated at the very fountain-head of human life. —Ed.

The ancient fathers, and also some moderns, understand by it, however, a thing which the vower had formerly dedicated to God, or which he dedicated at the moment the request was made — whereby he was exonerated, may prevented, from granting it for relief, and enabled afterwards to compound with the priest for a trifling per centage on its value. 10 ¶ [g]And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

11 Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

12 Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees [h]were offended after they heard this saying?

20 These are the things which defile a man:

by their unbelieving prejudices against the Redeemer, obstruct their own salvation! And none are more ready to do so than they who have long, without effect, enjoyed distinguished means of grace.

Reflections upon Chap. XIV.—God's faithful ministers are great tormentors to them who, like devils, continue impenitent under awful convictions. Faithful reproofs, especially of great men, often procure the most inveterate resentment; in the prosecution of which, all bonds of humanity, honour, justice, or gratitude, are trampled under foot; and profane swearing, cruelty, and murder, are combined to resent the distinguished kindness. Never are the lusts of sinners more ready to rage than when intoxicated with carnal mirth: and none are more cruel and bloody monsters than abandoned women. But if friends die, and enemies rage, let us go to Jesus, and pour out our complaints to him; and if he withdraw, let us follow him the more eagerly. In so doing we may be reduced to straits, but never to ruin. His compassion is as unbounded as his power. And none need ever depart from him to seek happiness or subsistence from the creature. It is his to feed the hungry, to save the drowning, and to heal the diseased, when brought to the utmost extremity. Let me then cast all my care upon him, rest contented with my lot, and readily distribute to others. None ever lost, but gained, by prudently giving to the Lord and the poor. His blessing multiplies provision, but never allows to make waste. Yea, the truly liberal will be the best economists. After sermons and miracles, as well as before, let me give myself to solemn prayer. Let me never be stumbled if I meet with terrible storms in the way of my duty; never dread Christ's hatred of, or unconcern about me; nor ever start back from my mercy, as if I took my Saviour for Satan. If he comfort me, cheerfully should I trust in and cry to him; but never tempt his providence, even through desire to be with him. My staggering, though unfailing, faith will quickly bewray my rashness, and draw out his sharp, but kind rebuke. Thrice happy are they who live near to Jesus, and employ him in every distress. No storm, no disease, can defy his power or kindness.

Chap. XV.—Ver. 5, 6. They pretended that, if a man devoted to religious uses what he could have spared for the support of his poor infirm parents, this freed him from all obligation to relieve or support them. 13, 14. Every ordinance in the church not instituted by my heavenly Father, and every officer not authorized by him, shall be rooted up and cast out. Nor need ye regard whether the Pharisees be pleased or not; for they are but self-conceited and obstinately ignorant leaders of poor ignorant hearers, who blindly and implicitly follow whatever they dictate: and, in the nature of things, and the just punishment of God, both deceivers and deceived, if they continue in their errors, must perish together in the bottomless pit. 18—20. Out of the corrupt lusts of the heart proceed carnal imaginations, contrivances and designs; hatred, malice, and murder; wanton desires, words, and actions; adultery, fornication, and every other form of uncleanness; covetousness, injuries, cheats, and thefts; lies, falsehood in bearing witness, all but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

21 ¶ [m] Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts* of Tyre and Sidon.

22 [n] And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, [o] Have mercy on me, O Lord, [p] thou son of David; my daughter is [q] grievously vexed with a devil.

23 But [r] he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

24 But he answered and said, [s] I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 [t] Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

26 But he answered and said, [u] It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.†

27 And she said, [x] Truth, Lord: [y] yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

28 Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, [z] great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. [a] And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ¶ [b] And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea [c] of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

30 [d] And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed,‡ and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them:

31 Insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and [e] they glorified the God of Israel.

32 ¶ [f] Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days,§ and have nothing to eat: ‖ and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 And his disciples say unto him, [g] Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?

evil-speaking, or calumny against men; and blasphemies and profaneness against God and religion. These are the abominable things which render a man unclean and odious before God, unfit for his service, and for communion with or enjoyment of him. 24—26. My commission to exercise my personal ministry, and perform my miracles, was not designed for the immediate benefit of the Gentiles, but of God's covenant people the Jews, who are gone astray and in perishing circumstances; my special blessings belong to this peculiar people; and therefore it is not proper to grant such favours to the Gentiles, who are without the pale of the covenant, and deserve to be treated with neglect and disdain for their impurity and wickedness. 27. I am indeed vile, worthless, and undeserving; yet, as there are blessings enough for the Jews, and to spare for us Gentiles, let me have this one so necessary mercy.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—The contemners of God's laws are ordinarily mad with zeal for the traditions and ceremonies of men.—A certain mark of detestable hypocrisy? All human inventions in religion invade the authority, and pollute the worship of God; and mislead the hearts, and corrupt the practices of men. May God root them out of his church and out of our heart, that we ourselves may not, on their account, be excluded from his kingdom! How certainly sinners shall be damned! and false teachers push themselves and followers hastily into the depths of hell! Yea, none are farther from the light of God's truth than implicit votaries of profane ministers, and especially preachers who are puffed up with a conceit of their own wisdom. How dull, how slow of heart, to conceive the things of practical religion, are even real saints! And, alas, what a sink, what a source of abominations is the human heart! Dreadful and extensive is the defilement which it spreads abroad into the life! And infinitely important and necessary is the purification from it, by the word, the Spirit, and the blood of Christ! Kind and honourable are those parents who bring their children to Jesus, and will not be denied his blessings. Graciously he travels to meet distressed sinners: and yet he often tries those most for whom he has the strongest affection, and for whom he intends the most speedy deliverances and most distinguished honours. Strong is the power of faith, when he animates and strengthens it under trials. It breaks through every discouragement, and lays hold on the most indirect hints of mercy. And great is the honour it gains in thus honouring Christ. His repeated apparent disregards do but usher in the most advantageous fulfilment of all its requests. And since this world is so full of miseries and wants, let us bring all to Christ, that, to his own glory, he may heal the former and supply the latter.

CHAP. XVI.—Ver. 3. What amazing blindness and obstinacy hinders your discerning, from the ancient prophecies fulfilled in me, and from my numerous miracles, that the Messiah is now come to set up his kingdom among you, and that your ruin them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

10 [e] Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

11 How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?

12 Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

13 ¶ When Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi,* he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man, am?

14 And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter,† and upon this rock‡ I will build my church; and the gates of hell§ shall not prevail against it.

19 And I will give unto thee the keys‖ of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

20 [f] Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man* that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 ¶ From that time forth began Jesus [g] to show unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke† him, saying, [h] Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, [i] Get thee behind me, Satan;‡ thou art an offence§ unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 ¶ [k] Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25 [l] For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

26 [m] For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

27 [n] For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; [o] and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28 ▼ Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming‖ in his kingdom.

§ That councils were often held, and laws administered in the gates of cities, is unquestionable. The phrase "gates of hell" has, therefore, been generally interpreted of the malice and plots of Satan and his agents against our Lord and his church. It seems, however, more natural to understand by it literally the gates of death—of the grave—which, though they should apparently conquer and enclose our Lord first, and afterwards all his members, would yet be utterly unable to prevail against his resurrection, and afterwards that of his mystical body the church. Eph. 1. 22.—Ed.

‖ I will give unto thee the keys.—This was a personal promise to Peter, and not extending to the other apostles. He received keys, and not simply a key; because there were two gates to be opened—the Jewish and the Gentile. And the word of our Lord was literally fulfilled when Peter applied the key to the Jewish gate (Acts 2. 14—41); and afterwards when he applied it to the Gentile gate, (Acts 10. 1—48. & 11. 1—18) which opening being once completed, Peter's personal commission to that work necessarily ceased. (See Rev. 3. 7.) The remaining part of the commission was common to Peter and the other apostles. See chap. 18. 18. where the address is not to Peter alone, but to all the apostles.—Ed.

is hastening apace for rejecting him! 18, 19. Upon this my person, and the truth which you have confessed concerning it, will I establish my gospel church, in all its ordinances, and believing members, as upon a sure, immovable, and everlasting foundation; and neither the policy nor force of devils or men, nor the power of death, can remove them from it, nor root my interest out of the world. And I will authorize you and your fellow-disciples, and other faithful ministers, in my name, to declare what practices are lawful and what not; and so to charge men with, or acquit them from, guilt in your preaching; and to inflict censures on the scandalous, and absolve the penitent. And whatever is done agreeably to my laws, shall be ratified in heaven, and confirmed in the last judgment. 20. He prohibited them from declaring that he was the Messiah, lest his enemies should be too early provoked to destroy him; lest his carnal admirers should tumultuously attempt to make him a king; and lest the Jews should beforehand be prejudiced against the testimony of the disciples. 23. In this, actuated by Satan, and serving his interest, you act the part of an adversary to me, from a regard to carnal honour, ease, or pleasure, attempting to rob me and my Father of our intended honour in the salvation of sinners. 24—26. And as I must be perfected by sufferings, every one, that heartily resolves to be my disciple, must deny his own carnal interests, wisdom, and will, and with faith and patience, and resignation to God's will, readily submit to whatever losses and persecution he may meet with in following my example and obeying my commands; for he that attempts to preserve his temporal enjoyments, or life, by sinful compliances and apostasy, shall thereby plunge himself into endless destruction; and he that, on account of his faith in, or obedience to, me, readily parts with his temporal life, shall obtain everlasting life in heaven as his gracious reward: for what could all the riches, honours, and pleasures, which this world affords, avail a man, if, through his inordinate affection to them, he should lose the welfare, peace, and happiness of his immortal soul? or by what could he redeem his soul from the damnation of hell? 27, 28. For I, who am now attended with all the mean circumstances and sinless infirmities of human nature, will, in the last day, gloriously appear, and adjudge men to eternal life or death, according as their works shall manifest them righteous or wicked; as an earnest of which, some of you present shall, before you die, see me appear gloriously transfigured, and powerfully erecting my gospel church in the abolition of ceremonial ordinances, and awfully destroying the city, temple, and nation of the Jews, for their obstinacy and unbelief.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Wicked men of every sort heartily unite against Jesus, his interests, and people. And men, who contemn sufficient evidence of divine truth, generally insist upon more. The wisest, with respect to temporal concerns, are often quite blind and stupid with respect to what is plain, but spiritual. And it is just that Christ should quickly abandon men who remain obstinate in their unbelief. It is very absurd for the children of God to indulge carnal fears about the necessaries of this life, when his remarkable former interpositions have outdone every expectation or wish. Alas! what diversified and ignorant conceptions of Christ prevail with many church members! But happy are they who are divinely enlightened, united to, and built on him as their sure foundation. No plots, no attempts of hell or earth, can ruin them. All the powers, all the ordinances or officers, which he has granted to his church, concur to their establishment and happiness. His sufferings purchased it, and his glories secure it. God lifts up his people, and casts them down again. And never are they more ready to stumble than after they have been highly honoured by God. Left but a moment to themselves, they bend under the power of the devil. Maxims of carnal policy, and desires of temporal ease and honour, strongly tempt them to shun hardships in religion. But self-denial and obediential submission to crosses are principal articles in the following of Christ. If we hope to live and reign with him in his kingdom of glory, we must be ready to endure tribulation and death for his sake. To ruin our soul in denying our Redeemer, is infinitely criminal and foolish: nor can created enjoyments ever balance or retrieve our loss. Let me then never barter my soul for a few trifles! for if it be once lost, it is lost—it is damned,—for ever! And even the glories of a Saviour will but secure and aggravate my eternal misery.

AND [a] after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain* apart,

2 And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 [b] And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias† talking with him.

4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is [c] my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

6 And when the disciples heard it, [d] they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man,‡ save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.§

10 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore‖ all things.

12 But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed: [e] likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶ And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord, have mercy on my son; for he is lunatic,* and sore vexed: for oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And [f] I brought him to thy disciples,† and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, O faithless and perverse‡ generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? Bring him hither to me.

18 And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

19 Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?

20 And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief:§ for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed,‖ ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible* unto you.

21 Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

22 ¶ And while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men;

23 And they shall kill him; and the third day he shall be raised again. And [g] they were exceeding sorry.

24 ¶ And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received tribute-money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your Master pay tribute?†

25 He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: ‡ that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

a Mark 9. 2—10. Luke 9. 28—36.

* Tabor, in the south of Galilee, has been regarded, from an early period, as the mount of the transfiguration. But it is more probable that it took place in the north of Galilee—as the narrative (comp. ch. 16. 13. & 17. 22), evidently seems to refer to some mountain not far from Cæsarea Philippi, which lay towards the range of Lebanon (comp. ch. 16. 13. & 17. 22); and, after the transfiguration, it is said (Mark 9. 30. 33) that "they departed and passed through Galilee," and then came to Capernaum, on the north of the sea of Galilee. Had the mountain of transfiguration been in Galilee, would the evangelist have said "they departed and passed through" it? Would he not have said "they departed and went to Capernaum?" Besides, it is said, they went up to a mountain apart;—whereas Tabor was certainly, at the period, an inhabited town and fortress, and, therefore, peculiarly unfitted for retirement.—Ed.

† This appearance gives evidence the most decided to the most comfortable doctrine of recognition of Christian friends in a future state. For if Moses and Elias, who had been utter strangers to them, were yet made known to the disciples, why should the identity of any dear child of God be lost in the multitude of the redeemed? —Ed.

* That the moon exercises a powerful influence upon some nervous disorders, is unquestionable. This effect is generally attributed to her attraction, which is seen to be so powerful as to influence the tides. It is, however, rather more probable that her influence upon disease is merely that of her brilliancy during the night, which irritates the nervous system, produces sleeplessness, and thereby aggravates the symptoms. The symptoms mentioned, Luke 9. 39, indicate a disease resembling epilepsy; but both there and in ver. 18, the disease is declared to be under the control of a malignant spirit. At this infidels and sceptics may scoff; but what pretensions have they to know anything of the invisible world? When they can cure the disease with a word of rebuke, they may question the Scripture account of its origin.—Ed.

‡ The disciples were men of "little faith," but neither absolutely faithless nor perverse. These words were, therefore, addressed to the scribes and their infidel and cruel partisans, (ver. 10—13), and who appear (Mark 9. 14.) to have mocked at the failure of the disciples in their attempts to cast out the devil. —Ed.

§ Because of your unbelief.—This evidently appears to include the disciples under ver. 17; but the original is not "your unbelief," but "the unbelief;" that is, of the father of the child, and of the multitude, as appears from Mark 9. 22—26.—Ed.

‖ Faith as a grain of mustard-seed.—A faith which, however small, is possessed of the vital principle, and receives the blessing that renders it fruitful and capable of an increase unlimited by anything but the power of God. See the primitive form of blessing, Gen. 1. 22. 28.—Ed.

† This didrachm, in value about 1*s.* 3*d.*, seems to have been the temple tribute required Exod. 30. 13; for our Lord intimates (ver. 26) that he and Peter were the children of him in whose name it was exacted, which he could not have said had it been a Roman tax.—Ed.

‡ A stater—value about 2*s.* 7*d.* British, and sufficient to pay for our Lord and Peter.—Ed.

CHAP. XVII.—Ver. 17. He here rebukes the father and his disciples for their weakness of faith, and the audience for their obstinate unbelief and readiness to reflect upon him in the weakness of his disciples. 20, 21. By a sincere faith in my power and promise, and through my assistance, ye shall be able to discharge and approve your office in doing things seemingly impossible. But such kind of faith must be exercised in the use of much fervent prayer and humiliation, without which you cannot expect to dislodge devils of so powerful and obstinate a kind as this is.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—How mixed was the lot of our Redeemer in this world! How quickly lifted up and cast down again! Now he shines in glory; anon he is plunged into sufferings and death. Now devils and distempers flee before his infinite power and grace: anon he is discredited, or ill understood, by weak disciples, and despised by faithless and perverse Jews. Possessed of all the fulness of Godhead—of all the riches of heaven and earth—he humbly, but miraculously, borrows his tribute-money from a fish, to avoid giving offence. But his resurrection from the dead wiped away all his reproach, and rendered illustrious his deepest debasement. If Moses and Elias have, in solemn manner, resigned to him all their powers and honours, let me hear him as my great, my only divine prophet! Let me rejoice in his dearness to God, and exalted dominion over men! Let me lift up my heart, and retire from the world, to hold fellowship with him, and prolong his visits to the utmost! Let no danger, no guilt, terrify my heart, while I enjoy the great Propitiation and Saviour! If the choicest saints forsake me, it is enough that Jesus remains to comfort me. Ravishing discoveries of him on earth are indeed but shortlived; and suffering is the certain fate of all his followers: I must return to depths of temptation, desertion, and trouble, in which my fellow-Christians have often laboriously struggled with stubborn devils and indwelling lusts. But if I or my friends experience their uncommon cruelty, let me, with fervour and humility, supplicate Jesus for relief. And let want or weakness of faith, which mar my duty, and obstruct my mercies, be the grief, the burden, the detestation of my heart. And while, through manifold tribulations, I follow him to his kingdom and glory, let me carefully avoid whatever could prejudice others against him, his doctrines, or ways. It is better to wave my right, and open my purse, than dishonour my Redeemer.

CHAPTER XVIII.

(1) The greatest in the kingdom of heaven: 1—6. (2) Offences to be avoided at any personal sacrifice: 7—9. (3) God's children must not be despised: 10—14. (4) How to deal with an offending brother in relation to the church: 15—20. (5) How often Christians must extend forgiveness to an offending brother: 21—35.

A. M. cir. 4036.
A. D. cir. 32.

AT the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?*

2 And Jesus called [a] a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children,† ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And [b] whoso shall receive one such little child‡ in my name receiveth me.

6 But whoso shall offend§ one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone‖ were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Wo unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come;¶ but wo to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 Wherefore if thy hand† or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire.

10 ¶ Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones: for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

11 For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 How think ye? If a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

* That is, in what they conceived the kingdom of heaven would be—a visible kingdom, with full opportunity for worldly talents and ambition.—Ed.

a Ch. 19. 14. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10. Prov. 8. 17. & 23. 26.

† As little children.—The characteristics of children, as distinguished from adults, are chiefly these: 1. Obeying when called. 2. Ready to stand where placed. 3. Unconscious of worldly distinctions, ambition, and cares. 4. Teachable. 5. Imitative. 6. Confiding. 7. Dependent.—And as a child is, ordinarily, to an adult, so is a converted to an unconverted man.—Ed.

b Ch. 10. 40. & 25. 40, 45.

‡ One (who is by grace) such little child. See ver. 6.—Ed.

§ Not "whoso shall offend (that is, give offence to) one of these little ones"—but, "whoso shall cause one of these little ones to stumble," by tempting him in any manner.—Ed.

‖ A mode of punishment by drowning, not recognised in the Jewish law—but which, as practised by the Syrians, Greeks, and Egyptians, must have been familiar to them. The millstones in the East are generally about eighteen inches in diameter, by three in thickness.—Ed.

¶ It must needs be (because of the wickedness of men) that offences (scandals) come.—Even as a bitter fountain must, necessarily, send forth bitter water.—Ed.

† The Hebrews were accustomed to represent the affections of the mind by those parts of the body that were most affected by them—(see Rom. 6. 13. & 7. 23). Hence "the bowels" denoted compassion; "the heart," love; "An evil eye," envy, (Mat. 20. 15) covetousness, or other unlawful desire (1 John 2. 16). Hence, "the hand," and "the foot," were used to signify all the powers of walking and of movement. "To cut off," or "pluck out," is, therefore, to "mortify, through the Spirit," those several "deeds of the body," that we may live to God.—Ed.

d Num. 16. 33. Acts 8. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 20.

† This is an evident allusion to the constitution and discipline of the Jewish synagogue, as is testified by the Talmud. This discipline was specially applied in cases where the law made no direct provision—of which, amongst other cases, Maimonides gives the following:—"If any refuse to feed his children, they reprove, they shame, they urge him—they make proclamation against him in the synagogue:—'A. B. is a cruel man, and will not feed his children—more cruel than the unclean birds, for they nourish their young ones.'"—Ed.

f Luke 17. 4. ver. 15.

‖ There does not appear in Scripture any instance of a man sold for payment of his debts. A man, however, might sell himself (Ex. 21. 2, 6. Lev. 25. 47); and if a debtor could not pay, the creditor might appropriate his service, but could not sell him. The sale authorized (Ex. 22. 2) is not of a debtor, but a thief who could not pay the legal fine. Unless, therefore, the law imply that the right which a creditor acquired over the person and services of his debtor, he might transfer to another, as he might his other properties,—this case must be understood, not as an illustration taken from the law of Moses, but from the practice of eastern monarchs, whose will is the only law. And this last supposition is rendered probable, if not confirmed, by our Lord's reference to "the kings of the earth," ch. 17. 25.—Ed.

¶ There is no direct mention in Scripture of a wife being sold with her husband; but from Exod. 21, it must be inferred. For there it is said, "If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; but if he were married, his wife shall go out with him;" which surely implies that, if married before his servitude, his wife had "gone in" with him.—Ed.

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones* should perish.

15 ¶ Moreover, [c] if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it [d] unto the church:† but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

18 Verily I say unto you, [e] Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

19 Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I‡ in the midst of them.

21 ¶ Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? [f] till seven times?

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven.

23 Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him ten thousand§ talents:

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold,‖ and his wife* and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

Chap. XVIII.—Ver. 1—6. His disciples having contended which of them should be preferred to the highest places of honour and trust in the temporal kingdom, which they imagined he would quickly set up, Jesus presented a little child before them, and told them that unless their minds were graciously weaned from such carnal ambition, and rendered truly humble, after the appearance of that child, they could neither be members nor honoured officers in his gospel kingdom, nor be admitted into the glories of the heavenly state; and that whoever of them affectionately regarded any of his humble, however mean, disciples, as such, should be esteemed as honouring himself; and that whoever should dishearten such weak, but humble believers, and cause them to stumble into sin, should be exposed to the most certain and fearful punishments. 7—9. Dreadful hurt shall the world sustain through the corrupt opinions and practices by which Satan and his instruments will attempt to discourage, injure, and insnare weak believers; but most dreadful shall be the punishment of that man whose sinful and mischievous behaviour perverts and draws others into evil. If therefore anything, however useful or dear to you, tend to make you injure the cause of truth, peace, and holiness, to the grieving or tempting of my people, it would be much better for you to part with it, by the most self-denying and painful mortification, than, by indulging it, to hazard your own eternal damnation. 10—14. It is infinitely criminal and dangerous to contemn or discourage weak believers, whom the angels of God, on all occasions, watch over and minister unto; whom the Son of God came to save from the depths of ruin, and takes an especial pleasure in preserving and recovering when they have gone astray; and whom the Father, with infinite pleasure, hath determined to render eternally happy. 15—17. If any of your fellow-professors of the true religion, by any sinful conduct, grieve or tempt you to sin, deal freely with him in a secret manner, in order to render him duly sensible of, and penitent for, it: and if he appear so, with joy renew your affection, and conceal his transgressions from others. If he appear obstinate, take one or two prudent Christians along with you, and deal earnestly and plainly with his conscience, to render him penitent. If he still continue obstinate in his sin, lay his case before that church judicatory to which he is immediately subjected; and if, notwithstanding all they can do to convince and reclaim him, he still continue obstinate, let him be solemnly cast out of the church by excommunication; and let all her members avoid all unnecessary fellowship with him, even in civil things, that he may be ashamed, and made to consider his conduct. 18—20. And that the censures may be confirmed and ratified by me and my Father, it is necessary that they be regularly passed in my name, and carried on with much fervent prayer. 23—35. The scope of this parable is to represent, that nothing is more base, criminal, and dangerous, than for such, as profess to believe God's remission of all their high crimes against him, to resent the petty injuries done to themselves; and that, though the revengefulness of believers shall not be punished with eternal damnation, it will expose them to fearful chastisements in this life.

26 The servant therefore fell down and *worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant [g]was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him an hundred [h]pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30 And he would not; but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, [i]they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

33 [k]Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the [l]tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 [m]So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.†

† As forgiveness from God is the chief desire of a sinner—so forgiveness of injuries is the chief test of a Christian. If a man asks forgiveness from the God he has offended, and do not extend forgiveness to the brother who has offended him—he plainly condemns himself, as utterly undeserving, since the measure he requires from God, he will not return to man.—Ed.

AND it came to pass, [a]that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan;[*]

2 And great multitudes followed him, and he healed them there.

3 ¶ The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?[†]

4 And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, [b]that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female,

5 And said, [c]For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and [d]they twain shall be one flesh?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, [e]let not man put asunder.

7 They say unto him, [f]Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?

8 He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered[*] you to put away your wives: [g]but from the beginning it was not so.

9 And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth[†] her which is put away doth commit adultery.

10 His disciples say unto him, If the case of the man be so with his wife,[‡] [h]it is not good to marry.

11 But he said unto them, [i]All men cannot[§] receive this saying, save they to whom it is given.

12 For there are some [k]eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb; and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13 ¶ Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them.[‖]

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.[*]

15 And [l]he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

16 ¶ [m]And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good?[†] [n]there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—An eager ambition after worldly honour is very unlike the disciples and kingdom of Christ. And there is great need of a daily conversion to God from the errors of our way. What tender care Jesus takes of his saints, especially if weak and humble! His angels watch over, protect, and minister to them. At his Father's commandment he died for them, and seeks them out when they wander. He hears their prayers, and attends their societies. It is inexpressibly dangerous to grieve their hearts or to make them stumble into sin, or for them to indulge any darling corruption. But it is very base and criminal for Christians to pay so little regard to their God and their Saviour's rules for removing of scandals; and to be more careful to render an offender infamous than to bring him to repentance. Thrice happy are the churches where these rules are attended to without passion or prejudice, and with a readiness to forgive. Awful are church censures when regularly passed; and heinous is their guilt, and infinite their danger, who dare wilfully incur, or profanely despise, what is ratified in heaven. How inconceivably great and many are our offences against God! He keeps an exact account of them all, in every circumstance of them! And infinite is the mercy of a reprieve, and especially of a redemption, from their awful consequences in hell. But detestable, both to God and men, is a revengeful temper or conduct in a professed Christian: and such may expect great plagues and torments from God in time or eternity.

CHAP. XIX.—Ver. 17. Why do ye call me good in this emphatic manner, when you conceive me to be a mere man? There is none good in and from himself, but God alone. But if you desire to work righteousness in order to procure a title to 25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

27 ¶ Then answered Peter, and said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

28 And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed‡ me in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

† Some, for camel, read cable, — the Greek words differing but in one letter —but this change is without any sufficient authority. The meaning is simply this: "The matter is naturally impossible, while the camel lives. To effect it by artificial means, were the camel dead, would not, to the chemist, be a task of difficulty. Even so, while the rich man lives in the love of the world, his entrance into the kingdom of heaven is a natural impossibility. But as soon as, "by the cross of Christ he is crucified (and thereby dead) to the world"—his entrance into that kingdom is not only possible but secure. See ver. 26.—Ed.

‡ A change in the punctuation, which the original warrants, and the sense seems to demand, would render the passage thus: "Ye who have followed me, in the regeneration (the time of final restoration to glory), when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit on twelve thrones," &c. That some eminent expositors understand by "the regeneration," the present gospel state, is not to be forgotten—but that it refers to a state still future, seems certain from the fact, that, in "the regeneration" described, the apostles are, in some sense, to be changed from witnesses to judges, and, as such, to sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes—a circumstance that has never been hitherto fulfilled; and for the accomplishment of which we must, therefore, look to futurity.—Ed.

FOR [a] the kingdom of heaven is like unto [b] a man that is an householder, which went out [c] early in the morning to hire [d] labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when [e] he had agreed with the labourers for a [f] penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the [*] third† hour, and saw others standing idle‡ in the marketplace,

5 Again he went out [§] about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

6 And about the [h] eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when [i] even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they [k] murmured [‖] against the goodman of the house, eternal life, you must perfectly keep all the commandments of God. 21. To mark your perfect love to your neighbour, and that your affections are weaned from earthly enjoyments, go sell your whole estate, and give it to the poor in these distressing times, and come and follow me in my poverty and sufferings. 22—30. Ye who, through the regenerating influences of my Spirit, have attended and assisted me in my attempts to reform the nation, and introduce the gospel dispensation, shall, upon my ascension to heaven, be honoured with the distinguished effusion of the Holy Ghost, to render you leading officers in founding the gospel church: and in my appearing to destroy Jerusalem, your predictions shall be fulfilled, and your characters vindicated. In the latter days, your Jewish brethren shall be converted by your doctrines; and in the last judgment, ye shall be most honoured approvers of the sentence which I shall pass according to my gospel dispensed by you. And all they who conscientiously suffer losses in their temporal interests or enjoyments for my sake, shall in this life have their losses graciously compensated, to their unspeakable advantage, in inward contentment, and divine consolations and hopes, if not in other external comforts, and in eternal glories in the future state. And yet, to manifest the sovereignty of redeeming grace in all this, many Jews who are first called, and apparently more fitted to receive me, shall be rejected for their unbelief; while the Gentile strangers to the covenants of promise, shall, through faith, be admitted to all the blessings of my kingdom of grace and glory. And even some Jews, more early converted, shall have less honour or usefulness in my church than some Gentiles, who shall be afterwards brought to believe.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Indefatigable was the gracious Redeemer in doing good wherever he came; prudent in avoiding the snares of his malicious enemies; careful to honour, regulate, and perpetuate every divine institution which related to the raising up of a holy seed in his church; and delighted with the early and earnest dedication of children to himself. It is cruel then to deprive young subjects of his kingdom of the seal of his covenant; and criminal to pretend that his incarnation, labours, and glory, abridge the privileges of his chosen. Very important and necessary is a deep concern about the true way to everlasting life; nor can it be obtained but by a perfect righteousness, answerable to the whole law of God: and where can this be found but in Christ? Alas, that multitudes should hope to find it in their own works! and yet those who highly extol and heartily trust in their good works, very seldom remarkably abound in them. And their defect quickly appears if they be tried in what lies opposite to their carnal inclinations and interests. The riches and love of this world are most powerful hinderances to our care about, or progress towards heaven: and only almighty grace can conquer the heart and remove the difficulty.—In faithfully following Christ, we must expect manifold losses and troubles in this world. But if we undergo them from love to him, his truths and ways, his blessings here and glory hereafter will inexpressibly more than compensate. And, whether we be first or last in time or in dignity, all must be regulated by the exceeding riches of his grace.

CHAP. XX.—Ver. 1—16. The vineyard here is the church, formed by infinite wisdom, power, and grace, from the world that lieth in wickedness, and furnished with divine oracles, ordinances, and officers; hedged about by God's special protection, government, and discipline, and cultivated by his Spirit, ministers, and people. The 3d, 6th, 9th, and 11th hours, may represent the patriarchal, Mosaic, apostolic, and millennial periods of the church: or the periods of human life, childhood, youth, middle, and old age, in which different persons are called and converted to Christ, that they may serve him in his church. But as the kingdom of heaven chiefly denotes the gospel church, the 3d, 6th and 9th hours chiefly denote 13 But he answered one of them, and said, [m] Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last even as unto thee.

15 Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? [n] Is thine eye evil, because I am good?*

16 So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.†

17 ¶ [o] And Jesus, going up to Jerusalem, took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death,

19 And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶ [p] Then came to him the mother‡ of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, [q] in thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, [r] We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.§

24 And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 [s] But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;*

27 And whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant:

28 [t] Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom† for many.

29 ¶ [u] And as they departed‡ from Jericho, a great multitude followed him:

30 And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way-side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, [x] O Lord, thou son of David.

31 And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

32 And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What [y] will ye that I shall do unto you?

33 They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

34 So Jesus had compassion on them, [z] and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

She presents the character of an ambitious, but affectionate mother, who seems to have trained her sons to her own high aspirings; for they evidently join with her (ver. 22), and assert their ability to fulfil the conditions of their elevation, though, as yet, totally ignorant of their nature, and, as their own experience demonstrated, (Mat. 26. 56), sadly unfitted for the task.—Note. Men of ardent and aspiring minds, when subdued by grace, do not altogether lose their original character—but have their desires and energies directed to new and better objects. those periods in which the Jews were called and converted by the ministry of John and Christ, or of his apostles for some years after his ascension. The 11th hour may denote that period in which the Gentiles have, or shall be, converted to Christ by the apostles, and other gospel ministers, after they had been for many ages abandoned to idolatries, and destitute of the ordinances and calls of the gospel. The penny of reward denotes all the privileges of the gospel church, and all the blessings of grace and glory. At God's giving these to the Gentiles equally as to themselves, who had been long the peculiar people of God, and who had long served him in burdensome ceremonies, the Jews, and even the real converts among them, exceedingly murmured; not considering that all the favours of God spring entirely from his own free grace; and that many are outwardly called by the ministry of the gospel, and made members of the visible church, who fall short, through their self-conceit and unbelief, while few are chosen of God to eternal life, and effectually called, according to his purpose. 21—23. Let my sons, who are now thy constant favourites, be next in honour and authority to thyself in that kingdom which thou art about to erect. Jesus replied, that they appeared quite ignorant of the nature and honours of his kingdom, and that they must expect terrible persecutions, reproaches, and distresses, as he himself had, or should suffer; but that all the honours of his kingdom would be conferred by him merely as had from eternity been settled in the purpose of God. 24—28. The other ten apostles being filled with envy and resentment against the two brothers, for attempting to procure a pre-eminence above themselves, Jesus meekly reproved them altogether: and told them, that a carnal and heathenish ambition for lordly dominion over others, was very contrary to the nature and design of his spiritual kingdom; and that their only proper way to become truly great and honourable in his church, was to be most humble, self-denied, and active in doing even the meanest services for the benefit of others;—even as he himself, notwithstanding his infinite glory, had come into this world to submit to the meanest services, and even an ignominious death, for the redemption of multitudes of poor sinners.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Free and sovereign is the redeeming grace of God: the most unlikely are often effectually called, and that sooner or later, according to his good pleasure. And the latest called and converted often attain the highest privileges of grace and glory; while others, who seemed to stand fair for them, fall short. But how absurd is it for any to complain, when all is a gift of free grace! Gospel hearers have great need to take heed, and to strive to enter in at the strait gate, when so few of their number are ever effectually called according to the purpose of God! While I enjoy my life, and have the offers of salvation, let me flee to the once suffering, but now exalted Redeemer for relief! In old age I may perhaps be converted; but after death it is impossible—all is then lost for ever! Alas! that the followers of the lowly and suffering Jesus should so indulge themselves in carnal imaginations and worldly ambition; and that clergymen, by their pride, should so plague that church which he hath purchased by his blood, and taught humility by his example! Let me vie with others in humility, holiness, and usefulness, and in patient suffering, in hopes of a crown of life. Deeply sensible of my maladies, let me always apply to Jesus Christ for relief. Confident faith, deep humility, and fervent prayer, never return from him without a gracious answer. And the more he does for me, let me cleave the closer to his word, his Spirit, his person, his example, his ordinances, and cause.

This tree represents the Jews, who made great professions of their regard to God, and readiness to receive the Messiah, but nevertheless brought forth no good fruits of faith or holiness; wherefore our Redeemer, by his curse, quickly ejected them from their church state, and rendered them fearfully miserable. 28—32. The first of these sons represents the notorious sinners of the Gentiles, who, after long professed rebellion against God, their Creator and Preserver, did at last repent and turn to the Lord by the gospel: and the second represents the Jews, who, notwithstanding their high professions of readiness to serve God, did not believe in his Son, nor bring forth good works. 33—41, 43. 38 [n]But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

AND Jesus answered, [a]and spake unto them again by parables, and said,

2 [b]The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

3 And sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden[*] to the wedding: and they would not come.

4 Again he sent forth [c]other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready; come unto the marriage.

5 But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise:

6 [d]And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

7 But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burnt up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.

9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 [e]So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding-garment:

12 And he saith unto him, Friend,[†] [f]how camest thou in hither not having a wedding-garment? And he was speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 For many are called, but few are chosen.[‡]

15 ¶ Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

Now that it must include "the righteousness of God, which is unto, and upon all them that believe," is certain; but before it can be understood of the personal righteousness of any believer, it is necessary to inquire what "personal righteousness," as distinct from "the righteousness of God," can possibly mean. In truth, it has neither meaning nor existence. The only righteousness of a believer is the righteousness of God. The personal righteousness of a sinner, like the personal riches of a pauper, is an absolute contradiction in terms.—Ed.

he sent his prophets to remind them of their duty, direct them in it, and encourage them to it; but all of these they persecuted and murdered one after another. After a long interval he sent his Son, as the last expedient for rendering them penitent and fruitful. But when they saw him speaking and acting with divine power and authority, and extolled by the people as the Messiah, their rulers in church and state resolved to establish their own authority, by excommunicating, persecuting, and murdering him: on account of which, God, about forty years after his death, deprived them of all their privileges in church and state, and by sword, famine, pestilence, and captivity, rendered them dreadfully miserable; and admitted the Gentiles into the gospel church in their stead. 42, 44. Notwithstanding all the abuse and persecution which Christ suffered from the Jewish rulers till he was put to death upon the cross, yet was he exalted to glory, and made Head over all things to his church. They who, through ignorance and prejudice, undervalued him in his state of humiliation, endangered their souls: but they who obstinately reject him in his exalted state after the wonderful effusion of the Spirit, draw down upon themselves fearful and inevitable misery.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Let me at once behold in Jesus, the omniscient, the all-commanding, the temple-purifying, the miracle-working, God; and the weak man, pinched with poverty and hunger! Yea, the true Messiah riding on an ass, attended with shouts of salvation in order to die for the people! But what ignorant and diversified views men have of him! And how is the church of God often corrupted, and her ordinances profaned, while they, who ought to reform others, hate to be reformed, or to hear of others more devout than themselves, or to see God perform his promises to, and glorify, his Son! Yea, careless clergymen are apt to oppose every faithful administration of the truth, unless shame or fear restrain them. And the most ignorant and notorious sinners are frequently turned to the Lord and his ways, when forward professors draw back unto their everlasting perdition. But if God bestow his means of salvation upon men, he will demand their careful improvement of them. And if his ministers be contemned and persecuted, he will unchurch the persecutors at last, and put others in their room. Yea, let men trample the Redeemer under foot as they may, God will cause him to be highly exalted, and made the Connector and glory of his church. If men will not bow to the outstretched sceptre of his grace, they must, self-condemned, fearfully perish under the weight of his wrath. And awful is the prospect when faithful reproofs do but exasperate the reproved: and when God must make the awe of inferiors restrain the rage of persecuting superiors.

CHAP. XXII.—Ver. 1—14. The marriage-feast denotes the gospel dispensation, in which Jesus Christ, as the Bridegroom of souls, and all the rich fulness of God in him, are offered by God to sinful men. The servants are John Baptist, Christ, and his apostles and ministers, who invite and encourage men to receive the same. All things were ready when Christ had suffered, risen again, and ascended to glory, and the Holy Ghost was poured out in a plentiful and miraculous manner. The refusers and contemners of the feast, and murderers of the messengers, are the Jews, who not only rejected the offers of the gospel, but persecuted and murdered the preachers of it; and on that account their cities

25 Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman died also.

28 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? § for they all had her.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, [a] The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:

a Ch. 2. 4. ver. 13, 15, 23, 27, 29. Neh. 8. 4. Deut. 33. 5. Perhaps it means, that they were civil governors, as Moses was.

and temple were soon afterwards burnt, themselves murdered in multitudes, their land desolated, and their constitution, in both church and state, miserably broken to pieces. Those called from the highways are the sinful Gentiles of every rank and condition, or greater and lesser sinners, who, by the preaching of the gospel, are invited and converted to Christ and his church. The man without the wedding-garment denotes hypocritical professors, who take their place as members of the church, without receiving Christ and his righteousness, or being renewed in holiness after his image; and whose end will be redoubled and everlasting destruction. 20, 21. Since, by your using the Roman emperor's money, ye have acknowledged yourselves his subjects, therefore ye ought, in civil concerns, to return him the tribute of that which, by the authority and protection of his government, ye receive from him; as well as in religious concerns, to render unto God the homage and acknowledgments which are due to him as Lord of all. 31, 32. God's calling himself the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, after they had been long dead, plainly imported that they continued still the sons of God, waiting for the redemption of their bodies; and that their bodies, which still remained in covenant with him, as well as their souls, could not be suffered always to abide in a state of death. 40. These two commandments include the substance of the whole moral law, which is fundamental to all true religion. They include the whole natural law, which was originally written in the heart of man; the obligation of which can never be dissolved, and which all the revelations of God are founded on, and designed to enforce. 46. The scribes and Pharisees were either ignorant or unwilling to acknowledge that the Messiah, who, in his human nature, was a descendant of David, in his divine nature was God over all.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Infinite is the mercy of God in making a new covenant and New Testament dispensation of his grace for sinners of mankind; and that his invitations to partake of it are so unlimited, earnest, and so often repeated! Fearful then is their guilt, and dreadful their punishment, who decline his offers, persecute his ministers, or presume to be Christians without Jesus' righteousness imputed to, and his grace implanted in, their souls. Why should we dissemble before the all-seeing Redeemer? Rather let us tremble to reflect, that so many are outwardly, and so few effectually, called according to his purpose:—that many, instead of believing the gospel, should occupy themselves in disputes against the truth, or endeavour to entangle its preachers. And all, but especially ministers, have great need to answer captious questions with caution; and duly to connect our duty to magistrates with that which we owe to God. And it is no wonder that men are embarrassed who are ignorant of God's power and word.—Happy is that new-covenant relation to God, which secures blessedness here and to eternity, when all the fashions and connexions of this world shall be no more! But how extensive is our duty to God and to men—and how delightful to a renewed heart! Love to my God and my neighbour is the fulfilling of the law. Great is the mystery of godliness—God made manifest in the flesh! What think I of this

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you[a] observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

4 [b]For they bind heavy burdens[†] and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their phylacteries,[‡] and enlarge the borders[§] of their garments,

6 And love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi,[‖] Rabbi.

8 But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father[a] upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters:[†] for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

12 And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

13 ¶ But wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer:[‡] therefore ye shall receive the [a]greater damnation.

15 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.[§]

16 Wo unto you, [d]ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold[‖] of the temple, he is a debtor!

17 Ye fools and blind! for whether is greater, the gold, [e]or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

18 And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty.

19 Ye fools and blind! for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift?

[‡] The Jewish phylacteries (so called from a Greek word signifying to keep or guard) are said to have originated from the literal understanding of Exodus 13. 9. They were little rolls of parchment, on which were written certain portions of the law, and were worn on the forehead or wrist of the left arm. The passages written on them were Exod. 13. 2—10, 11—16. Deut. 6. 4—9. & 11. 13—21.—Ed.

[§] The fringes required by the law. See additional note on Num. 15. 38.—Ed.

[‖] Rabbi is derived from a word first signifying great, and, by consequence, superior, master. The Jews have its origin as a personal title, no farther back than the time of the famous Hillel, or rather of his son Simeon, supposed to be the same who took the child Jesus in his arms in the temple (Luke 2. 25—32). There were three gradations of the title—Rab, Rabbi, and Rabban—which latter title was bestowed upon no more than seven, all the descendants of Hillel—among whom were this Simeon, and Gamaliel, the instructor of Paul.—Ed.

[a] Call no man father upon earth, so as to receive his instruction, and obey his commands, upon the ground of his official authority.—Ed.

[†] Masters—rather, "leaders;" claiming to be guides of the judgments and consciences of men, as the scribes and Pharisees did; telling the people that they must believe all their doctrines, and obey all their injunctions, as the teachings and commandments of God.—Ed.

[‡] The prayers of some of the Pharisees are said to have extended to three hours. Yet it is not their length that is condemned; for our Lord continued all night praying (Luke 6. 12); the thing condemned is the principle of their length—a pretence of devotion which was not felt.—Ed.

[a] Ch. 11. 23, 24. Luke 12. 47.

[§] Twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.—You are guilty of one hell-deserving sin, hypocrisy—he of apostasy from his own religion, to which you have persuaded him, and hypocrisy in yours, in which you have initiated and trained him. Besides, the proselytes became doubly more zealous in opposing the truth and propagating error.—Ed.

[a] Mint.—A well-known plant, both of the field and garden, of various species, generally possessing an agreeable aromatic odour—upon account of which it was strewed on the floors of the synagogues, besides being used for culinary and medicinal purposes.—Anise. This should not have been translated anise, but dill, an umbelliferous plant, the seeds of which are used both for culinary purposes, as are the seeds of the caraway, and also as an agreeable addition to several medicines.—Cummin. Another umbelliferous plant, resembling fennel, but smaller. Its seeds have a bitterish pungent taste, accompanied with an aromatic flavour. The tithe of these plants was not mentioned by Moses; but the Pharisees, in proof of their righteousness by the law (see ver. 28. Rom. 10. 3, 5), insisted much upon these trifles, while the weightier matters of justice, humanity, and fidelity, they frequently overlooked or violated.—Ed.

[†] Strain at a gnat.—In the English edition of the Bible, 1568, it is "strain out a gnat"—which is the correct translation. There can scarcely be a doubt that the translators of the authorised version intended to retain this rendering; but the word at having crept in, by a natural typographical error, has ever since continued to be copied.—Ed.

[‡] Swallow a camel.—A proverbial expression for a great sin, sanctioned by a conscience that pretends to great scrupulosity. The Jews would not defile themselves with going into Pilate's judgment-hall (John 18. 28.); but they scrupled not to buy, and shed the blood of the Lord of glory! The inquisition would not defile themselves with blood, but they condemned the innocent as a heretic, delivered him over to the secular arm, commended him to mercy, and knew he would be burned!—Ed.

[§] Zechariah, the minor prophet, is called the son of Barachiah (Zech. 1. 1); and the Zechariah mentioned 2 Chr. 24. 20, 21, is called the son of Jehoiada. But as there is no record of any violence having been offered to Zechariah the prophet, it seems more natural to understand the reference of Zechariah the priest, whose violent death was inflicted by a wicked king and idolatrous people, on account of his faithfulness to the worship of Jehovah. His being called the son of Barachias, instead of Jehoiada, is easily accounted for, as Barachias may have been a second name of Jehoiada.—Ed.

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by [f]him that dwelleth therein.

22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

23 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint,[a] and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weighter matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat,[†] and swallow a camel.[‡]

25 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

27 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

29 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous,

30 And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them [g]in the blood of the prophets.

31 Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

32 [h]Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

34 ¶ Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city:

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias,[§] whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

Christ? Is he my Saviour, and my ALL IN ALL? Let me then, in holy diligence, in cautious prudence, and in readiness to render a reason of the hope that is in me, follow him while I live: and endeavour to turn every perplexing question into important and useful hints and inquiries, for my real instruction.

CHAP. XXIII.—Ver. 32—37. Go on then in your fathers' wicked courses, persecuting and murdering me, and the apostles and other ministers whom I will send to preach the gospel among you, till, by your malicious wickedness, ye have rendered the approaching ruin of your nation inevitable; and have, by your approbation of it, rendered yourselves chargeable with all the blood of righteous men shed from the foundation of the world to this time. Ye persecuting rulers and inhabitants of Jerusalem, how often have I, by myself and servants, attempted, in the most earnest and gracious manner, to call you to a state of salvation and comfort in fellowship with me; but ye obstinately refused. 2 And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.†

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you:

5 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

6 And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but [a] the end is not yet.

† While Titus was besieging Jerusalem, he was most anxious to preserve the temple. But when it was consumed, and the city taken, he ordered the foundations both of temple and city to be utterly razed. † The holy place.—Bloomfield understands it to mean the temple—citing, for the use of the phrase, Acts 6. 13. & 21. 28, with the parallel passage, Mark 13. 14. But the parallel passage in Luke 21. 20, seems clearly to point to the investment of Jerusalem, and not to the time when the temple had been taken: wherefore "the holy place" must mean "the holy city." See Ps. 46. 4.—Ed.

‖ The description of the sufferings of the Jews, during the siege of Jerusalem, as detailed by Josephus, an eyewitness, are certainly without parallel in human history. A cruel enemy without—more cruel factions within—gnawing famine, and wasting pestilence! And all this horror of darkness without one gleam of relieving light, beyond the desperate, the ferocious courage, with which the factions assailed one another, and defended their devoted city against their irresistible enemies.—Ed.

¶ Shortened—by the conquest of the city, before pestilence had acquired more malignity, and the Romans had been provoked to exterminate rather than to enslave.—1,100,000 Jews perished miserably in the siege, besides the uncounted multitudes destroyed in other cities.—Ed.

9 Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

11 And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.

12 And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

13 But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world* for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

15 When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place,† (whoso readeth, let him understand,)

16 Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains:‡

17 Let him which is on the house-top§ not come down to take any thing out of his house:

18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

19 And wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day:

21 For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.‖

22 And except those days should be shortened,¶ there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake† those days shall be shortened.

23 Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.

24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold, I have told you before.

26 Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, [b] Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: be-time your city, temple, and nation, shall be consigned to utter destruction! And when I am enthroned with my Father, dreadful shall be the state of your nation, cast out from the church of God, and abandoned to miseries unnumbered; till at last they shall be glad to welcome me into their hearts, and be ready to triumph in my praise: and many of you shall never see me, after my death, till I come in the clouds at the last day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—The highest offices, in both church and state, are often filled up with the worst of men, who are apt to make others stumble at the ordinances or truths of God for their sake. Yea, they who make the greatest noise about morality and virtue, and its influence, to recommend us to God, are in general extremely destitute of it. Rigid imposers of human invention are rarely strict in their own lives. Let then the servants of Jesus Christ always endeavour to manifest their utmost humility, uprightness, and contempt of this world. Let them practise the doctrines they preach, and never attempt to lord it over their hearers or brethren in office. With what pitiful pretences do men varnish over their neglect of real godliness, their dishonesty, persecution, and murder! And fearful are the discoveries which shall be made in the last judgment! Aggravated will be their damnation who oppose the gospel, and hinder others from believing it; and who pervert the oracles of God, seduce their neighbours into wickedness, neglect their hearts, varnish over their wickedness with pretences of devotion and zeal, profane the most solemn worship of God, and conduct all their religion by selfish and secular designs! Infinite is the patience of our Redeemer in long bearing with such; and great his mercy in giving them plain, timely, and frequently repeated, warnings of their danger. But dreadful is the case when whole nations are at last punished for their unbelief and persecution: when Jesus' kind offers and entreaties issue in his depriving them of his ordinances, abandoning them to their own lusts, and casting them into the depths of hell! Yet such must be the end of all despisers of his grace. Let Britain hear and tremble!

CHAP. XXIV.—Before the destruction of Jerusalem, many false teachers and pretended Messiahs appeared, ver. 2, 4, 5, 11, 23—26. There were many wars, commotions, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes, 6, 7. Ministers and other Christians were terribly persecuted; and much apostasy from, and decay of, religion ensued in many places, 9—13. The gospel was preached through the Roman empire and the nations adjacent, 14. The Roman army invaded and laid siege to Jerusalem; and the Christians fled with the utmost haste to the mountains around Judea, 15—20. That destruction was terrible, 21; especially to mothers, 19; threatened ruin to the whole Jewish nation, 22; and was universal through the whole country, 27, 28. It was foreboded by signs in the heavens, and quite dissolved the constitution of the Jewish church and state, and it occasioned terrible anguish to the carnal Jews, to be thus punished by the Messiah. 29, 30. It took place while that very generation, among whom Christ taught, partly survived, 32—35; and was followed by a remarkable spread of the gospel and converhold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.

27 For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

28 For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

29 Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken:

30 And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds * of heaven with power and great glory.

31 And he shall send his angels † with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

32 ¶ Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh:

33 So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors.

34 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled. ‡

35 Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

36 ¶ But of that day and hour knoweth no man, § no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.

37 But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

38 For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark,

39 And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

40 Then shall two * be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

41 Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

42 ¶ Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

43 But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44 Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.

45 Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?

46 Blessed is that servant, whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

47 Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin [c] to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken;

50 The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall † cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

* Coming in the clouds.—The import of this coming may be gathered from Is. 26. 21. & 35. 4. & 66. 15, 16. Mal. 3. 1, 2, 3, in all which it is a coming by national judgments upon them that forget God. —Ed.

† Angels. — Literally, messengers, whether human or spiritual. These angels are, in the commencement of the prophetic series, his ministers—with the gospel trumpet, warning men to flee from the wrath to come (Ezek. 33. 7)—gathering the elect into one in Christ Jesus (Eph. 1. 10). But that they and their work may be also typical of other angels, and another gathering, to another and greater judgment, is not to be denied.—Ed.

‡ This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.—The subjunction of this statement immediately after the prophecy, by three evangelists (see Mark 13. 30, Luke 21. 32), puts the idea of any dislocation of the narrative totally out of the question. Nor is it possible, upon any Scripture authority, to interpret "this generation," of the Jewish nation, or the Christian church, in continuance. Wherefore, the conclusion seems inevitable, that the previous prophecy describes directly the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish state, even should that be considered typical of other and greater events.—Ed.

§ Knoweth no man, &c. — Consequently, not even "the Son of man," as such; for being truly man (Heb. 1. 14, 16, 17), he was, as such, ignorant of all future events but such as the Father was pleased to reveal to him. (See Acts 1. 7.) Our Lord, having "two distinct natures in one person," could truly speak of himself under the character of either, or of both, as united in one person — just as, with perfect truth, we can speak of ourselves, and say, in respect of one nature, (the body) "we shall die;" and, in respect of another nature, (the soul) "we shall never die;" yet in all this, each man, so constituted, is one person.—Ed.

A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

* From comparing ver. 40 and 41, with 43, it will be evident that the coming foretold in ver 30, is a coming to national judgment. May not the meaning, therefore, of ver. 40 and 41, be elicited thus: 1. The judgment, sudden and unexpected as the flood of Noe, will sweep over the fields, or rural districts, which had escaped in former judgments, as well as over the cities, which had hitherto been the principal scenes of destruction. See 2 Kin. 24. 10—14. & 25. 11, 12. 2. It will extend to the female, as well as to the male population, which is not generally the case, even in the most sanguinary wars. 3. It will not be confined to the rich, the political, and military classes, but will extend to the poor in the pursuit of the most peaceful avocations. 4. The two descriptions it seems impossible to refer, as some do, to the final judgment, in which "all nations" are to be gathered before the Son of man —whereas, in these descriptions, "one is taken, and another left"—which will not accord with ch. 25. 46. in which all are alike judged according to their works. 5. The general use of παραλαμβάνω, in Matthew, is to "take along with" the taker. (See Mat. ch. 4. 5. 8. & 12. 45. & 17. 1.) Does not the prophecy, therefore, foretell that fully one-half of the most peaceable male and female population will be taken away captive by their invaders; while the remainder shall be left friendless and destitute, the victims of poverty and pestilence.—Ed.

CHAPTER XXV.

(1) The parable of ten virgins: 1—13. (2) Of various amount of talents: 14—30. (3) The Son of man in glory and judgment: 31—46.

A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten [a] virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

2 And five of them were wise, and five * were foolish.

a 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 14. 4. & 21. 2, 9. Ps. 45. 14.

sion of elect sinners to Christ, 30, 31. Many of the wicked Jews were preserved for the sake of the elect who were in their loins, and who were to descend from them after many generations, 22. Ver. 27, 28, may denote the spread of the gospel among the Gentiles, and the gathering of multitudes to Jesus to feed on his flesh and blood; but rather that the Roman army, beginning at the north-east, would, with fire and sword, desolate the whole country of the Jews, and hunt out and destroy them, be where they would; 29, 30, represent the terrible appearances of Jesus' power, in destroying the Jewish church and state, while his ministers should, by the gospel trumpet, gather multitudes of sinners to him; and also his terrible appearance to judgment, while his angels shall gather together his people, and bring them to their honourable seat on his right hand. 37—41. The destruction of Jerusalem, as well as the last judgment, will take place while most men are indulging themselves in sensuality and carnal cares, and are no way provided for it; and of persons, in seemingly equal danger, some will be miserably destroyed, and others graciously preserved. 42—51. Since therefore you are so uncertain of the time of this destruction and the last judgment, ye need always to be watching over your hearts and lives that ye may be ready for it; especially as great shall be the gracious and honorary reward of such as are then found faithful and diligent in their proper work: whereas, if any one become carnally secure, and indulge himself in persecuting his fellow-ministers and professors, and in immorality and profaneness, Jesus will surprise him by death or judgment, and render him one of the most miserably tormented in hell, in company with the most detestable sinners.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Even real saints are often puffed up with the external and quickly fading glories of religion. But how manifest is the omniscience of our Redeemer, who could so circumstantially foretell the events which befell the Jews and the nations around! And wonderfully has God proved him the Messiah, by fulfilling his predictions upon his opposers. Yea, for the confirmation of our faith, Josephus, one of them, was almost miraculously saved, and inclined to give us the history of the fulfilment. Novelties in religion are always to be suspected: and inconceivable are the arts by which Satan and his instruments labour to deceive men, pervert the gospel, and dishonour Christ. But great is the mercy that none of the elect can be fully and finally deluded. What an awful scene of misery hath sin made our earth! Even men, more savage than ravenous beasts, unnaturally hunt out and destroy one another. How dreadful then must hell be, where men meet in all the rage of their lusts! It is a great mercy that, though we must never flee from duty, we may and ought to flee from danger. What time my heart is overwhelmed, Lord, lead me to the Rock that is higher than I! And since the same preludes and descriptions can serve for both, let all the noted catastrophes of nations lead me to the serious consideration of, and preparation for, the last judgment! Thrice happy are they, who, in times of trial, are preserved in Christ, and kept faithful and lively when iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold; and happy are they who discover greater regard to God's ordinances than to their own ease. For graciously shall they at last be crowned with glory and honour. But dreadful will it be, if, after we have been intrusted with offices and gifts, we should be found, in death or judgment, unfaithful in using them:—none shall share a more certain or deeper damnation. There is great need of constant watchfulness, constant acting as under Christ's eye, constant readiness for eternity! How slothful is my heart, if Jesus' repeated admonitions do not awaken me!

CHAP. XXV.—Ver. 1—13. This, and the subsequent parable, may have some relation to the time of Christ's coming to destroy the Jewish nation, but especially to his coming to the last judgment. As the Jews had ordinarily their weddings

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

4 [b]But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 [c]While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered[*] and slept.

6 [d]And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.[†]

7 Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for [*]our lamps are [‡]gone out.

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to [‖]them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not.[§]

13 [e]Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

14 ¶ [f]For the kingdom of heaven[‖] is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

15 And unto one he gave five[*] talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one went and [i]digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained besides them five talents more.

21 His lord said unto him, [k]Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received [l]two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents besides them.

23 His lord said unto him, [m]Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

24 Then he which had received the one talent came and said, [n]Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man,[*] reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed;[†]

25 And I was [*]afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.

26 His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked[‡] and slothful servant, thou knewest[§] that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed:

27 [p]Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

28 [q]Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.

29 [r]For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.[‖]

30 [s]And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

31 ¶ When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:[*]

32 And before him shall be gathered all nations;[†] and he shall separate them one from another,[‡] as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

33 [t]And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

† Jewish marriages were generally conducted as follows: after the marriage had been solemnised, the bridegroom in a procession as brilliant as his circumstances permitted, conducted the bride to his dwelling, where all his young female friends were assembled, and waited with lamps, prepared to go out and receive her. After which the whole train entered the house together. When the train had entered the bridegroom's house, the doors were shut to exclude strangers. The marriage customs of the modern Hindoos are almost identical with those above described; and all admittance is most peremptorily refused when once the door has been closed. at night, and seldom fewer than ten bridemaids, that custom is here alluded to. Christ, who betroths and unites sinners to himself in the day of his power, is the glorious bridegroom. His tarrying denotes his deferring the Jewish destruction, and death, and the last judgment, till the due season. His coming at midnight, and with a great cry, denotes how unexpected and alarming his coming is, in common calamities, at death or judgment. The ten virgins denote multitudes of professing, and apparently real Christians. Their slumbering and sleeping denote their common sloth and security while Christ withdraws his presence. The foolish virgins, who had only lamps, but no oil in them, represent nominal Christians, who have a profession of gospel truth, but no real grace; and who, when awakened by death or judgment, shall find their profession come to nothing: gladly then would they be in the condition of sincere Christians, and derive help from them; but their cares of salvation will be then too late, and they themselves shall be eternally excluded from fellowship with Christ. The wise virgins are true believers, whose external profession of Christ arises from real grace in their hearts, and who are, notwithstanding occasional sloth and slumberings, in a habitual readiness to meet with Christ, in death or judgment, upon his call; these, though they have no grace or good works to be imparted to others, shall be graciously admitted to eternal fellowship with him in the heavenly mansions. 14—30. The Master is Christ, who, in his ascension, travelled into a far country, who bestows gifts and graces on ministers and people, and will return at the last day to require an account of their improvement of them. The servants are ministers and people. The talents are offices, gifts, and opportunities, given by Christ, to men in different degrees, for the good of the church, to be improved for his glory, and to be accounted for at the last day. Such as improve what they have received, whether more or less, in a faithful and diligent manner, shall be graciously rewarded. But such as, through unbelief of God's kindness and mercy, neglect to improve their gifts, shall at last be deprived of them, and damned for their abuse of them. 32, 33. He will fully and exactly separate the righteous from the wicked, never more to be mixed. The former, as his chosen and called, given to him by his Father, redeemed by his blood, and sanctified by his Spirit, meek, harmless, and holy in their conversation, he will honourably set at his right hand in the air: but the latter he will

* Our Lord here enumerates under some one of which every possible form of human misery may be found: Hunger — thirst — a stranger — nakedness — sickness — imprisonment: one, as it were, for each day of the labour and sorrow introduced by the first transgression; and for which the knowledge of Christ crucified, risen, reigning, interceding, and coming again, can afford the only remedy.—Note. The introductory for, ver. 35, cannot be tortured, contrary to the uniform testimony of Scripture, into any proof that the entrance into "the kingdom prepared" was purchased or deserved by the merit of the "good works" enumerated (See Deut. 9. 4—6. Mat. 1. 21. & 25. 28. Rom. 5. 20, 21. 2 Tim. 1. 9, &c.), in which every stream of good, whether temporal or spiritual, is traced to the fountain of sovereign mercy alone. But the great purpose of final judgment being, first, to exhibit Christ in glory; and, secondly, to explain and vindicate the equity of the Divine government, the "fruit of the Spirit" is displayed in all its beauty and variety, as the evidence that the Judge decides not upon any principle of favouritism, but in righteousness; and bestows his rewards upon none but such as have been "made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light."—Ed.

AND [a]it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 [b]Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed* to be crucified.

3 ¶ [c]Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5 But they said, [d]Not on the feast-day,† lest there be an uproar among the people.

6 ¶ Now, when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper,

7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head,‡ as he sat at meat.

8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

10 When Jesus understood§ it, he said unto them, [e]Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.

11 For ye have the poor always with you, but me ye have not always.‖

12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it [f]for my burial.

13 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

14 ¶ Then* one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests,

15 And said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver.†

16 And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him.

17 ¶ [g]Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

18 And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, [h]The Master saith, [i]My leave on the earth, dishonoured and disgraced as filthy and abominable creatures, who loved, lived, and died in their sins. 34—40. They are called to receive the kingdom, not as any proper reward of their works, but as the inheritance to which they are entitled as adopted children of a gracious God through Christ. Their works are not mentioned as grounds of the sentence, but as proofs that they are God's children, who love the brethren. Their objection denotes their viewing whatever they did as unworthy of so honourable a reward. 41—45. They, in sinning, departed from God, and followed the devil. Now their punishment is answerable. Their want of charity to the saints is at once a mark of their being children of Satan, and haters of Christ and his people, and also a ground of their fearful sentence.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—It is absurd to esteem any as Christians who have not the appearance of real saintship. And inestimable is the worth of real grace implanted in the heart by a new creation in Christ. It makes a wide difference between true believers and mere nominal professors. Safe is their meeting with Christ, and certain their admission to glory, who have it: but dreadful their exclusion from Christ, and deep their damnation in hell, who die without it! No intercession of saints, no mercy, can save them. In diversified forms and degrees Jesus bestows gifts, offices, and opportunities on men, for the service of his church. And he will take an exact account of the improvement. Happy are they, who, with diligence, use whatever they receive to his glory; inexpressibly great shall be their honour and their reward: but miserable are they who, through unbelieving hard thoughts of God, take up with a mere hypocritical profession. Every plea of innocence, prudence, or of wonted assistances, will issue in their confusion.—How certain—how sudden—how awful—how glorious—will be the appearance of Jesus to judgment: exact and final shall be his separation of the righteous and wicked; and impartial his trial of human works. Gracious and heart-ravishing will be his last invitation to saints: high his regard to them, and every kindness time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

19 And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

20 Now, when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.

21 And as they did eat,* he said, Verily I say unto you, That one of you shall betray me.

22 And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

23 And he answered and said, He that dippeth his hand† with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

24 The Son of man goeth as it is written of him: but wo unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25 Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.‡

26 ¶ And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and §blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body.‖

27 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it:

28 For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

29 But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30 ¶ And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

31 Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

33 Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

34 Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

36 ¶ Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37 [l]And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be [m]sorrowful and very heavy.*

38 Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and [n]watch with me.

39 And he went a little farther, and [o]fell on his face, and prayed, saying, [p]O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What! could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 [q]Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: [r]the spirit indeed is willing,† but the flesh is weak.

42 [s]He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and [t]prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, [u]Sleep on now,‡ and take your rest: [x]behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ¶ And [y]while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 [z]Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him.

50 And Jesus said unto him, [a]Friend,§ wherefore art thou come? Then came they and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 ¶ And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword‖ into his place: [b]for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

* Whether our Lord did eat the passover has been matter of serious debate. The course of the narrative in this chapter is clearly in favour of his eating it (see also Luke 22. 14). But then, in John 18. 28, when our Lord was already a prisoner, the Jews, it appears, had yet to eat the passover. The solution of this difficulty arises from recollecting that the passover was to commence with first full moon of the month Nisan. But as this day was settled, not by astronomical calculation, but by the actual appearance of the new moon, a difference might readily arise with regard to the exact day on which the feast should commence. And as the Pharisees and Sadducees differed on almost every other point, it is most probable they would differ upon this likewise. And thus our Lord might eat the passover, on the fourteenth, which the Sadducees calling but the thirteenth, they would eat it the day after.—Ed.

† He that dippeth his hand.—An instance of the manner of eating common in several Eastern countries, in which the whole party at table eat by dipping the hand into one common dish.—Ed.

‡ Thou hast said.—A Hebrew expression, found also in Greek and Latin, equal to yes.—Ed.

§ Many Greek copies have, gave thanks.

‖ This is my body.—The Romanists say our Lord spake literally, and that, therefore, the bread in his supper becomes his literal body. But if so, surely "the cup" becomes "the new testament" (see 1 Cor. 11. 25) for both are equally asserted. But such conversion of the cup the Romanist denies; therefore, with equally valid reason, such conversion of the bread the Protestant rejects. And in this he agrees with the apostle Paul, who thrice declares that what the communicant eats is simply bread, 1 Cor. 11. 26, 27, 28. Besides, as our Lord says (John 15. 5,) "I am the vine, ye are the branches"—and yet cannot mean that he was changed into a vine, or his disciples into branches, but merely that he was like the vine, while they were like the branches—so, when he says of bread, "This is my body," he means, as in the case of the vine, "this is (like) my body." For the use of the verb to be, in which it is put for "to be like, represent, or signify, or answer to," see Dan. 7. 23. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Gal. 4. 24, 25. But if the Romanist still repeat, "This is my body;" the Protestant replies, "And so, indeed, it is—it is his body to faith;" for while sense perceives and uses bread, faith discerns and partakes of "his body and blood, with all their benefits, to spiritual nourishment and growth in grace."—Ed.

‖ This statement, if taken in a literal and unlimited sense, is not strictly accurate—for many take the sword, who do not perish by it. The meaning must, therefore, be sought thus: 1. The sword is a general name for all weapons and means of warfare. 2. The warfare in the case, is a private opposition to public authority. 3. It is a warfare undertaken rashly, and revengefully, in defence of, or for propagation of, religion. Now all who thus take, and continue to hold the sword, shall finally perish by it, either literally, as the Jews soon after did; or, spiritually, by making shipwreck of their holy faith.—Ed.

showed to them! But awful indeed his dismission of sinners from him, whom they now so hate and contemn. And how fixed—how important—how lasting—is men's future state! May these awful, these eternal realities, sink deep into my heart!

Chap. XXVI.—Ver. 26—28. Christ conjoined the passover and supper to intimate, that the former, having been long a type, should now be fulfilled in his death; and that the other should succeed as a memorial of his finished sufferings till the end of the world. The bread represents him as God-man, chosen, appointed, and furnished by his Father, and suffering unto death for the redemption of his people. The wine represents his fulfilling all righteousness for the purchasing and securing of all promised new covenant blessings, particularly the full remission of sins to his numerous followers. 29. I will never more feast with you in this manner, never more so indulge you with my bodily presence; but instead thereof, will hold fellowship with you in a far more spiritual and comfortable manner in the gospel dispensation, and especially in the heavenly state.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and [c] he shall presently give me more than twelve legions* of angels?

54 But how then [d] shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, [e] that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled.† [f] Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ¶ [g] And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

58 But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace, and went in, [h] and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests and elders, and all the council, [i] sought false witness against Jesus to put him to death;

60 [k] But found none; yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they ‡ none. At the last came two false witnesses,

61 And said, This fellow said, [l] I am able to destroy the temple§ of God, and to build it in three days.

62 And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

63 But Jesus [m] held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, I [n] adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be [o] the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, [p] Thou hast said:‖ nevertheless* I say unto you, [q] Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 [r] Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, * He is guilty of death.

67 [t] Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted† him; and others smote him with ‡ the palms of their hands,

WHEN the morning was come, [a] all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death:

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.*

3 ¶ [b] Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself,† and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned [c] in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, [d] What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, [e] and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—Unbounded was the foreknowledge of our Redeemer, and astonishing his delight in the view of his sufferings for his people. Great is his care to vindicate their good conduct, to honour them that honour him, and to direct them to opportunities of doing good to their brethren; and infinite his regard to his Father's oracles and ordinances, and the salvation of his people. In view of death—a dreadful death—he joins with them in the seals of the covenant, and appoints them a permanent feast for spiritual nourishment: representing all his labours of love, and sealing and applying his person and righteousness to their soul! And faithful and reasonable were his warnings against temptation.—How heavy the weight of our sins lay on him! How fearful his agonies! how fervent his prayers! Yet great was his submission to his Father's will: marvellous his readiness to suffer, and kind his rebukes even to the worst!—But, alas! how was he hated by men—plotted against without cause—envied of his honours—betrayed for a trifle—shamefully discredited and contradicted, even by his saints—presumptuously apprehended—despitefully abused—and basely denied, after the most solemn warning! Let me learn to watch and pray against temptation. I know not whither Satan may drag, or my corruption drive me. Let me always honour Jesus, whatever be the expense; be liberal to his poor, and always given to embrace his preached gospel. And, on his demand, gladly let me receive him into my house and heart. A deep sense of my sinfulness should make me always ready to suspect the worst of myself. If I indulge self-confidence, if I disregard a Saviour's warning, I shall quickly fall, fearfully fall, before the slightest temptations. If I indulge 8 Wherefore that field was called, [f] The field of blood, unto this day.

9 (Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy[*] the prophet, saying, [g] And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, [†] whom they of the children of Israel did value,

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.)

11 ¶ [h] And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, [‡] Thou sayest. [§]

12 [i] And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then saith Pilate unto him, [k] Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶ [l] Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 [m] And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

17 Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, [n] Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or [o] Jesus which is called Christ?

18 For he knew [p] that for envy they had delivered him.

19 ¶ When he was set down on the judgment-seat, [q] his wife [‖] sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

20 ¶ [r] But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? [s] They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

23 And the governor said, Why? what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, [t] he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of [u] this just person; see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, [x] His blood be on us, and on our children.[*]

f Acts 1. 19.

* This prophecy is not found in Jeremiah, but in Zechariah, 11. 12, 13. This substitution has, therefore, been pronounced the error of a transcriber, or a lapse of memory in the writer. But the first of these opinions is contrary to the best MS. authority; the second, to the whole idea of inspiration. That Zechariah may also have been called Jeremiah, or that Jeremiah may actually have written part of the prophecy omitted by Zechariah, affords a ready and sufficient solution of the whole difficulty. —Ed.

* This imprecation, dictated by a ferocious cruelty that would satiate its appetite for blood at any price, has been alas! most literally fulfilled. After the reduction of Jerusalem by Titus, more than 500 Jews were sometimes crucified in a single day, until, in the words of their own historian, "there was wanting room for crosses, and crosses for bodies." And many of these were, no doubt, the children of those who had uttered this unmerciful imprecation.—Ed.

26 Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had [y] scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 ¶ Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the [*] common hall, and [z] gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 ¶ And when they had platted a crown of thorns, [†] they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!

30 [a] And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 [b] And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32 [c] And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, [‡] Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

34 [d] They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: [§] and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, [e] They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

CHAP. XXVII.—Crucifixion was the most cruel, shameful, and cursed death that could be devised; was not at all used by the Jews; and by the Romans inflicted only upon slaves, and the basest of the people, who were capital offenders. The person was nailed to the cross as it lay upon the ground, through each hand, extended to its utmost stretch, and through both the feet together: then the cross was erected; and the foot of it, with a violent thrust, which disjointed the whole body of the sufferer, placed into a hole in the ground, prepared to receive it. The whole weight of the body thus hung upon the nails, which went through the hands and feet, till the person expired by mere dint of terrible pain.

* It is not likely that Joseph, who had hewn a sepulchre out of a rock, would have a door so inartificial as this is sometimes represented—a mere round stone to be rolled up against the entrance. But tombs are still found in the East, in which a hole in the circular stone described in the foregoing note (ver. 60), corresponds to one in the rock, when the stone is rolled into its place. This hole, it would appear, was intended for a piece of wood or iron, the head of which, if pushed a little within the outer surface of the stone, could easily be so sealed as to render opening, without detection, quite impossible.—Ed.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth,

Reflections upon Chap. XXVII.—Men, especially wicked rulers, are awfully set upon mischief. Not only commanded devotion, but even necessary sleep, must give way to it. But dreadful is the reward of treachery to Christ. And the price of blood, the horrors of conscience, and the damnation of hell, are closely linked together. Yet no alarming convictions, no pretences to piety, can restrain men abandoned to wickedness.—Dreadful from earth, from hell, from heaven, were the sufferings of our Redeemer. Hypocritical rulers, the lately extolling mob, the inwardly convinced heathen governor, the profane soldiers, concur to abuse and murder him. But, alas! at what expense of misery to themselves and posterity, for many ages, do the hardened Jews, who had witnessed his benevolent miracles, and heard his saving doctrines, cry for his blood! in the most dreadful manner they tempt him to abandon his work of redemption. But willingly and steadily he persevered in his ransoming of sinful men! Yea, the malice of the priests and elders, the treachery of Judas, the insolence and imprecations of the mob, the indulgence and obstinacy of Pilate, the insults of the soldiers, the attempt to imprison him in his grave, were all marvellously over-ruled to accomplish the oracles of God, and for the honour of Jesus, and redemption of his church. With pleasure and triumph he therefore breathed out his last. And the most honourable attestations were given to his death. Thrice happy are they who sleep in Jesus! —Them will God, through his death, bring with him, that they may be glorified together.—Stand in awe then, my soul! avoid sin, lest it bring thee to a miserable end, and entail a curse on my seed. Never value thyself on popular applause, which may so quickly be turned into contempt, malice, and murder. Let me never account anything too much to be given, or to be suffered, for the sake of my dying Redeemer. While others prefer Barabbas, let me adhere to look on and weep with him in every difficulty and danger. Let me never come down from my cross, till I can say, it is finished. And let neither death nor the grave terrify me, since Jesus the forerunner hath for me passed through and entered into his glory.—See now, my soul, the dreadful punishment, and in that the nature, of my sin. What is a drowned world, a burning Sodom, a plagued Egypt, an opened hell, in comparison of the Son of God accursed—troubled in spirit, till he knew not what to say—amazed and very heavy—sorrowful, even unto death—in an agony, sweating great drops of blood—tormented and insulted by men—harassed by devils—deserted by God—groaning and giving up the ghost, under the weight of infinite wrath!——Listen, O my soul, how, by every debasement, every strait, every labour, every reproach, every wound, every groan, every tear, every drop of blood, Jesus charges me to come to him, that I may have life. Behold how my debt is paid, my happiness purchased, my peace with God procured and confirmed, and my comfort enhanced! There divine righteousness is fulfilled, transgression finished, the curse exhausted, the law magnified, God reconciled, death vanquished, and hell extinguished—and all for me!

* The statement of the watch contains the proof of its own falsehood. Had they said, "some persons unknown have stolen him," they might have been believed. But when they charge the stealing against the disciples, and yet acknowledge they themselves were asleep when the theft was committed—they are asserting what they could not know, and are, therefore, entitled to no credence. That this falsehood was diligently disseminated, is evident from Justin Martyr. Traces of it may also be found in the Rabbinical writers.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—Jesus, who was delivered for our offences, rises again for our justification! In the most solemn and seasonable manner JEHOVAH liberates our Surety when our debt is paid. And great earthquakes, mighty angels, risen saints, suspicious disciples, terrified soldiers, and an empty grave, are made joint witnesses of this leading article of our Christian faith. Yea, even the self-destructive lie, contrived by the Jewish rulers to refute it, indirectly confirms it. But O how great was his kindness in acknowledging those for brethren who had lately forsaken him, and solemnly to visit those who had so shamefully deserted, and so sinfully suspected him. Great are the joys which spring from his being; as God-man, made governor of all things in heaven and earth for the good of his church. What extending of her limits! What discipling of the Gentiles! What solemn admission of them into the family, and instruction of them in the things, of God! We have need then to hold fellowship with him in every ordinance, and obey him in every command; and even under the best ministry to try everything by his laws, and to depend on him in every circumstance for his promised presence.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MATTHEW.

Matthew was early called to be a disciple and apostle. From that time forward he was a constant attendant upon our Lord; and so, amply qualified to relate "the things that he both saw and heard." The Gospel by Matthew is distinguished by the length at which he has related several of our Lord's discourses. Take as examples, the sermon on the mount, his charge to the apostles, his parabolic illustrations of the nature of his kingdom, and his prophecy concerning Jerusalem, and the judgment to come. He is also remarkable for the particularity with which he has related so many of our Lord's most wonderful replies to the cavils of his adversaries—replies in which may be found what many of the deepest reasoners of this world have sought in vain—the principle by which evidence rises above probability, and attains to certainty. This our Lord shows to be found in uniformity—in judging of one thing upon exactly the same principles that we judge by in another. By this he silenced the scribes, Pharisees, and Herodians—compelling them, by their judgment in their own case, either to yield to his arguments or shrink away in silence. Of this important principle of reasoning examples may be found, chap. 12. 1—5. & 15. 1—9. & 16. 1—3. & 21. 23—27. & 22. 15—22. & 41—46.

As the original purpose of the Gospel is to instruct the ignorant, and convince unbelievers, it is presented to us with all the historic evidence that entitles it to the acceptance of reasonable men. It is affirmed by competent witnesses—related with great simplicity;—and that the historians believed their own statements, their sufferings in defence of their testimony sufficiently demonstrate. Upon these grounds it was necessary the Gospel should first stand, so that no unbeliever would be able to screen his infidelity under any pretended want of ordinary historic evidence. Still, it is to be remembered, that, while this species of evidence for revelation, like the evidence for the being of a God from the light of nature and creation, is sufficient to leave men without excuse, the believer ascends to a higher ground—the prophecies fulfilled, and the miracles wrought in attestation of our Lord's commission, and the commission emanating from him to his disciples, with the promise of the Holy Spirit to "bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said to them," and certainly to "guide them into all truth."

THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

SAINT MARK.

MARK, the writer of the following gospel, is generally supposed to be the person called John, surnamed Mark, who was nephew to Barnabas (Col. iv. 10), and the son of that Mary at whose house many were assembled praying when Peter was delivered from prison (Acts xii. 12). Peter calls him "Marcus my son," most probably as Paul calls Timothy "my son in the gospel," both being spiritual children of their respective fathers in Christ. He accompanied Paul in his travels (Acts xii. 25. & xiii. 5—13. & xv. 36—41. 2 Tim. iv. 4. Phil. 24); and he is said to have been amanuensis to Peter, and to have prepared his gospel narrative under Peter's inspection, and chiefly for the use of the Gentile converts. The internal evidence of this Gospel seems to favour this statement, for many things particularly honourable to Peter are omitted, while his weaknesses and faults are minutely detailed; given, as it were, con amore, not with the vain ostentation of a proud humility, but with the inward desire to humble the sinner and exalt the Saviour. Some learned commentators have represented it as an abridgment of the larger narrative of Matthew. But though there is, doubtless, a considerable agreement, yet Mark omits many important particulars mentioned by Matthew, and adds others, dilating upon some things only cursorily noticed by Matthew, and differs from him considerably in the order of time. So that, these things considered, there can appear no reason for supposing one gospel an abridgment of the other, but that each is an independent narrative of the same events, derived from the same sources, and varying only as it pleased the Holy Spirit that the one should form a supplement or exposition to the other. That the Gospel of Mark was originally written in Greek, is the uniform voice of antiquity; though some, on the ground of a few Latin words, have supposed it originally written in Latin. But the use of a few Latin words in a Greek discourse, may be easily accounted for by the residence of Mark at Rome, and the fact of his writing for a people who generally spoke Latin, yet as generally read and understood Greek, and considered it the most efficient vehicle for public instruction. Mark, as writing more immediately for the Gentiles, omits the genealogy of our Lord, so specially recorded by Matthew and Luke; but though omitting his record as "Son of man," he opens his history with asserting him to have been "the Son of God."—Ed.

THE [a]beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets,† [b] Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance‡ §for the remission of sins.

5 And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.

6 And John was [c]clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

8 I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 And straightway‖ coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens [*]opened, and the Spirit like a dove† descending upon him.

11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

12 ¶ And immediately the Spirit driveth him‡ into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts;§ and the angels ministered unto him.‖

14 ¶ Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God,

15 And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ¶ [d]Now, as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become [e]fishers of men.

18 And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them: and they [f]left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 [g]And they went into Capernaum;* and straightway on the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 [h]And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

23 ¶ [i]And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out,

24 Saying, [k]Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, [l]the Holy One of God.†

25 And Jesus [m]rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 [n]And when the unclean spirit had torn him,‡ and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 [o]And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

28 [p]And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 ¶ [q]And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; [r]and immediately the fever left her, and she [s]ministered unto them.

32 ¶ And [t]at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

§ Wild beasts are not mentioned by Matthew, for he wrote for Jews, who knew the wilderness; but they are mentioned by Mark, who wrote for Roman citizens, and to whom this circumstance would afford a striking feature in our Lord's temptation.—Ed.

‖ The angels ministered unto him.—Forget not this, O tempted and troubled believer! thy Lord was one hour with "the wild beasts," the next hour "the angels" were with him! Battles, like Paul, thou mayest have with beasts at Ephesus; but glory, like the Lord, thou shalt have in heaven!—Ed.

§ Sinners.—All men are sinners.—Who, then, were these? Persons who had violated some law of Moses, or tradition of the elders; or who, being Jews, had been guilty of some conformity to heathenism, and who either neglected or refused to offer the ceremonial expiation, and were, probably, expelled from the synagogues, and in a state of public excommunication. 3 ¶ And they come unto him, bringing one [d] sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the *roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

5 When Jesus [f] saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, [g] Son, thy sins be forgiven† thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts,

7 [h] Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? [i] who can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately when Jesus [k] perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?

9 Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?

10 But that ye may know that [l] the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,)

11 [m] I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; [n] insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ¶ And he went forth again by the sea-side; and all [o] the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 [p] And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alpheus sitting ‡ at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, [q] many publicans and sinners§ sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, [r] How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

17 When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, [s] They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

Reflections upon Chap. I.—John delightfully, but humbly, prepares the way that grace and truth may come through our incarnate God. But the greatest of ministers are but emptiness and nothing if compared with their divine Master. When multitudes attend their ministrations, all must issue in repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ. And highly criminal is our unbelief of the gospel, which has been attested by concurrent reports of inspired evangelists, by the sermons of John and of Jesus, by victories over devils, the approbation of angels, by Jehovah's testimony from heaven, by the Spirit's descent, and by miracles unnumbered. O what do I owe to Christ! If I am accepted of God, it is in him: if I receive the Spirit, it is through him:—if I am tempted as a Christian, it is in conformity to him:—if I resist the devil, and he flee from me, it is through his having been tempted, that he might succour them that are tempted:—if angels minister to me, it is at his command and for his sake:—if I am called or qualified as a Christian or minister, it is by him:—if I am delivered from diseases or devils, I owe all to him:—Let me then never act the part of a devil in asking,—what have I to do with him? And if I have experienced his grace, let me gratefully employ all that I have in his service and praise.

him, [u] Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the [x] bride-chamber fast while the [y] bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom [z] shall be taken away from them, and then [a] shall they fast in those days.

21 No man also seweth a piece of [*] new cloth on an old garment; else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.[†]

23 ¶ [b] And it came to pass, that he went through the corn-fields on the sabbath-day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, [c] why do they on the sabbath-day that which is not lawful?

† By the parable of "new cloth," and "new wine," our Lord illustrates the necessity of suiting his doctrine and requirements to the weak state of his disciples (see John 16. 12), whom he compares to the "old cloth," and "old bottles." In the same spirit Paul says to the Corinthians, "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able," 1 Cor. 3. 2. Even so, the Lord seldom tries a young convert, or an infant church, by the test of persecution; but when they have ceased to be children, it often pleases him to call them to the duties and endurance of men.—Ed.

‡ As this occurred, not in the high priesthood of Abiathar, but of his father Ahimelech, "Abiathar" has been considered the error of a transcriber, or a second name of Ahimelech. The first feeling of our Lord was grief for the calamities he foresaw as the natural and inevitable consequence of that hardness of heart. † He withdrew to the sea-side, for the more convenient means of teaching the multitude (ver. 9) and that he might have ready means of escaping from the machinations of the Pharisees and Herodians; but he must still have remained somewhere near Capernaum (ch. 2. 1), on the north-west, for when he and his disciples removed, they came over unto the other side, into the country of the Gadarenes" (ch. 4. 1), which lay on the south-east of the sea of Galilee.—Ed.

† As there is nothing in the writings of James or John figuratively resembling thunder, the meaning of this surname has been matter of question. But is "the son of thunder" necessarily a loud noise? Is it not, more probably the summer shower?—the refreshing rain (see 1 Sam. 12. 17. Job 28. 26. Ps. 77. 17, 18) that usually follows thunder? If this be the meaning of the name, its application both to James and John, or rather to their writings and labours in the church, it will not be difficult to discover.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—Let me always attend Jesus' ordinances, that I may honour him and receive his blessing, that he may speak to my heart, give me the faith which he will approve, forgive my sins, and heal my plagues. And let no impediment hinder me from his grace. While proud sinners are ever rejecting against him, to their own destruction, it becomes me to esteem, receive, admire, and honour him, to my eternal salvation. And if he call me to himself by his grace, diligently should I exert all my influence in bringing others along with me. Sinners, as such, he came to save: sinners, as such, he calls in his gospel: and him that cometh unto him, he will in no wise cast out. The more sinful and wretched I feel myself to be, the more evident is my gospel right to receive the Redeemer, who came to seek and to save that which is lost. No publican nor sinner is too bad for him to save, or too obstinate for him to conquer. And he does, and must, seek us before we seek him. Wisely he connects every duty with its proper season, and proportions his people's services to their ability. Let then his word be my rule, and his authority my obligation, in observing his sabbaths and ordinances: and let his grace make me prize his service, since all is designed for my profit.

‡ Under a bed.—Rather, a couch, not unlike a modern sofa, with a cavity beneath more than sufficient to receive a candelabrum; and which, as appears from the authorities cited by Wetstein, was frequently used by the ancients as a general repository, answering to a modern buffet or cupboard.—Ed.

5 And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

12 [f] That seeing they may see, and not perceive;† and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

14 ¶ [h] The sower soweth the word.

15 And these are [i] they by the way-side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, [k] Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are [l] they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And [m] have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And [n] these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word,

19 And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And [o] these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ¶ And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed?‡ and not to be set on a candlestick?

Reflections upon Chap. III.—Attendance on Christ for his healing power and grace, is always hopeful. No day is unseasonable for works of mercy, especially in dealing with him. And if he order us to give dead hearts, or stretch out withered hands, himself must afford the ability. The most earnest gospel calls are in vain without the effectual power of his grace. Many, alas, by their obstinacy and hardness of heart, provoke his grief and indignation, and return him hatred, murder, and blasphemy, for his kindness!—and men deny and abuse him whom even devils confess and obey! But it is highly absurd to pretend his connexion with Satan, when their interests are so evidently contrary. And dreadful is that presumption which leads to the unpardonable sin. Professors should carefully avoid this infallible cause of damnation. Very honourable is a spiritual relation to Christ, and an active faithfulness in his service. If then he sovereignly call me to his work, let no censures of men deter, or importunity of friends divert me from it.

22 [p] For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 [q] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he saith unto them, [r] Take heed what ye hear: [s] with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 [t] For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 ¶ And he said, So is the [u] kingdom of God, as if a man should cast [x] seed into the ground;

27 And should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should [y] spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.*

28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

29 But [z] when the fruit is † brought forth, immediately [a] he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶ And he said, [b] Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it [c] groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

33 [d] And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it.

34 But [e] without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35 ¶ [f] And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

36 And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him ‡ even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

37 [g] And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.§

* The end of this parable is to show that when our Lord should have preached and confirmed his gospel, by his resurrection and the outpouring of his Spirit, he would then be received into heaven, and seem to leave the word to the ministry; also of natural causes — that is, to the judgment, liberality, effort, zeal — yea, to the very emulations jealousies, and passions of men — yet during all this time, would be watching over his field with the eye of the skilful husbandman, and would cut down and gather it the moment it became ripe for the harvest either of life or condemnation.—Ed.

AND they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes.*

2 And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there [a] met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit,

3 Who had his dwelling among the tombs;† and no man could bind him, no, not with chains:

4 Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains,‡ and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces; neither could any man tame him.

5 And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6 But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him,

7 And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 (For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.)

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is ‖ Legion: for we are many.§

10 And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.*

11 Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding.

12 And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

* These people were so called from Gadara, a city in the half-tribe of Manasseh, about six miles south-east of the sea of Galilee. It was one of the cities called Decapolis, and much celebrated for its hot baths. It was taken by Vespasian, and, after sustaining all the horrors of a siege, was laid in ashes—an awful retribution for the rejection of the Saviour (ver. 17). It was situated near to the city of Gergesa—whence the same country is also called the land of the Gergesenes.—Ed.

† The tombs of the East are often roomy and ornamented caves cut in the faces of rocks, or builded on the surface of the earth with stone. That in ancient times they were often used as dwelling-houses, is recorded in Diogenes Laërtius, ix. 38; and, in modern times, the subterraneous tombs of Egypt are often so occupied by the Arabs.—Ed.

‡ Fetters and chains. —In the original the one signifies binding for the feet, the second, for the hands. —Ed.

* Out of the country. — What preference the demons might have for one locality above another, we cannot tell; but certainly as wicked men (imbodied spirits) have such preferences for gratification of their appetites, there can be no reason assigned why disimbodied spirits should not have a similar preference for indulgence of their wicked propensities. —Ed.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. IV.—Ver. 26—29. As Mark very commonly relates the same facts as Matthew, so this is the only parable which Mark relates that is not mentioned by Matthew. The scope of it is to show, that the gospel, being once published in the world in a gradual and mysterious manner, should produce a large church therein before the end of time;—and that a vital principle of grace, being once planted in a soul, gradually and insensibly increases in strength, vigour, and appearance, and in fruits of holiness, which shall be graciously rewarded in the day of judgment.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Alas, that so much of God's truth should be sown in our world to so little purpose! Unfruitful hearers of the gospel are everywhere numerous: and they who mix faith with the word, to the salvation and sanctification of their souls, are, alas, very few! There is great need therefore to watch carefully against Satan, and the snares which arise from the pleasures, cares, and terrors of this world. Diligently should we consider how and what we hear; and look well to our hearts, that they be truly sincere and upright, yea, look upward for God's grace, to render us fruitful in works of righteousness. Thrice happy is it to be the distinguished objects of Jesus' love, to know the secrets of his covenant, and to be made careful improvers of whatever gifts or graces he hath given us, that we may abound therein! His work in his church, and in every renewed heart, shall indeed be preserved, gradually increased, and at last perfected. In every storm his presence secures the safety of his church, and his word can silence all our fears and troubles. And while he remains the mighty God and Prince of Peace, we need never doubt either of his power or will to save to the uttermost.

13 And forthwith Jesus [b] gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd [c] ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea.

14 [d] And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see him [e] that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind; and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw it told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine.

17 [f] And they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil [g] prayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit Jesus suffered him not,* but saith unto him, [h] Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in † Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

21 ¶ And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, [i] much people gathered unto him; and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 [k] And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue,‡ Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet,

23 And besought him greatly, saying, [l] My little daughter lieth at the point of death: [m] I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live.

24 And Jesus went with him; [n] and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25 ¶ And a certain woman, which had an [o] issue of blood twelve years,

26 And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was [p] nothing bettered, but rather grew worse,

27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and [q] touched his garment:

28 For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole.

29 And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt [§] in her body that she was healed of that plague.

30 And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that [r] virtue‖ had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes?*

Reflections upon Chap. V.—Dreadful is the case of natural men, who are filled with, and governed by, devils. Cruelly they tyrannize over their vassals, and furiously work in them, so that no restraints of human laws, solemn vows, awful or engaging providences, nor even common operations of the Holy Ghost, can in the least avail. But great is the mercy, that Christ's compassion is infinitely greater than Satan's implacable malice, and his saving power infinitely superior to all his fury; and when he casts out the unclean spirit, he puts a new heart and a right spirit within us. In the most fearful forms he sometimes punishes worldlings by the hand of their own Master, for the manifestation of his own justice and grace. And great is their folly and wickedness, who prefer their secular interests to Jesus Christ and his salvation, and, from inordinate love to the world, desire him to depart from them. If he take them at their word, how dismal is the

* Origen denies that our Lord was a carpenter; and some MSS. represent him in this place but as "the son of the carpenter." But all the best MSS., universal tradition, and the consent of the early writers of the church, confirm the authenticity of this statement; for the Jewish law required that every man should learn some handicraft trade; and what more natural than that Joseph, a poor man, should bring up his wonderful, yet poor son, to his father's trade? And is there anything degrading in trade? Is there any thing honourable in idleness? No. Real degradation is idleness that will not, and ignorance that cannot work; with sin, the employment and punishment of both.—Ed.

§ The essence of a miracle is not the supernatural work performed, but the prophetic word, or prophetic action that precedes it, for "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Hence arose the use of the oil in the apostolic cures. It was the prophetic sign by which they declared their intention to heal—the prophetic symbol of the Spirit of God, and the visible witness and memorial that the work had been done by apostolic agency through divine power.—Ed.

‡ Herod furnishes a striking example of that inconsistency of human nature that takes pleasure in the company and discourses of good men, and yet "do not the things which they say." * Many knew him.—Few passages of the New Testament have been the subject of so much critical labour—which the verbal student will find collected and abridged in Bloomfield. One of the chief difficulties is found in the assertion, that "many knew him," which suggests the idea of an interpolation, as few could be supposed ignorant of his person where he had resided so long, and had wrought so many miracles. It is with great deference suggested, that the difficulty may be better solved by translating "and many knew him" — "and many knew it," that is, the desert place to which our Lord and his disciples were bound, (see ver. 31); and so while they doubted some headland in the boat, the people crossed the peninsula, and "ran thither on foot," &c.—Ed.

18 For John had said unto Herod, [u]It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 Therefore [x]Herodias had [*]a quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not:

20 For Herod [y]feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and [†]observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.[‡]

21 And when [z]a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birth-day made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22 And when [a]the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod, and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23 And he sware unto her, [b]Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, [c]The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in straightway [d]with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me, by and by in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.

26 And the king [e]was exceeding sorry; [f]yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her.

27 And [g]immediately the king sent [§]an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison;

28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, [h]they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30 ¶ [i]And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught.[‖]

31 And he said unto them, [k]Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32 And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33 And the people saw them departing, [l]and many knew him,[*] and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

consequence! But if some reject him, he will make others ready to receive him. And no distance, no filthiness, no shame, no fear, no discouragement, no derision, no death, shall hinder their health, their comfort, their life, who apply to him: while vain, and even hurtful are all other means of relief, when used without due subordination to him. Even saints are ready to tremble when they ought to triumph: for Jesus often, by voluntary delays, lets the case, even of his most earnest supplicants, become apparently desperate before he grants relief. And justly he excludes scoffers from the means of their conviction. But if his mighty works must sometimes be only the subjects of private adoration and praise, cheerfully ought we to proclaim them, when it is most seasonable, and subservient to his and his Father's glory, and the benefit of mankind.

34 ¶ [m] And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and [n] he began to teach them many things.

35 [o] And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed:

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, [p] Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, [q] Shall we go and buy two hundred [r] pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make all sit down [*] [s] by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks,[†] by hundreds, and by fifties.

46 And when he had sent them away,[‖] he departed [y] into a mountain to pray.

47 [z] And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land.

48 And he saw them toiling in rowing; (for the wind was contrary unto them:) and [a] about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and [b] would [] have passed by them.

49 But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they [c] supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out:

* There was a positive law (Lev. 15. 11) that the Israelites, on returning from any place of public concourse, should wash their hands before sitting down to eat, lest they should have been ceremonially defiled by touching anything unclean; but as if they could improve, by adding to the divine law, the Pharisees insisted that none should eat, at any time, without having previously washed their hands. To this they added a multitude of other purifications, upon which they insisted as necessary to righteousness and salvation, and which they superstitiously and impiously elevated above the law of God.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VI.—It is strange that sinners should so cavil at, contemn, and rage against, the Redeemer; and labour to lay hinderances in the way of their own mercy. And amazing is his grace and patience in sending forth other ministers, when those formerly sent have been so basely contemned and persecuted. Men indeed are often astonished and affected by the word of God, who are never savingly changed by it. And while they reverence the preacher, and hear him gladly, they yet continue in their sins. But ministers must execute their commission whether men will hear or forbear. And he who sends them on their errand will furnish them for it, own them in it, and make it the duty and inclination of hearers to honour and support them for their work's sake. On him therefore they ought to depend for maintenance and protection, neither entangling themselves with the affairs of this life, nor fearing the faces of men. Terrible is their case who hear but reject the gospel. And most deplorable the situation of those who are under the direction of ignorant and unfaithful ministers. Men's lusts will drive them to the most fearful lengths when once they are fully entangled. And none are more base than abandoned women. Yea, carnal pretences to fidelity ject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

10 For Moses said, [a] Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death:

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is [b] Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 [c] Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ¶ [d] And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 [e] There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

16 [f] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 [g] And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, [h] Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him;

19 [i] Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats?

20 And he said, [k] That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.

21 [l] For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

22 Thefts, covetousness, * wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness:

23 All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

24 ¶ [m] And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and [n] entered into an house, and would have no man know it; but he could not be hid.

25 For [o] a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet;

26 (The woman was a [p] Greek, a Syrophenician by nation;) and [q] she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

27 But Jesus said unto her, [r] Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs.

28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: [s] yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

29 And he said unto her, [t] For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And [u] when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31 ¶ [x] And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of * Decapolis.

32 And [y] they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; † and they beseech him to put his hand upon him.

33 And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue; ‡

35 And [a] straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue ‖ was loosed, and he spake plain.

36 And [b] he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it;

† A man that was born deaf, could not, by ordinary means, have learned to speak; and, therefore, could not be said to have "an impediment in his speech;" that is, to be a stammerer. The case seems to indicate one that had been born with the power of hearing, and had learned the use of the organs of speech; but who, having lost his hearing, and whose tongue being also partially affected, retained merely the power of inarticulate and unintelligible sounds — and was, therefore, so far as meaning was concerned, absolutely dumb. See ver. 37.—Ed.

‡ The object of these actions, combined with his "looking up to heaven," (ver. 34) was to unite the bodily and visible presence of Christ on earth, with the invisible and spiritual power of his Father in heaven.—Ed.

A. D. cir. 32.

IN those days [a] the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them,

2 [b] I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing * to eat;

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far.

and honour often plunge men into the most bloody crimes, and at last into the depths of hell. But if men seek Jesus, even with natural seriousness, how great his tender compassion to them, and his concern that neither soul nor body should suffer hurt in his service. He is ready to heal every disease, and to supply every want. And he can feed them in a wilderness, or walk on floods for their help. If then he manifest his power and his glory in our deliverance, let us never turn again to folly, nor give way to hardness and unbelief.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—What self-deceivers are human hearts! The most trifling superstitions are often substituted in the place of the substantial duties of religion and morality. But no devotion, which is not commanded by God, and offered up in faith and sincerity, can be acceptable to him, or profitable to us. Alas! what an infernal fountain of wickedness is every unregenerate heart! It is ready to burst forth on every occasion. And there is an absolute necessity of God's implanting an abiding principle of life, light, faith, and love, in opposition to our natural corruption. His grace indeed makes a wonderful change even in the weakest believer. It gives the highest and most honourable views of Christ; the tenderest compassion to afflicted friends; earnest importunity in prayer for their relief; and great humility and patience under seeming insults and denials of help. And Jesus sometimes tries the faith of his people by great discouragements,

4 And his disciples answered him, [c] From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness?

5 And he asked them, [d] How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven.

6 And he commanded the people [e] to sit down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and [f] gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people.

7 And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them.

8 So [g] they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets.

9 And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

10 ¶ [h] And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha.

11 [i] And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him.

12 And he [k] sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? [l] Verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation.

13 And he [m] left them, and entering into the ship again, departed to the other side.

14 ¶ [n] Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.

15 And he charged them, saying, [o] Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.*

16 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is [p] because we have no bread.

17 And when Jesus [q] knew it, he saith unto them, Why reason ye because ye have no bread? [r] perceive ye not yet, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened?

18 Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember,

19 When [s] I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve.

20 And [t] when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven.

21 And he said unto them, [u] How is it that ye do not understand?

22 ¶ And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they [y] bring a blind man* unto him, and besought him to touch him.

23 And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought.†

24 And he looked up, and said, I [x] see men as trees, walking.‡

25 After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly.

26 And he sent him away to his house,§ saying, [z] Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

27 ¶ And Jesus went out and his disciples into the towns of Cesarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am?

28 And they answered, John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets.

29 And he saith unto them, But [b] whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ.‖

30 And [c] he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

31 ¶ And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32 And he spake that saying [d] openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

33 But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou [e] savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.

34 ¶ And when he had called the people unto him, with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

36 For [f] what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the [g] Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

* This miracle is recorded by Mark alone—a clear internal proof that he is not a mere epitomiser of Matthew.—Ed.

† This is the only example of a progressive miracle—all others wrought by our Lord, not excepting that at Siloam, (John 9. 6, 7) were instantaneous. But the miracle, it is evident from ver. 26, our Lord did not intend for the public, but for the man himself; therefore this progressive process is adopted the more to arrest his attention. —Ed.

z 1 Cor. 13. 11, 12. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9. Is. 29. 18.

‡ As the former miracle (ch. 7. 32) seems to have been wrought upon a man who was not born, but had become, deaf and dumb—so this seems to be wrought on a man who was not born blind, but had become so, probably early in life, by ophthalmia. This seems plain from his capacity of distinguishing between men and trees—which he could not have done had he been born totally blind.—Note. Both miracles are intended to exemplify the restorations, and the latter, the gradual progress, to spiritual vision, frequently exemplified in the children of God.—Ed.

§ As our Lord sent him to his house, yet prohibited him from going into the village, Bethsaida, it is evident the man was not of that town; and, therefore, he will not allow him to expend his evidence where he was not known; but to go to his house, where, from the knowledge of his character, every word would tell upon the people.—Ed.

‖ The omission here of all the favourable circumstances mentioned by Matthew, gives strong corroboration to the opinion that Mark wrote under the immediate eye of Peter; who, so far from allowing his own praise to be celebrated, is at pains, as it were, to suppress whatever might seem intended for his personal honour. And, intended as his Gospel was for Roman converts, the omission ministers a providential rebuke to the system of despotism in this world, and of assumed power in the world to come, which the Papal power has attempted to establish and maintain, by a false interpretation of our Lord's reply to Peter.—Ed.

even while he secretly upholds and animates it, till at last he crown it with the full enjoyment of all that it can wish. What complicated diseases spring from our complicated lusts and crimes! And it is a great mercy that Jesus Christ has power over all plagues. Let me then, conscious of sinful pollutions, and miseries unnumbered, look up to him for relief in his own time and way. No hardened heart, deaf ears, nor stammering tongue, can withstand his healing words of power. Let me listen to his instructions with an obedient ear; and ascribe to him, as he shall direct, the glory due to his name, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—In following Christ, let me count nothing too hard. Let me trust him with my body as well as my soul: and bread shall be given me, my water shall be sure. Never let my unbelief raise, or hesitate at, difficulties, as if they were too great for Christ to surmount. And let me never misinterpret his words or providences, nor ever forget his former mighty works. It is highly absurd to reject the most plain and proper evidences which he gives of his dignified character, and insist to be gratified with others, far less useful, merely because they are of our own contriving. Yea, infidelity and impenitent

AND he said unto them, [a] Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.*

2 ¶ [b] And after six days, Jesus taketh with him [c] Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain [d] apart by themselves: and he was [e] transfigured before them.

3 And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

4 And [f] there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus.

5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is [g] good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

6 For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

7 And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, [h] This is my beloved Son; hear him.

8 And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, [i] he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

10 And they kept that saying with themselves,† questioning one with another what the rising from the dead‡ should mean.

11 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that [k] Elias must first come?

12 And he answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things; § and [l] how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought.

13 But I say unto you, That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

14 ¶ And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and, running to him, saluted him.

16 And he asked the scribes, What [m] question ye * with them?

17 And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, [n] I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit:

18 [o] And wheresoever he taketh him, he † teareth him; and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and [p] they could not.

19 He answereth him, and saith, [q] O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? Bring him unto me.

20 And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit [r] tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed, foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, [s] Of a child.

22 And oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, [t] have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, [u] If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; [x] help thou mine unbelief.

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, [y] he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 [z] And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him; and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But [a] Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

28 [b] And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, [c] This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.‡

30 ¶ [d] And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; * and he would not that any man should know it.

31 [f] For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

(See Rom. 1. 4. 2 Cor. 13. 4). It came again in intellectual power when the Holy Ghost was poured out in tongues upon the day of Pentecost (Acts 2. 4); and, within that generation, it came in providential and physical power at the capture of Jerusalem and the dissolution of the Jewish polity.—Ed.

May not, however, the whole of this violence be well avoided, and the meaning be clearly educed, merely by supplying the second clause of ver. 12, thus, "And (he answered and told them) how it is written of the Son of man," &c.; and prefacing ver. 13. thus, (And he answered) "But I say unto you," &c., "as it is written of him:" thus displaying the parallel of prophecy and suffering between the type and the antitype?—Ed.

For as no one can doubt that grace is administered in answer to "the prayer of faith;" so, that prayer and fasting are habitually and frequently, though not inseparably, united, is the testimony of our Lord, illustrated by the practice of his apostles. hardness of heart will work the most fearful ruin for those who indulge them. And Jesus will perform no miracles to gratify men's humours; but will abandon those who insist upon them to the heavy judgments which they deserve. But great is his readiness to bear with, help, heal, and save them, who, sensible of their wants and maladies, apply to him for relief; and in an instant, or more gradually, —in public or private, as best promotes his glory and their good,—kindly will he bestow it. What mean thoughts men have of Christ! and what carnal views have some real saints of the real glories of his office and work! And never doth Satan more readily cast the saints down, than after some signal token of Jesus' regard.

Nothing doth Jesus more detest than low thoughts of his sufferings and death; and in nothing does he manifest more true love than in administering sharp rebukes. If we expect glory with him, we must now take up our cross and follow him: for if we be ashamed of him now, we must not expect to be honoured by him in the last judgment. And if, in forsaking him, we court worldly profits, pleasures, or honours, we shall fall into everlasting perdition. In death or judgment it will little avail us what our external circumstances in life were. And surely our great concern ought to be what shall become of our immortal souls in the eternal state.

32 But [g] they understood not* that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 ¶ [h] And he came to Capernaum: and, being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: [i] for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, [k] If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And he took [l] a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them,

37 [m] Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.†

38 ¶ [n] And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him,‡ because he followeth not us.

39 But Jesus said, Forbid him not: [o] for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me.

40 For he that is not against us is on our part.

41 [p] For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward.

42 [q] And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, [r] it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea.

43 [s] And if thy hand § offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched;

44 [t] Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

45 And if thy foot ‖ offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched;

46 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47 And if thine eye * offend thee, [u] pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire;

48 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

49 [x] For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.

50 Salt* is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

2 ¶ [c] And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting* him.

3 And he answered and said unto them, [d] What did Moses command you?

4 And they said, [e] Moses suffered† to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

5 And Jesus answered and said unto them, [f] For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept:

6 But [g] from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

7 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

8 [h] And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh.

9 [i] What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

11 And he saith unto them, [k] Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

12 And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 44—48. The fire denotes the eternal torments of hell; and the never-dying worm denotes conscience, perpetually accusing, upbraiding, and condemning. 49. Every one in hell is preserved incorruptible, by the very nature of the torments; even as, in saints, the principle of grace, received in regeneration, secures eternal holiness and happiness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—O the transcendent glories of our Redeemer! How delightful are the manifestations thereof! Happy are they who are much favoured with them; but happier they who in heaven always behold his face! The ravishing displays of God on earth are indeed quickly passed: but it is enough to hear his Son, when we see him not. He is risen from the dead, and ascended to glory; and will quickly return, without sin, unto our salvation. Let us then exercise ourselves, not in curious questions, but in humble faith and ardent desires. And let all the opposition we receive from devils and men render his return doubly welcome.—Alas! how early Satan enters into men! But when once entered, he holds fast his possession, and cruelly and basely abuses his subjects. And yet, in cases the most alarming, multitudes take his part against Christ and his disciples. Invaluable are the mercies that unbelief defers or deprives men of. And near, though sometimes terribly introduced, is our relief, when unbelief is once made our burden. Yea, often the clearest views of the cause of our miseries come after our deliverance. How Jesus delighted in suffering for men, and yet how ill his sufferings are relished by men under the power of carnal ambition! Many proudly conceal their ignorance till it ruins them; and contend in angry debates till they have lost all sight of the truth. And it is a mercy if Jesus rebuke them, and shame them out of their ambition into peace and humility. It is base for Christians to take it ill that God's work prospers in any hands but those of their particular party. And it is very dangerous to oppose that which is ratified by the bless-

14 But when Jesus saw it, he [n] was much displeased, and said unto them, [o] Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

15 Verily I say unto you, [p] Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

16 [q] And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

17 ¶ [r] And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, [s] Good Master, [t] what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

18 And Jesus said unto him, [u] Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God.

19 [x] Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother.

20 And he answered and said unto him, Master, [y] all these have I observed from my youth.

21 [z] Then Jesus, beholding him, loved him, [*] and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, [a] take up the cross, and follow me.

22 [b] And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, [c] How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

24 And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them [d] that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!

25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, [e] Who then can be saved?

27 And Jesus, looking upon them, saith, [f] With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

28 ¶ [g] Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

29 And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, [h] There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, [*] Loved him.—The special love of Christ to this inquirer has been matter of difficulty to expositors. Hence they have sought solutions in new translations—such as, "He accosted him kindly;" "He felt kindly disposed towards him;" "He kissed him." All these have been sought for on the principle that the inquirer remaining an absolute lover of the world, any special love towards him was impossible. These difficulties, however, seem made, rather than found. Would not Christ have loved an enemy, and taught his disciples the same? not, indeed, with love of approbation or complacency—for that were unnatural, impossible, and sinful—but with love of compassion, benevolence, and forgiveness. Why, then, might he not feel some special movement of the love of pity and benevolence towards this visitant? 2. Is it certain, because this man "went away grieved," that he therefore never returned? It is by no means certain; and his return is the higher probability. See ver. 27.—Ed.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one [s] on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, [t] Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of [u] the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they say unto him, [x] We can. And Jesus said unto them, [y] Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 [z] But to sit on my right hand, and on my left hand, is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

41 And [a] when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John.

42 But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, [b] Ye know that they which [‡] are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them.

43 [c] But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister:

44 And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.

45 [d] For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. [§] ing of God. Yea, if nothing appear contrary to the faith of the gospel, charity requires us to hope the best. God resists the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. The favour which we show to any for Christ's sake he will take as done to himself, and it shall not lose its reward. Better is it to go to heaven through much self-denial, than to hell in a course of self-indulgence. Let therefore the terrors and eternity of hell torments, heartily believed, be a powerful check to our raging passions. And unless we wish to be through eternity salted with God's wrath, as sacrifices to his avenging justice, let us, as acceptable sacrifices to his mercy and kindness, pray to have our hearts salted with grace, and our lives ordered as becometh the gospel.

46 ¶ [e]And they came to Jericho: and as he went out[*] of Jericho with his disciples, and a great number of people, blind Bartimeus, the son of Timeus, sat by the highway-side begging.

47 And when he heard that it was [f]Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou [g]son of David, have mercy on me.

48 And [h]many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

49 [i]And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, [k]Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

50 [l]And he, casting away his garment,[†] rose, and came to Jesus.

51 And Jesus answered and said unto him, [m]What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, [n]Lord, that I might receive my sight.

52 And Jesus said unto him, [o]Go thy way; thy faith hath [‡]made thee whole. [p]And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

CHAPTER XI.

(1) Jesus rides into Jerusalem: 1—11. (2) Returning from Bethany he curses the barren fig-tree: 12—14. (3) Drives the traders out of the temple: 15—19. (4) Exhorts to steadfastness in faith, and forgiveness with prayer: 20—26. (5) Exposes the cavils of the scribes, while he defends his authority: 27—33.

AND [a]when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at [b]the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that [c]the Lord [d]hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.[*]

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, [e]and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, [f]cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And [g]Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the even-tide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 ¶ [h]And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 [i]And seeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves,[*] he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man[†] eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 ¶ [k]And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, [l]My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves.

18 [m]And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine.

19 [n]And when even was come, he went out of the city.

20 ¶ [o]And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter, calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away.

22 And Jesus answering, saith unto them, [p]Have faith in God.

23 [q]For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

24 Therefore I say unto you, [r]What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

* The fig-tree produces its fruit before its leaves, so that the appearance of the leaves was evidence that the fruit should have been ripening; and as "the time of figs (that is, the time for their being ripe and gathered) was not yet (come)," our Lord had an additional right to expect fruit. But here the infidel asks, Does not this ignorance strangely contrast with, or, rather, invalidate the wonderful prophetic wisdom attributed to Jesus in the previous narrative? The answer is obvious. The visit was intended to furnish an emblem of the blighting curse that speedily follows a barren professor of the gospel.—Ed.

† But even supposing this tree to have been no man's property, but growing on an absolute common, how could Jesus be justified in destroying it for ever? If this objection be of any force, it will go to arraign the providence of God, and all that are called laws of nature—by which thousands of plants, and shrubs, and trees, are annually destroyed by canker, or blight, or storms; and as whatever proves too much, in reality proves nothing—so an objection that goes too far, is, in reality, no objection where it is applied.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—What an example of unwearied patience and labour, of wisdom and prudence, of humility and condescension, of tenderness and compassion, has Jesus set before us in himself! and under what an excellent dispensation of purity, light, and grace, do we now live in the gospel period! Its various truths are set forth in the most evident light, and all its precepts recommended by the strongest arguments. The laws of marriage are plainly settled, for preventing confusion, and for promoting conjugal faithfulness and affection. And the privileges of believers' children are clearly established, and themselves made emblems of the true heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. But self-confidence, proud ambition, and a worldly spirit, are great hinderances to real religion and happiness. And God's grace rarely recovers men from their influence, or teaches them that the only use of riches is to do good with them. Alas, how many have several amiable qualities, and yet for want of indwelling grace, land at last in eternal torments! but rich are the rewards of self-denial and multiplied losses for Christ's sake. And yet it is only believing views of his sufferings that will make us to delight in them. It is shameful for the disciples of a crucified Redeemer repeatedly to contend about the imaginary trifles of worldly grandeur. And great is his compassion in bearing with the infirmities, ignorance, and frowardness of his people. Yea, he is ready to heal such as apply to him for relief in the firm faith of his infinite ability and willingness to save. No meanness, no distemper can stop the egress of his special love. And if he welcome, no matter how many thousands wickedly discourage me. And if he succour, supply, save, and enlighten my soul or body, cheerfully should I follow him in my way to eternal rest.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—The divine sovereignty, the omniscience and almighty power of our Redeemer, was clearly manifest, even in his deepest humiliation: and his meek and lowly triumph proclaimed the spiritual nature of his kingdom. Every one's property ought therefore to be ready at his call, and every mouth opened to publish his praise. Notwithstanding the fairest pretences to the contrary, every ordinance should be inviolably observed according to his law. Yea, it is the great design of Christ and his gospel to reform the worship of God, and the hearts and manners of men. And he acts with great majesty and power whenever he takes his work in hand. Christ will do great things for such as believe firmly, pray earnestly, and forgive injuries heartily. But alas, how many prayers are lost for want of faith and a charitable frame towards others! Infinite is the danger of living fruitless under the means of salvation, and of being blasted by a Saviour's curse, into endless perdition! But the more he displays his glory, holiness, and power, in his word or work, the more ungodly sinners, and especially 20 Now there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and dying, left no seed.

21 And the second took her, and died, neither left he any seed: and the third likewise.

22 And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also.

23 In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife.

24 And Jesus answering, said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because [y] ye know not the [z] scriptures, neither [a] the power of God?

25 For, when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are [b] as the angels which are in heaven.

26 And as touching the dead, that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, [c] how in the bush* God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?

27 He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

28 ¶ [d] And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all?

29 And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, [e] Hear, † O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord:

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment.

31 And the second is like, namely this, [f] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for [g] there is one God; and there is none other but he;

33 And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, [h] is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, [i] Thou art not far ‡ from the kingdom of God. [k] And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 ¶ [l] And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the son of David?

36 For David himself said by the Holy Ghost, The LORD said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and [m] whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly.*

38 ¶ And he said unto them in his doctrine, [n] Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the marketplaces,

39 And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts;

40 Which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: [o] these shall receive greater damnation.

41 ¶ [p] And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast [q] money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two † mites, which make a farthing.

43 And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, [r] Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury.

44 For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

† The difference between the quotation in Matthew (22. 35.) and Mark, is very instructive. Matthew wrote for the Jews, who knew the whole passage; and he, therefore, for the sake of brevity, quotes but a part, to suggest the remainder. Mark, who wrote for the Gentiles, who previously knew nothing of the passage, quotes the whole; and as his record would speedily pass into the hands of polytheists, he specially introduces the Mosaic testimony to the unity of God.—Ed.

Besides, it is probable that among "the common people" there were many sincere believers; for experience proves that the humbling doctrines of the gospel are generally more welcome to the poor than to the rich; — yet, thanks be to God, while "not many mighty, not many noble, are called," there are still some who, like Joseph of Arimathea, the Roman centurion, or the dignified Ethiopian, are as the salt of their various orders —demonstrating how God can be remembered amidst the profusion of riches, the bustle of a camp, or the splendour of a court.—Ed.

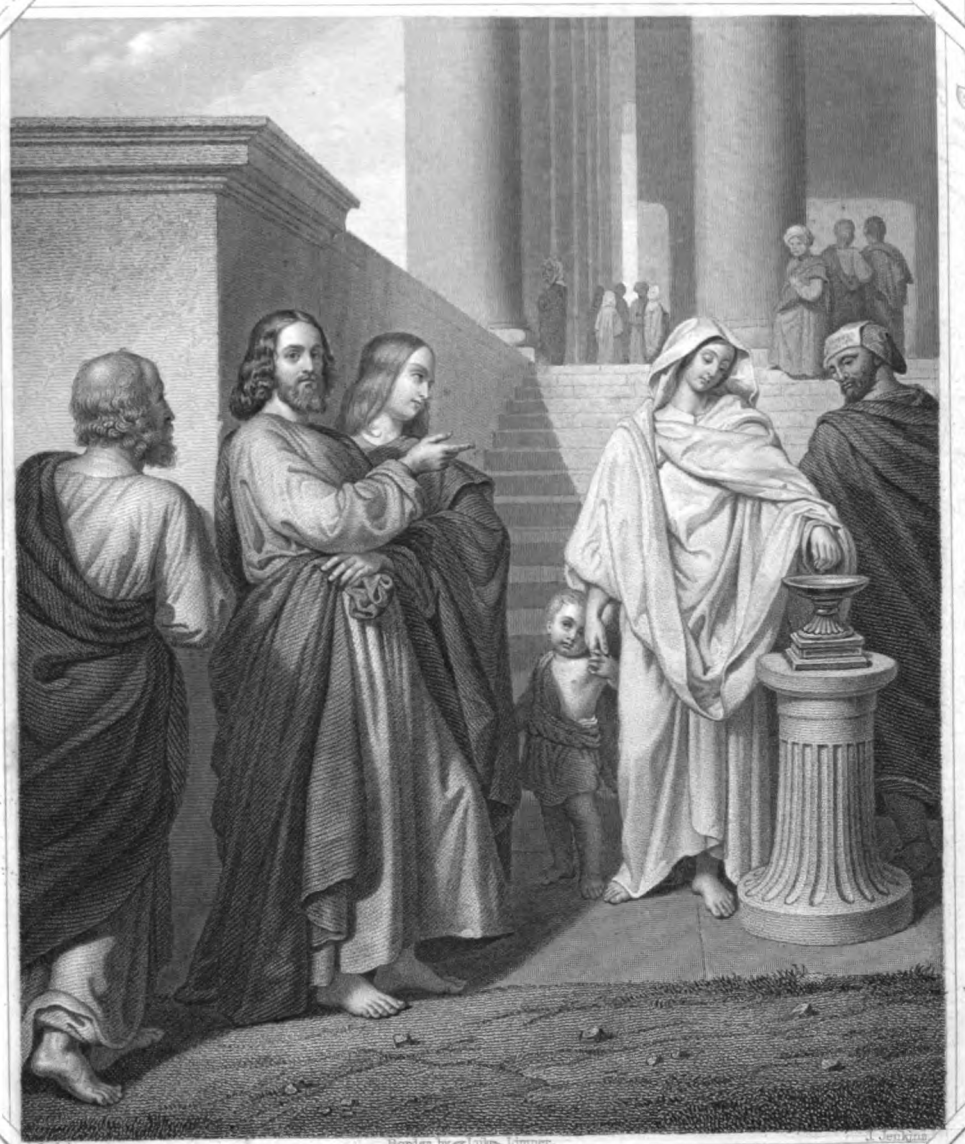
* The apparent discrepancy between the questions in this place, and those given by Matthew, 24. 3, is to be accounted for, not by any defect in the recollection of Mark, but by that guidance of Spirit whereby he was led to select such points as would be most intelligible to his Roman readers. See ch. 12. 29. Besides, it is not to be imagined when four persons put the questions, that all should employ exactly the same words. The Spirit, therefore, would direct the evangelist to choose, not the words Matthew had been directed to choose, but the words of any other of the four apostles more suited to the comprehension of the readers for whom the gospel was first intended, as well as for the future edification of the church.—Ed.

AND as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here!

2 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately,



4 Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign* when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus answering them, began to say, Take heed lest any man deceive you:

hypocrites, set themselves against him. Yea, by every art, evasion, and wicked or wilful untruth, they labour to oppose him and his interests in the world. But none of their projects are hid from, or can prevail against him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Sovereign is the kindness of God in planting a church among men, and astonishing his patience towards obstinate and rebellious sinners. Thousands of the most shocking affronts to himself, his messengers, and messages, he endures before he executes his wrath upon them. Yea, marvellous above all is his grace in sending his Son to seek and save such sinners, and call them to repentance! And just and unavoidable their ruin who reject him! But if some will tread on the Redeemer, God will make others to receive him, and bring forth fruits answerable to their privileges. And, in spite of all the rage of his enemies, Jesus shall be honoured, and his kingdom established—to the astonishment and joy of all those who have experienced his power, and the influence of his grace, in their hearts. But if any remain unconcerned, no wonder that at last they become exasperated against his message and ministers.—They who heartily hate one another, more heartily unite against him and his cause: Nor are their designs ever more malignant than when they profess most kindness. Yet nothing can conceal their wickedness from God. Men often pretend a regard to the scriptures, that they may undermine their credit. And there is no error so extravagant but they, who live ignorant of the scriptures and the power of God, may affirm. The word of revelation sets the just bounds to civil and religious concerns: it gives the 6 [g] For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7 [h] And when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but [i] the end shall not be yet.

8 [k] For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of [l] sorrows.

9 [m] But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

10 [n] And the gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 [o] But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12 [p] Now the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: [q] but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 ¶ [r] But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing [s] where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand,) then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains:

15 [t] And let him that is on the house-top not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house:

16 And let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment.

17 [u] But wo to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 [x] For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be.

20 [y] And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved; but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days.

21 [z] And then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not:

22 [a] For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall show signs and wonders, to seduce, [b] if it were possible, even the elect.

23 [c] But take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

24 ¶ [d] But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light,

25 And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken.

26 [e] And then they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory.

27 [f] And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

28 Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near:

29 So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, [g] know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

30 Verily I say unto you, That this generation shall not pass till all these things be done.

31 [h] Heaven and earth shall pass away; but my words shall not pass away.

32 ¶ [i] But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.

33 [k] Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

34 For the Son of man is [l] as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 [m] Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh; at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning:

36 Lest, coming suddenly, he find you [n] sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.

clearest certainty of a general resurrection, makes the plainest discoveries of the eternal state, and honourably and delightfully connects our duties to God and to men. They who improve the light which God gives them, bid fair to be rendered more knowing, or even led into all truth. Yea, babes in Christ understand more of the mystery of godliness than the graceless learned. Alas, that many are never more than almost Christians! An inordinate desire of human respect marks their carnal and unmortified heart. But the greater men's hypocrisy and wickedness, the more terrible will be their condemnation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—If external privileges be abused, they but aggravate our guilt and hasten our ruin; and national sins will bring on national judgments. Nothing can happen but as Jesus foresaw and predetermined. And great is his kindness in warning men, before their contempt of himself and his gospel bring on them those temporal miseries which presage their eternal destruction. Kindly he chastens his own faithful servants and people, that they may not be condemned with the world: and graciously he warns them of their danger, and directs them how to conduct themselves for his honour and their own security. Safely he preserves his elect, that even in the worst of times not one of them can be ruined. And many, who abhor and persecute them, owe their temporal preservation to them and their prayers.—If men bear his image, they must expect hatred

AFTER [a] two days was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 [b] But they said, Not on the feast-day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ¶ [c] And being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman, having an alabaster-box of ointment of [*] spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, [†] and poured it on his head.

4 [d] And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than [‡] three hundred pence, and [e] have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, [f] Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 [g] For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good; but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand [h] to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, [i] Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

10 ¶ [k] And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.

11 And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to [l] give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 ¶ [m] And the first day of unleavened bread, when they [§] killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And wheresoever he shall go in, say ye to the goodman of the house, [n] The Master saith, Where is the guest-chamber, where [o] I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

15 And he will show you a large [p] upper-room furnished [‖] and prepared: there make ready for us.

16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and [q] found as he had said unto them: and [r] they made ready the passover.

17 And [s] in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 [t] And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, [u] One of you which eateth with me shall betray me.

19 And they began to be [x] sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? and another said, Is it I?

20 And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that [y] dippeth with me in the dish.

21 The Son of man indeed goeth, [z] as it is written of him: but [a] wo to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

22 ¶ [b] And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat; [*] this [c] is my body.

23 And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, This is my [d] blood of the new testament, which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the [e] fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the [f] kingdom of God.

26 ¶ And when they had sung an [g] hymn, they [h] went out into the mount of Olives.

27 [i] And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night; for it is written, [k] I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

28 But after that I am risen, [l] I will go before you into Galilee.

29 [m] But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.

30 And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 [n] But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in anywise. [o] Likewise also said they all.

32 ¶ [p] And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I [q] shall pray.

33 And he taketh with him [r] Peter, and James, and John, and began to be [s] sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and [t] watch.

35 And he went forward a little, and [u] fell

† She brake the box.—The word translated brake, signifies "to rub together, to crush, to break in pieces." Some take it here to signify "to shake up"—translating "very precious" by "liquid," as on the margin. The breaking can scarcely be spoken of the box itself; but, most probably, is spoken of the envelope or case, in which the box was enclosed, or the seal or cement by which it was secured. The idea of shaking being necessary to "bring it into a proper state of liquidity," as some suppose, proceeds upon inattention to the low temperature at which such oils are perfectly liquefied, and the advanced state of the year in the warm climate of Palestine.—Ed.

from the world, even from their nearest carnal relations. The enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent shall never cease. But let them do their worst, God will cause his gospel to spread through the world, and will support his faithful servants and followers: guide them by his counsel while here, and afterwards receive them to glory. And nothing is more proper to preserve us steady and faithful in evil times, than constant watchfulness and fervent prayer. In so doing we shall be able, at Jesus' tribunal, to give our account with joy, and not with grief.

on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 And he said, Abba,* Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldest not thou watch one hour?

38 Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation: the spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.

39 And again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep again; (for their eyes were heavy;) neither wist they what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up, let us go: lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 ¶ And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, [x] Master, Master;† and kissed him.

46 And they laid their hands on him, and took him.

47 And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear.

48 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me?

49 I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: but the scriptures must be fulfilled.

50 And they all forsook him, and fled.

51 And there followed him a certain young man,‡ having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him:

52 And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

53 ¶ And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests, and the elders, and the scribes.

54 And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55 [y] And the chief priests, and all the council, sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death; and [z] found none:

56 For many bare false witness against him; but their witness agreed not together.

57 And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying,

58 We heard him say, [a] I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands.

59 But neither so did their witness agree together.

60 And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

61 [b] But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou [c] the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?*

62 And Jesus said, I am: [d] and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high priest [e] rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

64 Ye have heard [f] the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 [g] And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophesy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66 ¶ [h] And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of [i] the maids of the high priest;

67 And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus [k] of Nazareth.

68 But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch: and the cock crew.

69 [l] And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them.

70 And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art [m] a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto.

71 [n] But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak.

72 [o] And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And [p] when he thought thereon, he wept.

* Abba, in the Syriac, signifies father; and was the title given to a father by those who were born Jews and were free. Hence it was not allowed for a child born of a slave, or proselyte of the gate, and a Jew, to call his father abba; because, among the Jews, the condition of the children depending either upon the real or adopting mother, none were reputed Jews unless born of a Jewish mother, or proselyte of the covenant. Neither were children free if their mother was a slave (Gal. 4. 24). But though, on coming into the world, Christ took upon him "the form of a servant," yet being still "God's dear Son," he here addresses him by the title peculiar to one "free born," and cries to him, in the pangs of agony inexpressible, "Abba, the Father!"—Ed.

† Master, Master.—But Matthew says his words were "Hail, Master."—Is there not, therefore, either a contradiction between the two, or an error in the one or the other? or, at least, is there not here a clear proof that the inspiration was not verbal; for verbal inspiration would require perfect agreement? The answer to this plausible objection is easy: Verbal inspiration does not require perfect agreement between two or more narratives of the same event—it merely requires perfect truth in each. Judas must have repeated his salutation—"Hail, Master, Hail, Master,"—a thing most natural. Matthew records the one address, "Hail, Master:" Mark omits the "Hail," and records not all Judas said, but repeats "Master, Master."—which he actually did say. Why the Holy Spirit directed these different selections of words, we cannot positively tell. The reason, most probably, lay in the suitableness of the one address to the customs of the Jews, and of the other to those of the Romans.—Ed.

‡ And there followed him a certain young man.—Who this was, or why at all introduced, does not appear. Conjecture is, at all times, a doubtful guide, and seldom to be followed—yet here, where it cannot do an injury, and may afford a pleasing reflection, we would venture to suggest the possibility, at least, that this may have been that "young man" whom Jesus loved (Mat. 19. 20. Mark 10. 21); and who, repenting of his worldly sorrow (Mark 10. 22), had so far complied with our Lord's direction as to have reduced himself to the mere loose garment he wore, and who now literally and absolutely fulfils the injunction, by gladly parting with the last remnant of the property which he once so dearly loved. But whoever he was, he shows, by his example, what a man will give up for the safety of his body.—What, then, should we not renounce for the salvation of our souls!—Ed.

* Son of the Blessed.—The apparent discrepancy between this question, and the consequent objection either to the historic accuracy of the evangelist, or the verbal inspiration of this Gospel, will be solved and answered as in the case of ver. 45. In this case an additional answer to the objection presents itself. The high priest spoke, most probably, in a dialect of the Syriac, the evangelists translated into Greek, a language rich in words; and, for wise reasons, the Spirit of God may have directed each evangelist to a different, but equivalent, translation of the same word.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Redeeming love applied to the heart inflames it with the strongest gratitude. Nothing is thought too costly to manifest regard to the Redeemer. And they that honour him shall be sufficiently vindicated and honoured: wherever the fame of Jesus goes, thither shall theirs go at last. And in whatever point we have his orders, we may go forth depending on his providence for success.—Never is the church on earth altogether free from treacherous hypocrites: and they who are most so are the most backward to suspect themselves. But O how astonishing is the love of Jesus, who put an end to the passover by

AND [a] straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes, and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate.

2 [b] And Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering, said unto him, Thou sayest it.

3 [c] And the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing.*

4 [d] And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee.

5 But Jesus yet answered nothing; [†] so that Pilate marvelled.

6 ¶ [e] Now at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 [f] And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them.

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, [g] Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 (For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him [h] for envy.)

11 [i] But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them.

12 And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the [k] King of the Jews?

13 And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14 Then Pilate said unto them, Why? what evil hath he done? [l] And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15 [m] And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

16 ¶ [n] And the soldiers led him away into the hall called Pretorium; [‡] and they call together the whole band.

17 And they clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head, 18 And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews!

19 [o] And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and, [p] bowing their knees, worshipped him.

20 And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and [q] led him out to crucify him.

21 [r] And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross.

22 And they bring him unto [s] the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a scull.

23 And they gave him to drink [t] wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not.

24 ¶ And when they had crucified him, [u] they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take.

25 And it was the [x] third hour; and they crucified him.

26 [y] And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

27 [z] And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28 And the [a] scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he was numbered with the transgressors.

29 ¶ [b] And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days,

30 Save thyself, and come down from the cross.

31 Likewise also the chief priests, mocking, said among themselves, with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save.

32 Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. [c] And they that were crucified with him reviled him.

33 ¶ And [d] when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole [†] land until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, [e] Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

35 And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, [f] Behold, he calleth Elias.

being sacrificed himself; and instituted his supper, in which we might remember and feast on his expiatory and heaven-purchasing death! Great was his love in warning his disciples of their danger, in reproving and pitying their weakness, and in submitting to such sufferings in soul, in body, and in reputation, for the sake of his enemies; and good the confession which he boldly witnessed before many witnesses! —But how amazing is the wickedness of men! Jewish rulers plot to murder the Messiah, on whom hangs the life, the eternal salvation, of millions unnumbered—for a paltry bribe Judas deliberately betrays him—upon a small temptation Peter repeatedly and most awfully denies him—and through an ill-grounded fear of man, the other disciples shamefully desert him in his suffering condition! What then must sin be, that can make men such monsters, and the divine Saviour so miserable!—There is great need of fervent and frequent prayer in a time of trouble. Nothing is worse than slothfulness therein. And none are more active instruments of hell than apostates from Christ. No fall of eminent professors ought to make us stumble at the ways of Christ. Nor need we think it strange, though, notwithstanding our innocence, we should be treated as the vilest miscreants; or though our nearest relations and most intimate friends should desert us, or turn our inveterate opposers. Let us, in silent patience, possess our souls. If God be glorified,

(1) An angel declares the resurrection of Jesus to three women: 1—8. (2) He appears to Mary Magdalene: 9—11. (3) He appears to two disciples going into the country: 12, 13. (4) Then to the eleven, whom he commissions to preach his gospel, and work miracles: 14—18. (5) He ascends into heaven; and his disciples continue to preach, the Lord working with them: 19, 20.

AND when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

2 And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at* the rising of the sun.

3 And they said among themselves, † Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4 And when they looked, they saw that [a] the stone was rolled away; for it was very great.

5 And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man* sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

6 And he saith unto them, [b] Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth,† which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter‡ that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

8 [c] And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled, and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

9 ¶ Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

10 And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

11 And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12 ¶ After that he appeared in another form‖ [d] unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

14 ¶ Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat ‖ at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

15 And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 [e] He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved;* but he that believeth not, shall be damned.

17 And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

18 [f] They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

† Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth.—A pious mind—which is always the same with a truly philosophical mind—will feel pleasure in observing that an angel from heaven is well acquainted with the name of an humble and despised town upon earth—of which he makes special and honourable mention, as the birthplace of Jesus. And let every humble, though, it may be, despised believer, remember that the contrite heart receives from the Saviour, the honour of being recorded, not only as his birthplace, but his home. See Gal. 4. 19. John 14. 23. Rev. 3. 20.—Ed.

‡ Peter, it is most likely, would now consider himself unworthy the name of disciple, seeing he had done what none of the rest (nay, what not even Judas) had done—first denied positively—then denied contemptuously—and, lastly, forsworn his master! He is, therefore, specially mentioned, to afford him the earliest assurance of his Lord's compassion and pardon, and of his speedy restoration to the apostolic office, he had justly forfeited by his instability.—Ed.

‖ Another form—Another dress, and with a different manner—circumstances that will often so change the appearance as to render recognition very difficult, even to the most observant; and still more so to those whose hearts are too much absorbed by their own sorrows to allow them to attend to the appearance or concerns of others.—Ed.

* He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved.—This text cannot justly be adduced for the denial of infant baptism and the confinement of baptism exclusively to adults; for if none may be baptized but those who believe, then, indeed, the child of a believer cannot be baptized but upon the same principle—neither can it be saved—a conclusion to which surely no one would venture to come; but a conclusion inevitable, if every highest and lowest promise of God be not to believers and their children. if the scripture be fulfilled, if the church be edified, and if God at last rise up to vindicate us, it is enough: and if, through self-confidence, we have denied our Redeemer, let us without delay think thereon, and weep.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—What shocking wickedness is it for men, for the professed people of God, to calumniate, to persecute, to deride, to murder, the meek, the innocent, the divine Jesus, the Saviour of mankind! It was strange that the HOSANNAS of the mob should be so quickly turned into murderous clamours and cruel derisions!—That, contrary to reason, contrary to proof, contrary to convictions, almost every one should concur to abuse our gracious Redeemer! Inexpressible were his sufferings from men, from devils, and from his offended Father! Alas, how vilified was his character, how tormented his body, while his soul was deserted and distressed. And yet with astonishing and silent resignation he bore all for the salvation of his betrayers and murderers. What honourable attestations Providence procured for him in the deepest debasement! Prodigies attended his death; Pilate, his judge, repeatedly declared him innocent, and the Jewish Messiah; and the centurion acknowledged him to be the Son of God. Joseph of Arimathea boldly begged, and honourably buried his corpse. The women attended in order to embalm him. And shall not my soul love and honour him, who so loved me and gave himself for me!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Saints, in love, sometimes prepare that for Christ which he will never need. And they often fear where there is matter of joy in a risen Redeemer. The weaker sex, over which Satan at first triumphed, sometimes appear the veriest heroes in the cause of Christ. Apprehending difficulties which they know not how to surmount, they go forward depending on God, and find them removed: and readily, amidst fear and confusion, they obey the heavenly direction.—Happy are they who have a risen Redeemer as theirs, with all mercy in his heart, and all power in his hand! How marvellous his love in appearing first to Mary Magdalene, who had been lately so notorious a sinner; and so early to disciples, who had so shamefully deserted him! How careful was he to establish the truth of his resurrection by repeated appearances to his incredulous followers! He conquered their unreasonable diffidence, and shamed them out of their unbelief. But great was his grace in granting his apostles an unlimited commission to preach the gospel in all the world, and miraculous powers to attest it. And astonishing is his glory in heaven, and the blessed effects of it in the descent of his Spirit.—Let me now then believe the gospel to the saving of my soul. Let my faith and hope be in God through him. Let me rejoice in my risen, my ascended Saviour; and eagerly ask, and abundantly receive, the gifts which he received for men, even for the rebellious. And let my affections be set on things above, where Jesus is at the right hand of God.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MARK.

Biography is, certainly, one of the most efficient modes of instruction; for by gratifying curiosity, it lightens study, and excites attention, while it conveys and fixes precept by the visible power of example. In the biographies, however, composed by worldly men—nay, sometimes in those composed by religious men—minute and trivial details are often so extended as to beget a fear that the idolatry of friendship has rather attempted to set up an object of admiration and worship, than to record important facts either for warning against error and sin, or instruction in truth and righteousness.

Among the numerous internal evidences of the divine origin of the Scriptures, their biographies hold a conspicuous place, their chief characteristics being truth, concerning good or evil, and brevity. Had the life of our Lord been "a cunningly devised fable," it contains materials for many volumes, which literary vanity never could have compressed into four brief tracts, such as the gospels literally are. This observation applies in a particular manner to the gospel by Mark, which reduces the whole ministerial life of the most remarkable character that ever appeared on earth to sixteen chapters! Mark was not himself, so far as appears, a constant companion of our Lord, and so must have received several of his narratives, and especially whatever he records of our Lord's private discourses, from one of the twelve apostles, who is believed to have been Peter. That the style and contents of his gospel are somewhat similar to those of Matthew, is certain; yet are there differences, both of omission and addition, to prove that he was no copyist; and especially there are some marks of style that prove the distinct originality of Mark,—the Spirit of God making use of the various styles of men—the words being his own—just as in nature God manifests a continued variety, though that boundless variety unites in one witness to his wisdom, power, and goodness.

As an example of Mark's peculiarity of style, one word may be selected, the word εὐθέως, immediately; which occurs in Matthew 15 times, in Luke 8 times, in John 4 times, in Acts 9 times, and in Mark no less than 39 times! A peculiarity so striking that were it certain that the Evangelist was that John Mark who was servant to Paul and Barnabas (Acts 15. 37—39), his so frequent use of the word might be looked upon as a result and memorial of that ready and habitual attention with which he was accustomed to reply to their directions.

That he wrote for Gentile strangers is obvious from the following, among other evidences. 1. When he mentions the Jordan (chap. 1. 5), the appellation river is added. 2. As the Romans could not understand the Jewish phrase "defiled" hands, he adds, parenthetically, the description "unwashen" (chap. 7. 2). 3. When he uses the word "corban" (chap. 7. 11), he immediately subjoins the interpretation, "that is, gift." 4. In speaking of our Lord he never styles him "Son of man," which the Jews could interpret from Daniel (7. 13), but "Son of God," by which the Gentiles might comprehend his Deity.

14 And [l] thou shalt have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth.[l]

15 For he shall be [m] great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink;* and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.†

16 [n] And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

17 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient ‡ to the wisdom of the just,§ to make ready a people prepared for [o] the Lord.

18 ¶ And Zacharias said unto the angel, [p] Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

19 And the angel answering, said unto him, [q] I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God;‖ and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings.

20 And, behold, [r] thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

21 And the people [s] waited [s] for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple; for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

23 And it came to pass, that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

† A beautiful and blessed example of the work of the Spirit being contemporaneous with the moment, not merely of birth, but of living existence, as the original signifies. ‖ The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, is one act representing the preparation of the body of Jesus (ver. 31).—And the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, is another, representing the personal act of the WORD, uniting himself with the humanity which was "born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God"—even of God the Holy Spirit.—Ed.

* The conclusion in the word therefore, clearly demonstrates that JESUS was called "the Son of God," because, according to his humanity, he was conceived of the Holy Ghost. But his being named "the Son of God" upon this account does not preclude his being also named "the Son of God," upon another account — namely, upon account of his being "that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested to us" (1 John 1. 1). For, surely, if he was "eternal life with the FATHER," he must have been the SON; for the FATHER could not have been the FATHER, unless the WORD had been his SON!—Ed.

24 ¶ And after those days his wife Elisabeth conceived, and hid herself * five months, saying,

25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein [t] he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

26 ¶ And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto [u] a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27 To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail,† thou that art [x] highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

32 [y] He shall be great, and shall be called the Son § of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

33 And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, [z] How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee,‖ and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore * also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

36 [a] And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren.

37 For with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, [b] Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 ¶ And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill-country with haste, into a city of Juda,†

40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost:

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, [c] Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

By his doctrine and example he shall be a happy instrument, in the hand of the Spirit, of turning many from their iniquities and false opinions to the Messiah. In his coarse and severe manner of life, and by his plentiful endowment with the Holy Spirit, he shall resemble the ancient Elijah; and shall be the means of reconciling men one to another, even Jews to Gentiles, yea, he shall make the most stubborn sinners

43 [d] And whence is this to me, that the mother of [e] my Lord should come to me?

44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 [f] And blessed is she [e] that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

46 ¶ And Mary said, [†g] My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.[‡]

48 [h] For he hath regarded the [i] low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations [k] shall call me blessed.

49 [l] For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.

50 [m] And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.

51 [n] He hath showed strength with his arm: [o] he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 [p] He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree.

53 [q] He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 [r] He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy;

55 [s] As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 ¶ Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.[§]

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying His name is John.[*] And they marvelled all.

64 ¶ [t] And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 [u] And fear came on all [†] that dwelt round about them: and all these [‡] sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill-country of Judea.

66 And all they that had heard them [x] laid them up in their hearts, saying, [y] What manner of child shall this be! [z] And the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 ¶ And his father Zacharias was [a] filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 [b] Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath [c] visited and redeemed his people,

69 [d] And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;

70 [e] As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began;

71 [f] That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 [g] To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and [h] to remember his holy covenant;

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,

74 That he would grant unto us, [i] that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear,

75 [k] In holiness[§] and righteousness[‖] before him all the days of our life.

76 And thou, child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his ways;

77 [l] To give knowledge of salvation unto his people [*] by the remission of their sins,[†]

78 Through the [m] tender mercy of our God; whereby the [n] day-spring from on high hath visited us,

79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80 And [o] the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel.

wise unto salvation; and, by conviction of sin, prepare them to receive the divine Saviour. 51—53. He has marvellously exerted his power in helping and showing mercy to his people, in casting down self-righteous and self-sufficient sinners, and in putting high honours upon the poor and debased. He has granted the desire of such as were earnestly inquiring after a Saviour, and enriched them with his favour; but has denied the blessings of his kingdom to such as are rich in this world, or abound in self-confidence and self-conceit. 68. Let all praise, honour, and blessing, be ascribed to that God, who, after a long apparent neglect of his people, is now, in infinite kindness, sending his Son to save and redeem them, and who is now raising up his long promised Messiah, to exalt and protect his elect ones, and to cast down their enemies, spiritual or temporal; 74, 75: that being, by his merit, power, and grace, redeemed from sin, Satan, and the world, we may, while we live, constantly serve God, without slavish fear of him, or tormenting fear of our enemies, in all the duties of piety, righteousness, and sobriety, as in his sight, and depending on him for assistance and gracious reward. 76—79. Thou shalt be the prophetic forerunner of the incarnate God the Messiah, to publish his appearance, and to direct and excite men to receive him:—to show them that they must be saved, not by their own legal righteousness, but by the remission of their sins through Jesus' blood, according to the mere undeserved and compassionate kindness of God, by which Christ, the heavenly Sun of Righteousness, comes into our world, to enlighten, revive, and save, not only us Jews, but also the Gentiles, who have been long destitute of the means of grace, and enveloped with ignorance, error, and wickedness; and to direct us to the true methods of enjoying peace with God, with our own consciences, and our neighbours, till we arrive at perfect and everlasting happiness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The wonderful things of the gospel are declared with the greatest care and certainty, that we may clearly understand and firmly believe them. And for the same purpose a train of miracles introduced our Immanuel into our world, by which the ancient predictions concerning him, and his forerunner, were exactly accomplished. Delightful, distinguished, and unexpected mercies will come at last to those who, in a distinguished manner, fear God. Those that are humble, and honour him, he will honour; nothing is too hard for

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus,* that all the world† should be taxed.

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius‡ was governor of Syria.)

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.§

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was of the house and lineage of David,)

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 ¶ And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling-clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.‖

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, [a]Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

* This was Caius Cesar Octavianus Augustus, one of the Roman triumvirs, who was chosen emperor B. C. 29. and died A. D. 14. He received the name of Cesar, the family name of Julius Cesar, by whom he had been adopted, and the name of Augustus (the most probable meaning of which is "worthy of divine honours," Pausan. III. 11.) he received from the servile senate.—Ed.

† All the world.—Some would translate it, "all the (Roman) empire"—an expression very frequent in the best classical writers. But as no such general taxation is mentioned by any contemporary historian, it seems more consonant to Jewish phraseology to understand it merely of "all Judea"—which the Jews considered the earth of the whole world—(see Ruth 1. 1. 2 Sam. 24. 8). This view seems to be confirmed by ver. 3, in which "every one" went to "his own city"—a description that evidently could apply to Judea alone.—Ed.

‡ It appears from historical records, that Cyrenius was not made governor of Syria till ten or twelve years after the birth of Jesus. The words may, however, be more literally translated, "And this first registration was carried into effect (that is, by taxation) when Cyrenius was governor of Syria;"—or, "The first registration was made under Cyrenius (afterwards) governor of Syria."—Ed.

§ His own city—the capital city of his own family, (see ver. 4), not of his district. Wherefore, it is evident, that, though commanded by Roman authority, the registration was conducted upon Jewish principles.—Ed.

‖ A manger.—The ordinary Greek text is "the manger, stable," or whatever else the meaning of the term may be. The, however, is wanting in many MSS., the Editio Princeps, is cancelled by Wetstein, and rejected by Middleton. But, as it occurs in ver. 7, in distinction from "the inn," it is evidently as necessary here, where it serves as a direction to the shepherds—a direction which proves it to be a well-known public place, and not a private article, such as "a manger," that could not serve as a mark of any particular place in the town. See also ver. 16, in which the is repeated without any critical question.—Ed.

* This first announcement of Jesus by a Jewish prophet, proclaims him a light to the Gentiles—a privilege which even the apostles of our Lord were afterwards, with much difficulty, induced to concede (Acts 10. 19. 11. 18). So strong is human prejudice! so mighty the barriers which grace must needs overcome.—Note. How great is the change yet to be accomplished before Jesus, whom the Jews despised and rejected, shall become their highest honour! Yet that change is not peculiar to them. As great a change must pass over every man before he can learn to glory in the cross of Christ.—Ed.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ¶ And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called [d]JESUS, which was so named of the angel† before he was conceived in the womb.

22 ¶ And when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

27 And he came by the Spirit‖ into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, him to effect. And saints' unbelief of his promises must meet with sharp rebukes. The revival of miracles and prophecies pleasingly opened the way for the gospel dispensation. And with what reverence ought we always to think of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, as the Lord our God; and of the Holy Ghost, who exerts the whole power of the Godhead!—But how sweetly astonishing is it to behold God's eternal Son made of a woman!—To behold the infinite JEHOVAH personally united to the likeness of sinful flesh, in order to save his enemies of mankind. Permanent and glorious is his spiritual kingdom. From the riches of sovereign mercy all the blessings of it originally proceed, and are bestowed on us by almighty power, notwithstanding all our unwillingness and unworthiness. It is this which lays the surest ground for the firmest faith, the deepest humility, the profoundest admiration, the most ravishing joy, and exalted praise. Thrice blessed is it to rejoice in a Saviour born for us, and received into our heart, and in that great salvation which he brings near to multitudes. Thrice happy are true believers in the pardon of their sins, the acceptance of their prayers, and their deliverance from their enemies. And in the highest praise and filial service of God should they improve these benefits. Never does God send any upon important work without proper qualifications. And rarely do men addicted to carnal company make an agreeable figure in the church.—Let me in every state learn to be fervent in my devotions. Let me offer all my services through Jesus' mediation. CHAP. II.—Ver. 34, 35. He is ordained of God, and brought into the world, as an occasion of the stumbling and falling of many Israelites, and as the effectual means of raising up many to eternal life and happiness. And such shall be his wonderfully mean and suffering circumstances, that many will speak against him with bitter enmity and blasphemy; and you, his mother, shall be tormented with anguish and pain, to see him so contemned, reviled, persecuted, and murdered: yet by these means it will clearly be discovered who are his friends that shall be saved, and who his enemies that shall be lost for ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The taxing pride of a Roman emperor in a wonderful manner occasions our Redeemer's birth at the place long before marked in prophecy; and the enrolment of him and his family as descendants of David. And O how infinite was the debasement of the Son of God to save men! Yet pregnant with the greatest glory to himself and his Father, and with grace to men. Delightful are the tidings, the gracious offers, of him and his salvation to sinners in the gospel. And with sincerity and grateful praise ought they to be received by us, and commended to others. A safe child-birth ought to be esteemed a great mercy: and both mother and child ought gratefully to be devoted to God. Thrice happy are they who long wait for the Lord! He will at last appear for their comfort, and open their lips in his praise. And it is only believing views of Jesus Christ that can render death and eternity truly pleasant and hopeful. But unhappy are they to whom this light, this Saviour of the world, becomes an occasion of greater sin and more terrible ruin. Even they who have distinguished honours allotted them have frequently some bitter trials annexed to them. And even they who live nearest to Jesus Christ must often seek him. It is enough that they find him at last, and lay up his words in their heart.—— While parents consider how carefully they ought to attend the ordinances of God, and bring their children along with them, let children ponder what a delightful pattern of early knowledge, devotion, trust in God, and obedience to mean parents, is represented to them in our Redeemer.

‖ Matthew has traced the genealogy of Jesus through Solomon and Joseph; Luke, through Nathan, another son of David, and Mary. Heli was not the natural father of Joseph, but his father-in-law and father of Mary. Females were not reckoned in the Jewish genealogies. Mary is, therefore, passed over in name, but clearly intended when her father Heli is introduced. Joseph was, however, legally called the son of Heli, inasmuch as those who married heiresses were obliged to pass into the families of their fathers-in-law, and be reckoned as their sons. Luke, writing for the Gentiles, proves Christ to be the "seed of the woman;" Matthew, writing for the Jews, proves him the son of David and Abraham.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. III.—The season of important events ought to be exactly marked. In great wisdom and grace Jesus appears to erect his kingdom when rulers almost everywhere are monsters of wickedness. And God, by his forerunner, honourably introduces him to his work. Great need have sinners to hasten to him when death and damnation are just at their heels. Dreadful is their case who fall into the hands of the living God. And none bid fairer for hell than they who have the strongest carnal or legal hopes of heaven. No outward privilege can avail those who have unrenewed hearts and unholy lives. And no repentance can be justly reckoned sincere that does not make men cease from and detest the sins to which they are most tempted or addicted. God often renders the most unlikely the distinguished monuments of his power and grace. But at best the state of the church is but imperfect and mixed in this world. In the next God will, to the joy of saints, and terror of obstinate sinners, make a full separation; and many, who like Herod, did many good things, and heard God's

AND Jesus, being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,

2 Being forty days* tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone† that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered‡ unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt § worship me, all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:

10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee;‖

11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering, said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

14 ¶ And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

16 ¶ And he came to [a] Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and stood up for to read.

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias: and when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind,* to set at liberty them that are bruised,

19 To preach the acceptable year† of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened‡ on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country.§

25 But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land:

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath,‖

29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he, passing* through the midst of them, went his way,

31 And came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.†

33 ¶ And in the synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice,

34 Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

* Forty days.—Matthew (4. 2), places the temptation after the forty days. Luke seems to describe it as continuing throughout the whole period. The two accounts are perfectly reconcileable. The chief temptation, as recorded by Matthew, was after the forty days of fasting. Luke relates the same chief temptation, but intimates that inferior temptations continued through the whole period.—Ed.

† Command this stone.—Matthew (4. 3,) has it "these stones." How then are the two passages reconciled upon the principle of verbal inspiration? In the very simplest manner. — Satan used both expressions, urging our Lord by the repetition and increase of his demand for miracles. Matthew records the one demand, Luke, the other.—Ed.

‡ Here, according to his system of delusion, Satan affirms what is partly true, and partly false. That he has "power, a seat, and great authority," and that, at certain times of judgment, "power is given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations"—that he is "the prince," nay, "the god of this world," is all true; but when he adds, that "all this power and glory" is his, and that "to whomsoever he will, he gives it," he affirms what is false;—for "the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." He alone "putteth down one and setteth up another"—even as he "raised up Pharaoh to show his power in him." Satan, moreover, after the manner of all liars and deceivers, suppresses what is true; for he never alludes to the coming judgment of the great day, nor the "everlasting fire prepared for him and his angels." See Rev. 13. 2, 7. John 12. 31. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Ps. 97. 1. & 19. 6. Ps. 75. 7. Ex. 9. 16. Mat. 25. 41.—Ed.

§ Or, fall down before me.

‖ The words "to keep thee," are not found in the corresponding passage in Matthew. This difference, however, does not, in the least degree, infringe upon the principle of the plenary verbal inspiration of the evangelists. — Matthew states all that Luke states; but Matthew does not say that the tempter added no more. Luke supplies the additional argument. The reason of the difference is plain: — Matthew wrote for Jews, who fully understood, from history, the nature of angelic agency, and did not require any explanation: Luke wrote for Gentiles, who were ignorant upon the subject; and, therefore, he records the portion of the dialogue in which angelic agency was described.—Ed.

a Mat. 2. 23. & 13. 54. ch. 1. 26. 27. & 2. 39, 51. Mark 6. 1.

* That is, to those who had become blind by long confinement in a dark place. The literal meaning is well known to all who have been confined in a dark place; the spiritual meaning, to all who have been called "out of the kingdom of darkness, and into the kingdom of God's dear Son."—Ed.

† The acceptable year seems an allusion to the year of the jubilee — which proclaimed its blessings on the day of atonement — which proclaimed liberty to him who had been enslaved, restoration to possessions, and return to families—all emblems of gospel time and gospel blessings. The time, the day upon which the proclaimed atonement is fully embraced; the blessings, the restoration of sinners to the forfeited possession of paradise, and to membership and communion in the family of God.—Ed.

‡ The specific reason of this intense observation is not recorded. It may have arisen from recollection of the early prophecies concerning him—from curiosity, mingled with incredulity, concerning the works he was now reported to have wrought elsewhere—from his voice, for he spake as never man spake, (see ver. 22)—or from his manner, for "he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes."—Ed.

§ This statement has been fully verified by all prophetic history. Moses was rebelliously vilified (Num. 16. 3); David was ejected from his throne; Jeremiah was cast into prison; Elijah was hunted "like a partridge upon the mountains." All were despised or rejected by their countrymen. Wherefore, let no man wait for the reformation of any church or people until God raise up some of themselves to lead the way; but rather let every one remember that the human mind is more ready to listen to strangers than to acquaintance, and take hold of this propensity, and send the gospel by "men o other tongues."—Ed.

‖ The secret cause of offence seems to be the implied intimation of God's merciful regards to the heathen, whom the Jews despised, and judged unworthy of sharing with them in the divine favour; but the ostensible cause was the parallel between the humble Jesus and Elijah and Elisha, whom they esteemed as chief among the prophets.—Ed.

* There seems no intimation of a miracle in this escape; but merely an indication of that coolness and presence of mind which could take advantage of the popular tumult, and turn the very eagerness for his destruction into the means of eluding it.—Ed.

† With authority that commanded attention, while it produced feelings of contrition and purposes of reformation; and with power that constrained evil passions, and cast out unclean spirits whom these passions had permitted to enter the hearts of men.—Ed.

ministers gladly, shall be cast into eternal fire. It is a delightful sight when great honours render men humble; and humility is rewarded with more abundant honours. How solemn was our Saviour's consecration to his work, and his attestation by God! And it is plainly manifest that he is the seed of the woman, and of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, Jesse, and David, according to the promise.

† The marginal translation, "to say that they knew him to be Christ," is preferable. Our Lord refuses their testimony:—1. Lest he should be accused of being in league with demons. 2. Because he knew that so far from desiring to acknowledge him as Christ, their object was to bring him into discredit for receiving the witness of Satan, "who was a liar from the beginning."—Note. Let no man labour for the good report of evil men; for if any do, he is likely soon to do or say some foolish, weak, or wicked thing, by which it may be purchased. "Woe unto you, when all men speak well of you." (Luke 6. 26.) Not when they speak well of some particular act—for of some act of a good man all men will speak well—but when they speak well of you, of the whole man, or the whole community, who never can purchase the applause of wicked men, but at the sacrifice of some important principle.—Ed.

Had Peter been a landsman he would not have been at all so affected by the miracle; but, as an experienced fisherman, he sees its full extent. But the narrative educes another trait of character. Had Peter been covetous he would have entreated our Lord never to leave him; had he been superstitious (as fishermen are often found to be) he would have ascribed the miracle to good fortune, or some prevalent charm or talisman; but being neither superstitious nor covetous, he beholds in the miracle the evidence of our Lord's holiness and divinity, which contrasting with his own sinfulness, he falls down and worships, and entreats him to depart, not because he desired to be freed from his presence, but counted himself unworthy of the honour.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—The most fearful temptations and troubles may quickly succeed to the most distinguished testimonies of God's love. And it is highly improper for the best of saints to hope to escape even the most horrible seducements, when Jesus was called to suffer them. How shocking is the impudence of Satan! how fixed his perseverance in harassing the saints! and how implacable his malice in tempting where he is certain not to succeed! He is very subtle in contriving the form, and choosing the seasons, of his temptation. And it is necessary to resist him always with the sword of the Spirit. Thus only can we prove conquerors through him that loved us, and is able and ready to succour us. But what fearful work hath sin made in the world!—It hath transformed angels into unclean spirits, perverted human nature, and subjected it to the tyranny of the devil, and to diseases unnumbered.—Alas, into what debasement and suffering it plunged our divine Saviour! But infinite is his grace; and, as appointed of God to save us, in him all fulness dwells answerable to all our need. And often, by his word, he exerts his power on the most unworthy. With great toil and danger he went about to heal human maladies, spiritual and temporal. But, alas, where he should be most readily received, he is often most obstinately rejected; and almost everywhere few are turned to him! Many never believe more than devils, who never had his blessings offered to them; and though they hear his words with attention and wonder, they quickly envy, and seek to destroy, him or his interests; but terrible is their situation when he abandons them to their own hearts' lusts.—It is a great mercy that he can restrain furious persecutors, and cast out malicious and subtle devils, even when they almost transform themselves into angels of light. And it is delightful when they, who have much public work in hand, prepare for it by much fervent prayer; and when they, who have enjoyed Christ's presence and ordinances, earnestly desire the continuance of them.

sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the [o] house-top, and let him down through the tiling, [*] with his couch, [†] into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he [p] saw their faith, [‡] he said unto him, Man, [q] thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, [r] Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? [s] Who can forgive sins, but God alone?

22 But when Jesus [t] perceived their thoughts, he answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath [u] power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, [x] glorifying God.

26 [y] And they were all amazed, [§] and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

27 ¶ [z] And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me.

28 [a] And he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 ¶ [b] And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

30 [c] But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners? [‖]

31 And Jesus answering, said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick.

32 I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

33 ¶ And they said unto him, [*] [d] Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber fast while the [e] bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 ¶ And he spake also a parable unto them; No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. [*]

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also, having drunk old wine, [f] straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better.

* The question here is, by grammatical construction, attributed to the Pharisees; but in Mat. 9. 14, it is attributed to the disciples of John. Is there not here a contradiction? None; for it appears from Mark 2. 18, that the question was asked by both; and Matthew mentions the one; Luke, the other—both recording as much truth as was necessary to introduce the question and the answer; neither suppressing any, though each omitting a part.—Ed.

* The differences between this parable, as recorded by Matthew and as recorded by Luke, can neither be tortured into contradictions (for the meaning is the same), nor be attributed to mere variety in the memories of the evangelists, nor to an ideal, instead of a verbal inspiration. The differences can be accounted for upon a principle much more simple, and in perfect accordance with the doctrine of full and perfect verbal inspiration—that is, upon the most natural of all suppositions—that our Lord repeated the parable more than once, and varied his expressions to aid in the exposition of his meaning.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. V.—The most diligent and laborious have often little success. And all that comes is vanity and vexation of spirit. How base and polluted men appear to themselves when viewed in the light of Christ's glory! But nothing is more absurd or wicked than to make our sinfulness a reason against fellowship with him who is the Saviour from sin. Great is his power, who can command multitudes of fishes into a net, and multitudes of souls into a reception of the gospel. None who taste his goodness can forbear following him. The firm faith of his ability betokens our deliverance at hand, and promotes a regard to his ordinances. Great is the mercy that his prayers are effectual, and his power present to save men; and that he readily grants remission and healing to such as he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And they were filled with madness;* and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.†

13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples; and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles;‡

14 Simon, (whom he also named Peter,) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew,

15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes,

16 And Judas the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 ¶ And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea-coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 ¶ And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor:§ for yours is the kingdom of God.

21 Blessed are ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy; for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But wo unto you that are rich!‖ for ye have received your consolation.

25 Wo unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Wo unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 [m] Wo unto you when all men* shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 ¶ But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you,

28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

* On a superficial view of this narrative, it would appear utterly impossible to account for this most unreasonable madness of the Pharisees. Two principles, however, will amply explain its origin. 1. A false theory establishing the traditions of the elders, whereby their own doctrines and practices were supported, the doctrines of our Lord condemned, and the necessity of reformation superseded, even as, in more modern times, the church of Rome, adopting the false theory of her own infallibility, refuses to be reformed, and anathematizes. In her bull, In Cœna Domini, the teachers of every fundamental doctrine of divine grace. 2. The worldly interests of the Pharisees, which were inseparably entwined with their doctrine of tradition, blinded their eyes to the glory of Christ, stopped their ears against the voice of truth, hardened their hearts against every feeling but those of envy, hatred, and madness, against the prophet by whose righteous denunciations these interests were endangered.—Ed.

† In prayer to God.—If the word translated prayer, must be retained in that sense, as Bloomfield maintains, the translation should be altered to "the prayer of God." A literal translation, however, gives a sense more agreeable to history; "He continued all night in the proseucha of God"—a retired place, such as the Jews were accustomed to erect for the purposes of private devotion. — Query. The tormenting fear which many entertain of meeting the spirits of the dead in solitary places by night, may it not be chiefly traced to the neglect of solitary nightly prayer, wherein the soul meeting in holy and immediate converse with God, would so occupy and fill itself with a sense of his presence and protection, as to expel every unmanly and superstitious dread, and establish the heart in its fearlessness and peace in believing.—Ed.

‡ See note on Mat. 10. 1.—Ed.

§ This sermon is similar to that delivered Mat. 5. 1, &c. but is not the same. The sermon recorded by Matthew was preached on a mountain (Mat. 5. 1), this on a plain (ver. 17). The sermon in Mat. he delivered sitting, this standing (ver. 17); and there is also considerable difference in the expressions when the similar passages are compared.—Ed.

§ Cast out first the beam that is in thine own eye.—Does this exhortation imply that the casting out of the beam is the act of the hypocrite himself, without any reference to the word, Spirit, and grace of God? It contains no such implication. It speaks, as the Scriptures often do, of the thing to be done, and not of the power by which alone it can be done. When the Scriptures speak of the power by which alone conversion is effected, they attribute nothing to the sinner, but all to the word, Spirit, and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Pet. 1. 23. 1 John 3. 9. Such are a few of the treasures of "a good man's heart"—a few specimens of his gatherings from "the unsearchable riches of Christ."—Ed.

2 And a certain [b] centurion's servant, who [*] was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, [d] he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent [e] friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself; [*] for [f] I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof:

7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: [g] but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers; and I say unto [†] one, [h] Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

† Nain was a city of Galilee, a few miles south of Mount Tabor. It still exists as a small village, exclusively inhabited by Turks. O! that the Lord would again say to the dead (to Israel), the son of the widow (Zion), Young man, (Israel young and vigorous in faith) Arise! O! that he would deliver him again to (Jerusalem) his mother! Surely then would he again "begin to speak," and, like Paul, he that persecuted Christ in his members, would preach him in every city!—Note. Infidels have spoken of this case as a mere restoration from a lethargy. This assertion represents these objectors as better judges, at the end of many hundred years, than a tender mother and all the young man's personal friends, a few days after his death. They judged him dead. Our Lord found him as carried to his grave, closely covered with a cloth, as the manner of the Jews required — he touched the bier — commanded him to arise—he obeyed, rose up, and began to speak. — All present were astonished, and ascribed the work to God. Infidels now may gainsay — for, having rejected "Moses and the prophets, neither will they believe though one rise from the dead."—Ed.

10 [i] And they that were sent,[*] returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 ¶ And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain;[†] and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now, when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the [k] only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

16 [n] And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; [‖] and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; [p] how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not [q] be offended in me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Works of real necessity and mercy, but no other, may consist with a proper observance of the sabbath. And it is base when Christ's kind indulgence is abused to carnal licentiousness; and when the rigid accusers of the innocence of others are the most indulgent to their own crimes. If we desire to have our spiritual maladies healed, we must attend Christ's ordinances; and neither our own inability, nor other men's perverseness, must hinder us from our duty. If Jesus command, he can, enable to perform. Where passion reigns, neither conscience nor reason can be regarded: but it is in vain to devise mischief against an all-seeing Redeemer. Important work ought always to be introduced with fervent and solemn prayer; and Jesus' prayers and power can easily furnish his church with plenty of gospel ministers! Marvellous and free are the effects of his mercy: and infinitely distant his views of real happiness and mercy from those of carnal men. Happy are they whom he blesses, and miserable are they whom he curses, be their outward circumstances what they will. And it is eternity, not time, that properly distinguishes the lot of saints and sinners. Honourable and beneficent is the spirit and tendency of the Christian religion, which so calls us to imitate JEHOVAH in his most endearing perfections and work. How important is it to be a Christian indeed! It is a great reproach for the professors of the true religion to do no more in duty toward God or men than mere heathens. And we need to live always under a deep sense of our own weakness and pollution, and in daily repentance and forgiveness; so shall we be induced to candid and charitable conceptions of others. It is absurd to attempt raising good works out of unrenewed hearts; or to expect a blessing with teachers whom Christ never sent. Let us therefore take heed what, how, and whom, we hear. Let us receive Christ.

24 ¶ And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the [r] wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? [s] A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, [t] Among those that are born of women there is not a greater* prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29 And [u] all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God,† being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and ‡ lawyers § rejected the counsel of God ‖ against themselves, being not baptized of him.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 But Wisdom is justified of all her children.*

36 ¶ And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And, behold, a woman† in the city, which was a sinner,‡ when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an [x] alabaster-box of ointment,

38 And stood at his feet behind§ him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

† Whether this woman, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the sister of Lazarus, be the same, or three distinct persons, has been matter of serious question, both among ancient and modern expositors. See Mat. 26. 6. Mark 14. 3. John 12. 3. It seems plain, however, that this woman was a resident in Nain, well known, by character, to the Pharisee. (ver. 39), and so a different person from Mary of Magdala, a city on the other side of Jordan; and all that is recorded of Mary the sister of Lazarus, seems clearly to distinguish her from both these Marys.—Ed.

‡ In what sense this woman was a sinner does not appear; but our Lord acknowledges (ver. 47) that "her sins were many." Nor will this admission aid in the discovery of her peculiar character; for who can deny that his "sins are many!" The general conclusion that she was an adulteress or harlot, seems harsh, because it is unnecessary, and utterly unsupported by any intimation either from the uncharitable Simon or our righteous Lord.—Ed.

x Not that John 12. 3. Mat. 26. 7. Mark 14. 3.

§ Our Lord, according to the ancient Jewish custom, reclined on his left elbow, on a couch, his naked feet (the sandals having been taken off on entering the house) extended from the table, so that the woman could have free access to them.—Note. The freedom of access afforded to such a person, at such a time, and to such a place, will easily be understood by those who have examined the general freedom of entry still enjoyed in several eastern countries; and which furnishes, upon this occasion, a beautiful example of the still greater freedom with which the very chief of sinners are permitted and invited to draw nigh to Jesus.—Ed.

40 [b] And Jesus answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, [c] Master, say on.

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he [i] to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou [k] gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no [l] kiss: but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 [m] My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 Wherefore I say unto thee, [n] Her sins, which are many,† are forgiven; [o] for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

* She was so called from Magdala, her native city. The strange notion that this woman had been a prostitute, is totally without scriptural foundation. Her possession by seven demons is, no doubt, evidence of her great sinfulness, but by no means evidence of any particular sin. To charge her with a crime neither named nor insinuated, is uncharitable.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VII.—Masters ought to take tender care of their faithful servants: and such indeed will in general ensure their attention and regard in the time of distress or affliction. It is a great advantage to interest the fervent prayers of Christ's favourites in our behalf. And great is the influence, and distinguished the humility and honour, of a strong faith. Unanswerably has Jesus demonstrated his divine and mediatorial characters in healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and forgiving sins, with infinite efficacy and authority. Tender is his regard to Gentile believers, and his compassion to the afflicted and destitute: and sovereign, free, and plenteous, his mercy to all sorts of sinners, however guilty and miserable. What exalting thoughts ought we then to have of him, and what abasing thoughts of ourselves before him! With great earnestness ought we to call on him in every distress, and to imitate him in always doing good. Spi-steward, and Susanna, and many others, which [a] ministered unto him of their substance.

4 ¶ [b] And when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable:

5 [c] A sower* went out to sow his seed; and, as he sowed, some fell [d] by the way-side; and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it:

6 And some fell upon [e] a rock; and, as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture:

7 And some fell among [f] thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it:

8 And other fell on [g] good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundred-fold. And when he had said these things, he [h] cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, [i] What might this parable be?

10 And he said, [k] Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God; but to others in parables; that [l] seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 ¶ [m] Now the parable is this: The [n] seed is the word of God.

12 Those by the way-side are [o] they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word [p] out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 [q] They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And [r] that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth,† and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection.

15 [s] But that on the good ground are they, which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.‡

16 ¶ [t] No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 [u] For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 [x] Take heed therefore how ye hear: [y] for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.

19 ¶ [z] Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press.

20 And it was told him by certain, which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, [a] My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ¶ [b] Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed, he [c] fell asleep: and [d] there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled* with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, [e] Master, Master, we perish! [f] Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, [g] Where is your faith? And they, [h] being afraid, wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶ [i] And they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes,† which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, [k] there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, [l] he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, [m] What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not.

29 [n] (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. [o] For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, ‡ Legion; because many devils were entered into him.

31 [p] And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.§

32 And there was there [q] an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. [r] And he suffered them.

ritually to know who and what he is, cannot but create love to him, and remove every prejudice against him: and he is ever ready to instruct and satisfy humble inquirers. Nor should we ever doubt of his excellency because we suffer for his sake, and others contemn and oppose him.—The meek will he teach his way, that they may be witnesses for God and religion, when proud and self-righteous men shall be left to reject his admonitions to their own destruction. Resolute cavillers will always find a handle in the different tempers and manners of ministers. Hatred of Christ's word will lead them to quarrel either with the deliverer or the delivery of it.—O what a change God's almighty grace makes on the heart and life of the most atrocious sinners! And the more abundantly the grace of the gospel is believed and applied, the more abundant love to God, repentance, and deep humility, will be manifested in our whole temper and conduct. Alas! that any should ever quarrel with the sovereignty of God's mercy towards sinners, or with their uncommon affection towards him while impressed with a sense of his mercy!

violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they [s]fled, and went and told it in the city, and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and [u]found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind:* and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 ¶ Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about [x]besought him to depart from them: for they were taken with great fear. And he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed [y]besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 [z]Return to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. [a]And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, [b]when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him.†

41 ¶ [c]And, behold, there came a man named Jairus,‡ and he was a [d]ruler of the synagogue; and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and [e]besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a dying. (But, as he went, the people thronged him.

43 ¶ [f]And a woman§ having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, [g]neither could be healed of any,

44 Came behind him, and [h]touched the border of his garment: and immediately her issue of blood stanched.

45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that [i]virtue is gone out of me.

47 And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling; and, [k]falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

48 And he said unto her, [l]Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.)

49 ¶ [m]While he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master.

50 But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, [n]Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole.

51 And when he came into the house, [o]he suffered no man to go in, [p]save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52 [q]And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; [r]she is not dead, but sleepeth.

53 And they [s]laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

54 And [t]he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and [u]called, saying, Maid, arise.

55 And [x]her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat.

56 And [y]her parents were astonished: but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

[a]THEN he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power* and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

2 And he sent them to [b]preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

4 [c]And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.†

5 And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.

6 [d]And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 ¶ Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

* Madness often consists in one erroneous idea, or train of ideas. Sometimes, however, but seldom, the whole mind is astray. Now that such aberrations, whether partial or universal, may arise from various bodily affections is certain.—An injury on the head, vitiated digestion or secretion, narcotics, and various stimulant drugs, fever, &c. may all produce mental derangement. But surely this variety of causes, all concurring in producing the same effect, instead of leading to the conclusion that this, and the similar cases recorded in the New Testament, were not monomaical possessions, but mere bodily diseases, should conduct to the very opposite—to wit, the possibility of some other cause inscrutable to the eye of man—may the certainty of another cause, when discovered and declared upon the authority of Christ. Indeed, to deny the possibility of demoniacal possession, is as unphilosophical as it is unscriptural. The power of an imbodied spirit to infuse bad principles into others, and drive a man, a church, a kingdom, out of their "right mind," is daily witnessed. Who, then, can philosophically deny to the disimbodied that power which an imbodied spirit is certainly known to possess?—Ed.

† This precept furnishes a most valuable instruction to all who are engaged in the work of Christ. 1. By confining them to one house, it gives them opportunity of studying character, an essential element in every preacher of the gospel, who would "rightly divide the word of truth." 2. It enables them to form more intimate friendships, which are often of great value to themselves when they depart, and to their successors, whom they are thus qualified to introduce. 3. It enables them to economize, and prevents them from dissipating time. 4. It enables them to give themselves to reading and study, at every interval of leisure. 5. It prevents exposure to the dangers of mixed society, and, in the midst of a life of frequent change, preserves, in full vigour, the domestic principle and habits.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—O the infinite, but voluntary, debasement of our Redeemer, that he must live on the liberality of others, even of those who had lately been infamous sinners! But cheerfully they, who get good by the gospel, will contribute to maintain the preacher. And they, who have been healed by Jesus' grace, will eagerly follow him in the way. But Satan and our inward corruptions most awfully hinder the efficacy of the gospel on most of the hearers of it. It is but a remnant that are renewed, according to the election of grace, and rendered fruitful in holiness. Let us then take heed how we hear, and whe-

9 And Herod said, [e]John have I beheaded; but who is this[*] of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him.

10 [g] And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. [h] And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called [i] Bethsaida.

11 And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and [k] he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 ¶ [l] And when the day began to wear away,[†] then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, [m] Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people.

14 (For they were about five thousand men.) And he said to his disciples, [n] Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.

16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes; and, [o] looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 [p] And they did eat, and were all filled: and [q] there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

18 ¶ [r] And it came to pass, as he was [‡] alone [§] praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?

19 They answering, said, [s] John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But [t] whom say ye that I am? Peter answering, said, [u] The Christ of God.

21 [x] And he straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing;

22 Saying, [y] The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 ¶ [z] And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

25 [a] For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

26 [b] For whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

27 [c] But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

28 ¶ [d] And it came to pass, about an eight days[*] after these [†] sayings, he took [e] Peter, and John, and James, and went up into a mountain [f] to pray.

29 And as he prayed, [g] the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering.

30 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were [h] Moses and Elias;

31 [i] Who appeared in glory, and [k] spake of his decease which he should accomplish[‡] at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter, and they that were with him, [l] were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, [m] they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, [n] it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a [o] cloud and overshadowed them: and they [p] feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, [q] This is my beloved Son; [r] hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. [s] And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 ¶ [t] And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, [u] I beseech thee, look upon my son; for he is mine only child:

39 And, lo, [x] a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again; and, bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and [y] they could not.

41 And Jesus answering, said, O [z] faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? [a] Bring thy son hither.

ther we have the habits and principles of true grace implanted in our soul. And let us improve the light and grace that we have for our own and others' advantage. If we cordially embrace the gospel, we are Christ's favourites; and neither raging winds nor devouring devils shall be able to deprive us of his love and care. If storms try our faith, his presence will secure our safety. Let us therefore in dangers ever flee to, trust in, and adore, our ever merciful, ever mindful God and Saviour. If Satan should exert all his power and malice to render us miserable, Jesus can rescue us, and restrain him at pleasure. Alas, that ever 42 And as he was yet a coming, [b] the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and he healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

43 ¶ [c] And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 [d] Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 [e] But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 ¶ [f] Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.[e]

47 And Jesus, [g] perceiving the thought of their heart, took [h] a child, and set him by him,

48 And said unto them, [i] Whosoever shall receive this child[†] in my name receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ¶ [k] And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, [l] Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be [m] received up,[‡] he [n] steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52 And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the [o] Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And [p] they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.[§]

54 And when his disciples [q] James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that [r] we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them, even as Elias did?

55 But he turned, [s] and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not [t] what manner of spirit[‖] ye are of.

56 [u] For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶ [x] And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man[*] said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, [y] Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

† This implied refusal of a farewell interview may, at first sight, seem severe, but was, on the contrary, true compassion, and founded on a deep knowledge of "what was in man." Had his follower returned, he would have been assailed by his unbelieving relatives—by some with tears—by some with reproaches—by some with ridicule—by some with worldly hopes and fears.—His spirit would thus have been harassed, perhaps, in the end, chafed and irritated; and, in any event, he must have been exposed to great temptations to apostasy, from all which our Lord delivers him, by the prescription of self-denial, and instant decision of purpose.—Ed.

love to this world, or slavish fear, should make his presence disagreeable! Happy are they who, sensible of sin, weakness, and danger, eagerly press towards and cleave to him, notwithstanding every discouragement. In what Godlike manner he triumphed over diseases, devils, and death; and yet, with the greatest self-denial, laboured to conceal his miraculous works!—And still abundant is his grace, that never casts out any. With the greatest compassion he spies our griefs and shame, and with delight raises up the trembling, and comforts the poor in spirit. In all cases let me not fear, but only believe and obey, however contrary his declarations or commands may seem to my carnal heart.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—With authority Jesus commissions his gospel ministers; with faithfulness and care they must labour; and men's eternal state must be fixed as they hear or reject their messages. In times of scarcity and distress we should cast all our care on God, and be always ready to divide the little subsistence that we have with the hungry. By his blessing, restored through Christ, we may live comfortably, and in a Christian manner, on a little. Happy are they who boldly confess the Redeemer, whatever they may suffer on his account. What is lost for him on earth will be more than compensated in heaven. But dreadful is their eternal state who prefer the honours, profits, and pleasures of a present world, to him and his everlasting salvation; or who are ashamed of his truths and ways.—Astonishing is the influence of close fellowship with God. Easily it could even overset our mortal constitution. And how delightful then is heaven, where Jesus and all his saints shall for ever appear in their glory, and for ever, with joy inexpressible, contemplate his expiatory sufferings! In hopes of it, let me love his person, obey his directions, and trust all my cares and maladies to his power and skill. Let me accurately observe whether I have true faith, and in what degree; and into what debates I enter, and with what manner of spirit. Alas, what defects, prejudices, pride, and passion, he finds in the very

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say,

11 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you:* [g] notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

* We do wipe off against you. —Rather, "we do wipe off for you;"—the act not implying a threat, such as the authorized version seems to convey, but visibly to represent their disinterestedness—as if they had said, "we came not for yours—no, not even to a particle of your dust, which we thus wipe off, and leave with you—but we came for you, that by grace we might translate you to that heavenly kingdom of which we are the messengers."—Ed.

‡ Like lightning. —Visibly, swiftly, portentously, destructively. The destructive throes of Satan, when falling from his throne in the world he had usurped and governed, may be well illustrated by his efforts to destroy some of those miserable demoniacs from whom he was cast out. Mark 9. 20, 22. Luke 9. 42. —Ed.

§ The word heaven is not merely applied to the place and state of glory (2 Cor. 5. 1, 2), but also to the powers and dignities of this world—(Is. 14. 13, 13. comp. with ver. 12. See also note on Mat. 24. 29, 30). The meaning, therefore, seems to be, that our Lord saw Satan, either in his own person or in the persons of his angels, falling from that supremacy over the world which he had so long usurped. He saw him actually beginning to fall, and, prophetically, he saw him totally fallen before the preaching of the gospel.—Ed.

‖ The promise, "nothing shall by any means hurt you," being expounded by comparison with such scriptures as Mat. 10. 16—22, and by the actual history of the apostles, will be seen to ensure, not exemption from temporal, but from spiritual injury; and the superiority conferred "over all the power of the enemy" (Satan) seems to lead to the conclusion that by "serpents and scorpions" are here to be understood, not the animals so named, but satanic agents, more poisonous to the soul than they to the body. That the promise of exemption from the power of serpents may, however, be also literally understood, is manifest from Mark 16. 18. Acts 28. 3, 5.—Ed.

* Thou hast hid these things.—Not as being jealous of their wisdom and prudence—nor arbitrary, though sovereign in his discoveries and gifts, but these things were hid from those who, "professing themselves wise, became fools," who "loved darkness rather than light," and who "did not like to retain God in their knowledge, wherefore God gave them over to a reprobate mind," Rom. 1 22, 28. —Ed.

26 He said unto him, [i] What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he answering, said, [k] Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But [l] he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho,* and [m] fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

best on earth! Heartily he detests them; and much more to have his gospel propagated by their means. But with great tenderness he treats the meek and humble, pities their infirmities, and cherishes their good intentions concerning him.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. X.—Ver. 30—37. In allusion, this wounded man may be viewed as an emblem of a lost sinner, to whom neither moral nor ceremonial laws can afford relief, and whom Jesus alone can tenderly pity and save by means of his gospel. But the real scope of the parable is to show, that, whatever provocations we have met with, we ought cordially to love, and kindly to help and relieve, our very enemies, even when their own professed friends overlook them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Great are the difficulties of faithful gospel ministers, and proportionate their assistance. Alas, that so few should be laborious, skilful, and faithful, or successful! AND it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father[a] which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come.
3 Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.
3 Give us day by day our daily bread.
4 And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight,[†] and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves;[‡]
6 For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him:
7 And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed;[§] I cannot rise and give thee.
8 I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity[‖] he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.
10 For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.
11 If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?
12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?[*]
13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?[†]

14 ¶ And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15 But some of them said, [a] He casteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils.
16 And others, [b] tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he, [c] knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.
18 If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through [d] Beelzebub.

19 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do [e] your sons cast them out? [f] therefore shall they be your judges.
20 But if I with the [g] finger of God[*] cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

a The prayer here is an abridged form of that contained in the sermon on the mount, Mat. 6. 9—13. but was delivered on a very different occasion. This was revealed to one applicant for instruction, the former as an example, in the course of the sermon, Mat. 5. 5, 9, equally addressed to all.—Ed.

† The call "at midnight," that would appear so unlikely in the colder Northern climates, would be perfectly natural in the warmer latitudes, in which during summer, journeys are often taken at night, for avoidance of the oppressive, and even dangerous heat of the day.—Ed.

‡ Three loaves may appear a large and unnecessary quantity, but the Jewish loaves were merely thin biscuit, each weighing but a few ounces. While it is also to be recollected that Eastern hospitality required an amount of provision for a friend far beyond his necessity. see Gen. 43. 34.—Ed.

§ Not necessarily in the same bed, but in bed in the same sleeping apartment, where, according to Eastern custom, they lay round the walls upon carpets or mattresses. Campbell renders "with me," "as well as myself," which, no doubt, the Greek will bear; but if the children were in a different apartment, the friend could scarcely plead the danger of awaking them.—Ed.

‖ Our Lord's argument is this — if a friend will yield to importunity what he will not yield to mere human friendship, how much more will God yield to importunate prayer, what he is already prepared to grant from heavenly love.—Ed.

* The scorpion is generally about two inches in length, and, in structure, resembles a lobster. It has a jointed tail, said to increase with its age, at the end of which is a small curved sharp-pointed sting, capable of inflicting a most poisonous, and often deadly, wound. Ebn Sinan, Avicenna, and others, describe a white species, of an oval form, and much resembling an ordinary egg.—Ed.

† Instead of "the Holy Spirit," Matthew (7. 11.) says "good things." Our Lord, therefore, had made mention of both; but Matthew, in addressing Jews accustomed to the temporal promises of Moses, turns their attention to the "good things" (see Mark 10. 30); Luke, who wrote for the Gentiles, turns their attention to that "Holy Spirit," by whom their conversion had been wrought, and their gifts derived.—Ed.

He that will not believe the Bible to be the word of God, will assuredly deny a miracle to be the work of God. Of this the Jews gave sufficient example, when they ascribed our Lord's miracles to Satan, and paid for a falsehood to impugn his resurrection.—Ed.

be attended to and improved! and cheerfully ought their hearers to provide them a subsistence. Ministers ought to appear altogether disentangled from carnal cares and pursuits. And dreadful is their case who reject a purely-preached gospel and the faithful preachers of it.—Happy is it to be instrumental in advancing the kingdom of Christ, and depressing that of Satan. But more so to be enrolled in heaven, as the special favourites of God and heirs of his glory. How exhilarating are the views of that sovereign grace, which, by the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost, God bestows on whom he will;—the saving blessings and distinguished honours of the new covenant! But it is absurd for men to seek righteousness and life by a law which they can never fulfil; or to attempt reducing the broad law of God to the standard of their own heart and life. Never ought any to inquire concerning eternal salvation from a captious or even curious intention, but with the most serious concern. And it is comely when love to God and to men streams powerfully through every action of life, and the miseries of strangers and enemies awaken our tender compassion. Never should ministers or others make visits, without leaving a savour of Christ behind them. Everywhere they should 33 [y]No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 The light* of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; [z]but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that [a]he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye [b]fools,§ did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But rather [c]give alms ‖of such things* as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 But wo unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint, and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

§ The word "fools" being ordinarily a term of reproach, may seem ill fitted for an instructive address. The sting of apparent insult may, however, be easily removed, by translating it more literally, "thoughtless, unwise."—Note. Those who attempt to measure the language of our Lord by any standard of worldly refinement, may readily pass sentence upon him for unnecessary severity; but what is called refinement is generally wanting in truth, the place of which it supplies by suppression, falsehood, and flattery—simply seeking to render the speaker agreeable, but having no regard for making the listener better. Our Lord spake truth, spake from love, and spake for eternity, therefore the world hated, persecuted, and crucified him.—Ed.

labour to render men wise unto salvation. And no secular cares should ever hinder spiritual concern. Thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of, and an interest in, Christ! If once we have this, neither hell nor earth can deprive us of it: and Jesus will encourage our solicitous care about it, and secure our eternal possession of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—There is great need that Jesus Christ should teach us to pray to God, as our gracious and heavenly Father, for all temporal, and especially spiritual blessings, with holy reverence and adoration; with firm faith, strong fervour, and persevering importunity; and with a charitable and forgiving temper of spirit; that God in all things may be glorified. If we thus pour out our requests in the name of our Redeemer, it is impossible they should fail of a gracious answer. But while some learn to pray, how many, contrary to all means used with them, reject, and learn to blaspheme, the glorious Deliverer from sin and Satan. None are held neuter in religion, but are either Jesus' friends or enemies. They, therefore, who seemed to be once reformed, often become the vilest apostates and distinguished slaves of Satan. How ready are others to imagine real happiness to consist in outward connexions with Christ.

‖ Neither be ye of doubtful mind.—The original seems to refer to those who are superstitiously guided by meteors, as both individuals and nations frequently are—any regard to which unmeaning portents (of superstition begotten, and by superstition expounded) God expressly forbids. See Jer. 10. 2. A literal translation would stand thus:—"Neither be ye meteorized," carried about as clouds "by every wind of doctrine," tossed up and down between hope and fear of the means of support.—Ed.

* And all these things shall be added unto you.—Query, How far may a believer assuredly conclude that God will "add to him" such temporal blessings as are here promised? Just so far as, according to ver. 30, he really has need; but by no means so far as "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life," might desire. These the believer must altogether resign, forfeit, and sacrifice, if he would lay hold on eternal life.—Ed.

† Even nominal Christians are still a "little flock"—only about 175,500,000; while 482,000,000 are heathens, 140,000,000 Mohammedans, and 2,500,000 Jews. But of these 175,500,000 nominal Christians, how (comparatively) few can even charity reckon as real followers of the Lamb! Yet, however few, it is their Father's good will to prevent them now, by grace, from following a multitude to do evil, and to make them the founders of that spiritual kingdom that shall yet obtain dominion over all the earth.—Ed.

‡ This direction is generally considered an allusion to the order of the passover (Ex. 12. 11), and to the long, flowing, and entangling robes of the Orientals, which, however graceful in domestic use, required to be bound around the loins before a journey. But our consoling ver. 37, where the master, it is said, "will gird himself," and recollecting the act of our Lord, when he "girded himself with a towel" (John 13. 4), it would seem rather to refer to the preparation of servants to wait at their master's table, than to the preparation of travellers to set out upon a journey.—Ed.

§ "Like unto men" servants.—Ed.

‖ The second watch—according to the Roman computation, now introduced, extended from nine in the evening till twelve (Luke 12. 38); the third lasted from twelve till three; the fourth from three till six (Mat. 14. 25). All these watches are distinctly enumerated, Mark 13. 5, under the names of "even, midnight, cockcrowing, and morning."—Ed.

22 ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought* for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, That Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, §neither be ye of doubtful mind.‖

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.*

32 [d]Fear not, little flock; † for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

But it is only they who believe and obey the gospel that are happy indeed. How dark is the gospel to persons destitute of faith and depraved in judgment! But aggravated is their guilt, and inexpressible their misery, who remain wilfully blinded by pitiful prejudices amidst the clearest gospel light; and who are influenced by a superstitious, hypocritical, and persecuting temper. Fearful vengeance awaits them who prefer external ceremonies to the substantial duties of love and obedience; or who are zealous of fair shows of religion, while they secretly indulge themselves in the vilest abominations; or who, condemning ancient persecutors, do themselves rage against and persecute Christ, his gospel, and followers. Perseverance in national sins certainly issues in national ruin. And it is highly criminal and dangerous to hate, conceal, or misinterpret the scriptures, or to hate reproof, and rage against Jesus Christ and his word for condemning our faults.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.*

2 And Jesus answering, said unto them, [a] Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.†

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking

* These Galileans are, by some, supposed to have been the followers of Judas of Galilee (Acts 5. 37), who endeavoured to excite the Jews against the Romans, and to prevent the payment of tribute to Cesar. To this supposition, however, the chronological objections seem insuperable. But that the Galileans were a most ungovernable and seditious people, and that they excited several insurrections, Josephus testifies; and to some well-known instance of their crime and their punishment, our Lord here alludes.—Ed.

† Ye shall all likewise perish.—This is not a general assertion that all impenitent sinners would perish, but that his Jewish auditors would perish in the same manner—that is, at the time of the sacrifice, and by the Roman sword: which literally came to pass, as Josephus testifies; for Jerusalem was taken at the time of the passover, and many thousands slaughtered in and about the temple.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. XII.—How absurd is hypocrisy, seeing God is omniscient, and will in the last judgment publicly expose our whole conduct! It is highly unbecoming to distrust his care for, and assistance of, us in every duty, or to fear men more than him; and infinitely dangerous not to prefer the care of our soul to everything else. There is great need of watchfulness and fidelity in religion, since Christ will certainly own or reject us in the other world as we do him in this. And with humble confidence may we commit our souls to that Saviour, who eagerly desired to undergo the worst of deaths for the salvation of sinners; and to that heavenly Father, whose kind providence extends to the meanest creature, and has prepared for us an everlasting kingdom. Surely this is worthy to be sought for as our principal treasure, and prepared for as our inexpressible happiness. Why should we set our hearts on worldly portions, which only procure envy and contention; or which, by their abundant increase, precipitate their owners into everlasting perdition? And it is base and shameful when ministers neglect their infinitely-important work, and perplex their minds, or waste their time, in civil affairs. Yea, the more light men sin against, the greater will be their punishment. Alas that, while Jesus Christ died to reconcile men to God, and to one another, men's lusts, passions, and prejudices should make his conciliating gospel an occasion of strife and confusion! But if we be persecuted for a prudent and disinterested adherence to truth, he will enable us to defend our conduct. How perversely men are set against the Saviour, when they hate and persecute their nearest relations for his sake! And many are very prudent with respect to temporal, and fools with respect to spiritual and eternal concerns. Sinners are in unceasing danger of falling into the hand of God's just vengeance. And if, in their present day of grace, they do not, through faith, obtain reconciliation with him, unavoidable, unsupportable, and endless, must be their ruin. Alas, who amongst us can abide with devouring fire, or dwell with everlasting burnings!

fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he answering, said unto him, Lord, [b]let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:

9 And if it bear fruit, well; and if not, then [c]after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 ¶ [d]And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a [e]spirit of infirmity[e] eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, [f]he called her to him, and [g]said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he [h]laid his hands on her; [i]and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And [k]the ruler of the synagogue answered [l]with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath-day, and said unto the people, [m]There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, [n]Thou hypocrite, [o]doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, being [p]a daughter of Abraham, whom [q]Satan hath bound,[†] lo, these eighteen years, [r]be loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he had said these things, [s]all his adversaries were ashamed: [t]and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ¶ Then said he, Unto what is the [u]kingdom of God like? [x]and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard-seed,[‡] which a man took, and cast into his garden: and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven,[§] which a woman took and hid in three [y]measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 [z]And he went through the cities and villages teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

23 ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few[*] that be saved? And he said unto them,

24 Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.[†]

25 When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are: depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 ¶ The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye and tell that fox,[‡] Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!

35 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, [a]Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Now, if by "popular language" be meant language derived from the Old Testament, the popular book of the Jews, there can be no objection to the statement; but if by "popular language" is meant the language of vulgar ignorance, prejudice, or superstition, then is the statement to be altogether repudiated. * As to the number of the saved, whether few or many, our Lord, because it was a question of mere curiosity, gives no reply. To say that they were many, might have encouraged a false hope; to say that they were few, might have begotten despondency or despair. But, at once, he reveals the fearful truth, that many are lost—a revelation calculated to awaken salutary fear, and warn thoughtless sinners to "flee from the wrath to come"—while he turns away the mind of the questioner from profitless speculation about others, and fixes his attention upon the salvation of his own soul.—Ed.
† And shall not be able—The reasons of this inability are:—1. They "seek" when they ought to "strive." 2. They seek at the wrong time — not while the Master (Christ) was sitting in intercession, but when he had risen up to judgment (Heb. 7. 25. & 10. 12, 13.) 3. They "seek" in the wrong place, for they "stand without," (John 13. 2, 6)—that is, not in Christ's faith, name, and righteousness. 4. They seek upon the wrong plea—not that they had submitted to him and trusted in him (Eph. 1. 12. Heb. 5. 9)—but merely that they had followed him in eating and drinking—that is, professed his gospel as far as it was pleasant and profitable, and belonged to a Christian land where he had taught in their streets; but affording, by their ignorance and presumption, a melancholy evidence that the Spirit of truth and holiness had not taught in their hearts (John 14. 26).—Ed.
‡ According to modern ideas, the fox is the emblem of cunning, hypocrisy, and robbery; and, consequently, its application to Herod has been considered as a condemnatory allusion to his crooked and unrighteous policy. For this interpretation, however, the Scriptures furnish no foundation. The fox is mentioned in Scripture, 1. As employed by Samson (Jud. 15. 4) to burn the corn of the Philistines. 2. As destroying the vines (Cant. 2. 15). 3. As inhabiting desolate ruins (Lam. 5. 18). 4. As burrowing in holes (Mat. 8. 20). Out of these facts, therefore, and not from any modern ideas, must the meaning of the title be collected. A political firebrand to his kingdom: the destroyer of her agriculture and commerce; the desolater of her cities, and a houseless exile (all which things were literally true of this Herod,) is, most probably, the scriptural interpretation of the message of our Lord—a message at once descriptive of the past, and prophetic of the future.—Ed.

Siloam, most sudden and dreadful, chiefly occasioned by their attendance on their ceremonial services, and near to the temple.—The parable of the fig-tree imports, that, notwithstanding their long-continued barrenness of good tempers and works, yet, by means of the intercession of Christ and his ministers, they should, for about forty years, enjoy a gospel dispensation, and afterwards be fearfully destroyed on account of their unfruitfulness and wickedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—With great care should we guard against uncharitable censures of those whom God hath sorely afflicted, remembering that his strokes on them are warnings to us, and that nothing short of evangelical repentance can prevent our eternal ruin. Severe censures of others but prepare ourselves for unmixed wrath from God. He takes the most exact notice of every season and means of grace we enjoy, and of our unprofitableness under the same. The opportunities of his mercy and patience are often unexpectedly lengthened out through the mediation of his Son and the prayers of his ministers. And if he spare, ministers ought to be diligent. The most unfruitful sinners may be renewed and turned to God by the gospel: but the obstinate abuse of this will at last issue in men's just and inexpressible ruin. Cries for mercy will then become vain, hopes and pleas from external privileges will be defeated, and there will be none to intercede for the sinner. Let not therefore curious inquiries about the number of the saved, but earnest care about my own believing in Jesus Christ, be the labour of my soul. And to quicken my diligence, let me remember that few comparatively are saved: and, to raise my admiration, and encourage my

AND it came to pass, [a] as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath-day, that they watched [*] him.

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy.[†]

3 And Jesus answering, spake unto [b] the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 And [c] they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go:

5 And answered them, saying, [d] Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day?

6 And they could not answer him again to these things.

7 ¶ And he put forth a parable to those which were [‡] bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; [§] saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not [‖] down in the highest room, lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art [*] bidden, go and sit down [†] in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship [‡] in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; [§] lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, [*] call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 ¶ And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, [f] Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.[‖]

† The Pharisees, who ascribed certain of our Lord's miraculous cures to Beelzebub, would doubtless be disposed to attribute the cure of nervous diseases, such as palsy, to the mere force of imagination. He, therefore, here heals a disease upon which imagination could have no possible influence — thus frustrating, in mercy, every plea of incredulity.—Ed.

§ That our Lord does not mean to forbid hospitality amoug equals, is manifest from the case of Matthew (Luke 5. 29), and of the marriage in Cana (John 2. 2). His object is merely to inculcate that the claims of charity to the poor are to take decided precedence of the exercise of hospitality to the rich; and that, if there are not means for both, hospitality, even to friends, must be laid aside, that charity to the poor may be more amply exercised.—Note. The difficulty in expounding the commandment depends, in a great degree, on the translation. The word translated "call" (ver. 12), signifies to "call, hail, or summon, with a loud voice"—that is, ostentatiously;—whereas the word translated "call" (ver. 13), signifies merely to "invite (as in John 10. 3) with gentleness or affection."—Ed.

‖ Inasmuch as our Lord gives this man no direct reply, it seems most probable he was, like the apostles themselves at this date, fully convinced that JESUS was the Messiah, but still expecting merely a temporal kingdom, in which banquetting would constitute a principal source of happiness. From these gross ideas, our Lord seeks to lead him, by showing him, that, whereas all men would willingly partake of a temporal feast, his is a kingdom whose spiritual banquets are contemned, and whose tables nothing but divine compulsion can fill.—Ed.

16 [g] Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 [h] And sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And [i] they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, [k] being angry, said to his servant, [l] Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, [m] it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, [n] Go out into the highways and hedges, and [*] compel them to come in, [*] that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That [p] none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 ¶ And there went great multitudes with him; and he turned, and said unto them,

26 [q] If any man come to me, and hate [†] not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 [r] And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

faith, let me think how often the most improbable in appearance are converted, while others are left to perish in their sins. And let me behold how ready Jesus was to instruct the ignorant, alarm the careless, and heal the diseased. Indefatigable was he in his labours. † Who are the just? Even those that "live by faith" in Jesus. (Rom. 1. 17. & 5. 1.) Who are they that need no repentance? Even such as have repented already, because they believed the gospel. (2 Cor. 7. 9, 10. Heb. 6. 1.) But why this preference of "one" repenting now, to "ninety" that had repented before? Because joy is chiefly a sudden emotion, arising from victory, or some great blessing just obtained. (1 Chr. 12. 40. Ezra 3. 12, 13. & 6. 16, 22. Job 38. 7.) Reflections upon Chap. XIV.—There is great need of divine instruction how to observe the weekly sabbath, and how to connect works of necessity and mercy with acts of devotion. And at our meals, and every other season, our talk ought to turn upon the important points of religion, and tend to the glory of God. Nor should the presence of enemies, who watch for our halting, deter us from our duty. In their nature and tendency, how base is pride, and how valuable humility, both before God and men! And earthly honours and esteem are contemptible when compared with the honours of humble souls at the last day, and in the eternal state. Luxurious feasting marks men's pride and sensuality, robs the poor, and abuses the bounty of God. But astonishing is the grace of God in preparing a feast, a gospel dispensation, and an eternal happiness, on the flesh and blood of his Son and the fulness of his covenant; and in inviting and beseeching sinners, Gentile sinners, even the chief, to share thereof! And however many Jews or others, on the highest carnal pretences, reject it, multitudes, even of the most unlikely, shall be brought in, till Christ's church on earth, and mansions in heaven, be filled. With great faithfulness and labour ought ministers to teach every man, and warn every man, and call every man, for this effect. For strict is the account they must give of their conduct and success. But redoubled vengeance, and tremendous exclusion from God's mercy, await those who refuse Christ. And if we would be interested in his blessings, he must have the highest preference in our heart above self and everything earthly. And practical religion must begin on such consideration and principles as will dispose us to endure every thing for his sake. Dreadful and eternal shame shall cover those professors who are at last found empty and graceless. How valuable are the doctrines and graces of our Redeemer, when lodged in the heart and practised in the life! and what a preserving, purifying, and savoury blessing they render us to all around! But very pernicious are all errors; and unprofitable and hurtful now, and miserable hereafter, are loose, carnal, corrupt, careless, and erroneous ministers and professors of the true religion. O my soul, consider these things, and take heed that I never draw back unto perdition! And if I think I stand, let me take heed lest I fall.

Chap. XV.—The scope of all these parables is to represent the exceeding riches of God's grace to sinners, especially the Gentiles. The lost sheep brought back represents them as elected and given to Christ, the chief Shepherd, to be saved by him; but stupidly wandering on in deserts of ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness and misery, but followed after by a laborious and faithful dispensation of the gospel, apprehended by Christ's Spirit, and by his power and grace converted to God, instated in his covenant, and made members of his church. The lost piece of silver recovered represents them as dear and precious in God's account, and wholly incapable of doing anything for their own relief; but, by means of shaking providences, the gospel dispensation, and conscience-convincing and heart-renewing influences, converted to Christ. The prodigal son reformed represents them as God's honoured creatures apostatizing from him, and perverting their natural powers, and the blessings of providence, to the basest purposes of iniquity, till they had rendered themselves slaves and worshippers of Satan, 27 And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and entreated him.

29 And he answering, said to his father, [d] Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment;† and yet thou never gavest me a kid,‡ that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son§ was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

a Measures called "baths" in the Old Testament (1 Kin. 7. 26). According to Godwin, the bath held four gallons and a half. Some think nine gallons and three quarts.—Ed.

† Hence it would appear that, at least, one evidence of an account was, not as in modern times, the name of the debtor attached to the bill, but the account itself being in his current handwriting. And if this bill, as some suppose, was a lease for a term of years, securing payment in produce, and of which the superior held a copy in the tenant's handwriting, and the tenant a copy in the steward's, then the obligation of the tenant to the steward must have been increased, because the iniquitous benefit was to continue for years.—Ed.

‡ Measures, or cors, the same as the homer (Ezek. 45. 14). Godwin calculates this measure at five bushels and five gallons; others, at fourteen bushels and two quarts.—Ed.

§ Make to yourselves friends.—How? By repenting of your sins, whether in coveting, getting, loving, holding, or expending (see ver. 13, 14)—whereby there will be "joy in heaven, in presence of the angels of God" (ch. 15. 7, 10), by whom, "when ye fail, ye shall be received into everlasting habitations."—(see ver. 32).—Ed.

‖ Mammon of unrighteousness.—The "unrighteous mammon" (ver. 11) being opposed to "true riches," and to "everlasting habitations" (ver. 9), the conclusion seems probable, that it should be translated "mammon of deceitfulness," or "deceitful riches," (see Mat. 13. 22) either because they are often deceitfully acquired, deceitfully expended, or that they deceitfully "make to themselves wings and flee away."—Ed.

¶ Another man's.—Rather, "another's"—that is, what is really God's, and yours only in trust for him.—Which is your own.—" Which may become (by gift and inheritance) your own." 1 Cor. 2. 12. Eph. 1. 11.—Ed.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, An hundred measures* of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly,† and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures‡ of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely: for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.

9 And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends§ of the mammon of unrighteousness;‖ that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.

10 He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's,¶ who shall give you that which is your own?

13 No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

14 ¶ And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

wicked and miserable to the last degree; but at last, by strokes of affliction and convictions of conscience, encouraged by gospel invitations, made to apply to God for his free and full salvation:—graciously drawn and received by him, clothed with the imputed righteousness of Christ, endowed with his Spirit and grace, as a pledge of their eternal inheritance; qualified by gospel promises and influences to walk in God's ways; and feasted on the flesh, blood, and fulness of Christ, and made glad with the light of his countenance. The joy attending the recovery of the lost sheep, piece of silver, or prodigal son, imports that God is more glorified in the redemption of men than in the preservation of angels who never sinned;—in the conversion of the Gentiles than in the preservation of the Jewish church;—in the conversion of notorious sinners than of such as have been always civilized;—and in the conversion of all ranks and degrees of sinners than in the pretended religion of self-righteous persons; and that he and his angels more rejoice therein. The elder son denotes the Jews, particularly the scribes and Pharisees, who took such offence at God's calling the Gentiles into his gospel church, and honouring them above themselves, who had long been his peculiar people, that they obstinately refused to embrace the gospel, and unite with them in one church. He may also represent all self-righteous professors, and even peevish believers, who take offence at God's vouchsafing his singular favours to persons converted from notorious wickedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Great is the grace and condescension of Jesus Christ to the very chief of sinners, and base the heart that rages against his love. Alas, how bent are sinners to wander from God, and expose themselves to danger and ruin! Unable to recover themselves, they are plunged in, and covered with, wretchedness and guilt. Yet, madly prodigal, and haters of God's presence and government, they are puffed up with a self-conceit of their excellency and merit, and imagining all that they have their own, covetous of a present portion, and regardless of everything eternal, they apostatize more and more from God, and become slaves to their lusts, abusing every gift of God to their service. Yea, though destitute of everything holy, honourable, or gladdening, they are quickly involved in disappointment, perplexity, and wretchedness, and exposed to everlasting destruction: yet still obstinately will they pursue every folly, however base or ruinous, rather than return to a gracious God!—Infinite is the love of God in seeking the lost and unconverted prodigals! Quicksighted is his mercy to espy our necessities and mark our cares and desires, and alert in hastening to our relief. Active and generous is he in drawing us to himself, embracing the polluted, pardoning our iniquity, accepting us in the Beloved, giving us his Spirit, renewing our nature, shedding abroad his love in our hearts, and supplying all our wants with his benefits.—What a change his grace makes! The most thoughtless consider their ways, and become wise unto salvation; the proud become humble; the lost are recovered to everything useful and glorious; and the dead in trespasses and sins are made alive to God and his service! What ground of inexpressible joy is this to saints, to ministers, to angels, to God himself! But detestable is it, from a principle of malice and self-conceit, to take offence at the freedom, extent, and sovereignty of his grace; or to murmur at the happiness of sinners by means of it. Marvellous is it that God should court such froward transgressors with overtures of mercy! But wo, wo, wo, to their souls if they obstinately reject them!

CHAP. XVI.—In the parable of the steward, we are taught that God will call us to an account for our use of every temporal enjoyment; and that, by a Christian foresight of this, we ought so to improve our uncertain riches in acts of piety and charity, as that, when we die, God and his angels may conduct us, as faithful stewards, to everlasting mansions of happiness; and the saints, whom we had relieved, may honourably welcome us thither, as an answer to their prayers for us:—and that, if we be not faithful in using the perishing enjoyments of this 16 The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle[e] of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever putteth away his wife,[f] and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

19 ¶ [g]There was a certain rich man,[z] which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

20 And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores,

21 And desiring to be fed with the crumbs[g] which fell from the rich man's table: moreover, the dogs came and licked his sores.

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom:[i] the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24 And he cried and said, Father Abraham, [h]have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.[*]

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us that would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren;[†] that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

[h] What! did the rich man crave of the damned the crumbs, does not appear;—nothing is certain, the beggar—(rather, "the destitute man")—expected no better; and how much this sort of doles (Mat. 15. 27) was for such a patient, it requires not medical skill, but humanity, to discover. The rich man was, therefore, deeply culpable, even though he granted the crumbs, for he could have afforded better, and rich and generous diet was essential to the comfort, humanly speaking, to the recovery of the miserable sufferer.—Ed.

[i] Abraham's bosom, being interpreted as a figure for heaven, is supposed to establish the parabolic character of the narrative. But, without having recourse to the Hebrew method of naming places, it is sufficient to remark, that until we know more of heaven, it behoves us to use much caution as to what we pronounce figurative, and what literal, in its constitution. That, however, there is a spiritual kindred and genealogy in heaven, different from natural kindred and genealogy on earth, appears unquestionable, (see 1 Cor. 4. 15. 1 Thes. 2. 19) and that this may present a specimen of it, it is neither wise to deny nor affirm. --- world, which God has merely committed to us as a trust, to be used for his glory and the good of others, we can have no proper evidence of our possessing the more excellent and substantial riches of true grace, which God gives men for their own, never to be taken from them.

In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus Christ teaches us that, let true saints be as poor and contemned as they may in this world, they shall have an honourable entrance into, and station in, heaven with him; and that rich men, who wallow in sensual pleasures here, shall, in the other world, fall into the most aggravated miseries; and that, however damned men may wish to prevent their partners in guilt coming thither to torment them, no means of conversion but the scripture shall ever be allowed them.—Perhaps, too, he represented to these Pharisees that, however much they now contemned him in his poor and debased estate, he should quickly be exalted to glory; and they who now rioted in wealth and honour be thrust down into hell, and the generality of their nation be reduced, for many ages, to the most deplorable and unpitied wretchedness on earth, in which they should earnestly wish for the now contemned appearances of the Messiah, but they should be utterly denied them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Whatever things we enjoy in this world are but a trust committed to us by God to do good with. We cannot long hold them: but quickly, in an hour we think not, our reckoning for them must come. O that we may then be found faithful! It is self-contradicting and absurd to pursue earthly riches with more earnestness and industry than eternal treasures; and dangerous to neglect a single opportunity or advantage in favour of everlasting happiness. It is necessary to watch against all unfaithfulness and injustice in worldly enjoyments, which so many make instruments of unrighteousness. Lesser sins lead to greater; and pride and laziness often plunge men into the vilest dishonesty. The abuse of less important trusts provokes God to withhold what is more excellent. And as none can serve both God and the world, it is wise to prefer God in due time. But proud covetous hypocrites, enslaved by their own lusts, hate and scoff at instruction.—What is most esteemed and desired by men, is generally abominable before God. His gospel dispensation does not make void, but establish the law. And blessed be God that both Jews and Gentiles have with earnestness crowded into the New Testament church. Happy are the poorest of its true members: their adversities will quickly issue in everlasting honour, and unutterable delight. God lightly values the wealth and honour of this world, which he frequently bestows upon the vilest miscreants, to ripen them for redoubled damnation. Awful thought! to have only uncertain and unsatisfying enjoyments, which shall quickly issue in insupportable and everlasting torments! Inexpressibly different, and irreversibly fixed, is the future state of both saints and sinners. How delightful is it for the one to review his conversion to, and walking with, Christ; and how dreadful for the other to remember in what an absurd manner he lost his soul for the sake of sensual or carnal trifles! And terrible companions will they make in hell, who had been partners in sin upon earth. With great diligence should we now earnestly search, believe, and practise God's word; for, if it be neglected, no other means of salvation will ever be afforded us.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood [i] afar off: *

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, [k] Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

21 Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is [r] within you.§

22 ¶ And he said unto the disciples, [s] The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.

23 And they shall say to you, See here! or, See there! go not after them, nor follow them.

‡ Eagles—generally taken to represent the Roman armies, whose standards were eagles. But the origin of the emblem seems rather to be Ezek. 17. 3, 7, where Babylon and Egypt are both represented as eagles, into whose nests came the Roman empire, and whose armorial bearing and device, as it were, they possess together with their persecuting and enslaving spirit.—Ed.

28 [x] Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.

31 In that day, he which shall be upon the house-top,* and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back.

32 Remember Lot's wife.†

33 Whosoever shall seek to save‡ his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it.

34 [y] I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed;§ the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

35 Two women‖ shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

36 * Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

37 And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body† is, thither will the eagles‡ be gathered together.

4 And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God,‡ nor regard man;

5 Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

6 And the Lord said, [c] Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?§

8 I tell you that [d] he will avenge them speedily.

Chap. XVII.—Ver. 20, 21. The kingdom of the Messiah will not be erected by temporal authority or force, nor make any pompous appearance in temporal riches or grandeur. Nor will he confine his throne and court to any particular place or nation; but his kingdom, being spiritual in its nature, power, and tendency, suited to the benefit of the soul, and for another world, works inwardly in men's hearts and consciences; and is already begun in the preaching of the gospel, and conversion of some among you.

Reflections upon Chap. XVII.—Alas, that so many offences and injuries should be found among professed Christians! Many are grieved, stumbled, and eternally ruined, by means of them. And tremendous woes must fall on their heads whose corrupt principles or practices occasion such things. How prone are most to offend God, and cause their neighbour to stumble out of his way! Yet most offenders are very averse to repent, and, if offended, to forgive injuries. Yea, it is impossible to perform self-denying duties without strong faith; and great is the need that Jesus should be daily increasing it. With great humility ought we to perform every commanded duty, and with great gratitude to receive distinguished mercies. And yet often both are wanting where they might have been most, and found where they could have been least expected. How many amuse themselves about the circumstances of Jesus' kingdom, instead of earnestly receiving him into their heart, that he may subdue their lusts, and govern their spirits! But the erection of his spiritual kingdom in the world is generally attended with some fearful judgments on its opposers. Self-indulgence in sensual gratifications is a common forerunner of fearful and sudden destruction. And none are more certainly exposed than hardened apostates, who refuse to take

Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?[a]

9 ¶ And he spake this parable unto certain which [c]trusted in themselves [†]that they were righteous, and despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; [‡]the one a Pharisee,[‡] and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee stood[§] and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I fast[‖] twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 [e]And the publican, [§]standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful[†] to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house [h]justified[‡] rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ¶ And they brought unto him also infants,[‡] that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, [i]they rebuked them.

16 [k]But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 [l]Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ¶ [m]And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master,[‖] what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? [n]none is good save one, that is, God.

20 [o]Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, [p]All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now, when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, [q]Yet lackest thou one thing: sell[*] all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he [r]was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

[a] Shall he find faith on the earth?—When he cometh to avenge his elect "speedily," will he find faith in "the land of Israel?" (as the word translated "earth," in such circumstances, generally signifies).—A question fully illustrated by the fact, that comparatively few of the Jews believed, even when our Lord had risen from the dead, and these few "were scattered abroad" by the persecutions of Herod and the Pharisees (Acts 7. 59 & 8. 1 & 12. 1, 2), so that when the Lord came to "avenge his elect," whose voice whose blood cried to him day and night, there were but few believers in the land of Judea, and his apostles had been directed by the Spirit and providence of God to "turn to the Gentiles."—Ed.

[a] "To him gave all the prophets witness." Take as a specimen. 1. The rage of the heathen and of the Jewish rulers against him, (Ps. 2. 1, 2) 2. His condemnation and crucifixion (Ps. 22. 16. Mic. 5. 1. Is. 53. 5.) 3. His death (Ps. 22. 15. Is. 53. 12.) 4. His resurrection (Ps. 16. 10. Hos. 6. 2.) 5. His ascension, Ps. 16. 11. & 68. 18.—Ed.

[†] Having formed the opinion that Messiah must be a temporal conqueror, and possess a temporal kingdom, they could not reconcile with this opinion the relation of his death. The prophetic truths that our Lord uttered concerning his sufferings and death, were, therefore, as little "understood" as if he had spoken in an unknown tongue.—Ed.

[‡] Luke and Mark mention but one blind man; Matthew (20. 30) describes two. This variety, however, presents no contradiction. Matthew records the fact of two blind men having been cured. Luke, writing at a time when, it is most probable, only one of them survived, mentions but that one; and Mark (10. 46,) mentions one by name as authentic and living evidence of the miracle he narrates. The apparent contradiction lies in the assertion of Matthew (20. 29.) that the miracle took place "as they (Jesus and his disciples) departed from Jericho," and of Mark (10. 46), that it occurred "as he (Jesus) went out of Jericho," while Luke assigns it to the time "when he (Jesus) was come nigh unto Jericho." The attempt to reconcile these contradictions by changing the translation "when he was come nigh," to "when he was nigh," seems utterly unsupported by any sufficient authority. The reconciliation must, therefore, be sought for from another source, and that source is opened in a modern example. London, as a general geographical name, includes Westminster, Southwark, &c., &c., &c. One historian, accordingly, in speaking of a public occurrence, affirms it took place "as some one departed from London," though, in another geographical sense, he really departed from Westminster. Another relating the same event affirms it occurred as the party described "was come nigh to London," meaning thereby, not London inclusive of Westminster, &c., &c., but London as specially commencing at Temple-bar. Now, is there any contradiction here? None whatever. Why then are the scriptures condemned, where a secular historian is acquitted!! Besides, Jericho consisted of an old and a new town, as Josephus records. Our Lord, therefore, may have performed his miracle as he "departed" from Jericho, the one town, and as he "was come nigh" to Jericho, the other.—Ed.

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

28 ¶ Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake,

30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 ¶ Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.[a]

32 For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on:

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none[†] of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as he was come nigh unto Jericho,[‡] a certain blind man sat by the way-side begging:

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38 And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And they which went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace: but he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him: and when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

42 And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee.

43 And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

warning from the calamities of their others before them. But if men will not heartily part with the world as their portion, they must perish with it.—In great wisdom and mercy the spread of God's vengeance among the obstinate Jews was made a mean of spreading the gospel among, and of saving, the Gentiles. Fearfully he resents the injuries done to his faithful servants, and pities and rewards them that suffer for his sake. Yea, marvellously he distinguishes them in his protections here and his eternal glories hereafter.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—The fervent and importunate prayer of faith is always effectual at last. A gracious answer cannot be delayed beyond the best time. And all the injuries done to the saints shall be fearfully resented, though God often patiently delays his vengeance till religion be almost utterly extirpated. What a mixture is in our worshipping assemblies on earth! Different tempers, manners, and ends, have different effects on the very same duty. Pride, formality, and hypocrisy indulged, render men's persons and worship detestable to God.

(1) Zaccheus, the chief publican: 1—10. (2) A parable of ten servants and ten pounds: 11—27. (3) Jesus rides into Jerusalem and weeps over it: 28—44. A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

AND Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.

2 And, behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And he sought to see Jesus who he was;* and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore-tree to see him: for he was to pass that way.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste, and come down; for to-day I must abide at thy house.

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

8 And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.†

9 And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham.‡

10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

11 ¶ And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable,§ because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

12 He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom,‖ and to return.

13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten *pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But [a]his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, [b]thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, [c]thou good servant: because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, [d]thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, [e]Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, [f]Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 For I [g]feared thee, [h]because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, [i]Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest* that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming† I might have required mine own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, [k]Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds:

25 (And they said unto him, Lord; [l]he hath ten pounds:)‡

26 For I say unto you, [m]That unto every one which hath shall be given; [n]and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 [o]But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

28 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, [p]he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

29 [q]And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage§ and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples,

30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because [r]the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

* And he sought to see Jesus who he was.—Rather, "what kind of person he was." It is a fact that we scarce can hear or think of any remarkable person, without forming in our minds an imaginary likeness of him, or desiring to know his bodily appearance. On this point the Scriptures afford not the least shadow of information. Of stature, of complexion, of expression, of voice, of manner, they breathe not a word, either for the painter or historian. His moral portrait they draw at full length, but of his bodily appearance believers shall know nothing till "they see him as he is," and themselves be "fashioned into the image of his glorious body." Yet as the desire of Zaccheus to see "what kind of person Jesus was" on earth, brought salvation to his house, so the desire to "see him as he is" in heaven, still continues to bring salvation to the souls of believers and their children. Phil. 3. 21. 1 John 3. 2.—Ed.

† This was the utmost the Jewish law required, even in cases of fraudulent concealment and conviction, unless where an ox had been killed or sold, in which case five times the value was to be paid, on account of the labour being lost to the owner. Exod. 22. 1.—Ed.

‡ He also is a son of Abraham.—These words seem to be intended as a reply to those who murmured against our Lord, because he chose to be the guest of a man reputed a sinner. For, admitting that Zaccheus was a sinner, he had the more evident need of salvation; and as a son of Abraham, either by natural descent or the spirit of adoption, he had the same covenant claims with the murmurers themselves.—Ed.

§ This parable is very similar to that of the talents (Mat. 24. 14—30); but will be found to differ from it in several important particulars.—Ed.

‖ The parable is probably an allusion to the well-known history of Herod, or his son Archelaus. Herod went to Rome to obtain the investiture of the kingdom of Judea from Anthony. Having succeeded, he afterwards took a voyage to Rhodes to obtain a confirmation from Cesar. Archelaus, his son and successor, made a similar journey, with the same object, and, to a certain extent, with similar success.—Ed.

† The object of the parable was to correct the fond imagination of the immediate restoration of the kingdom of David in Jerusalem (see ver. 11.); wherefore our Lord represents its restoration by a candidate for a kingdom, not taking immediate possession, but going into a "far country," and followed by the opposition of his citizens; then finally returning after a successful solicitation, and adjudging—not to servants sustained and stimulated by his presence, but to servants tried and confirmed during his absence—their several rewards, according to their works. But not the greatest sinner, who humbly asks mercy through Jesus' righteousness, shall be denied a full justification unto eternal life. It is criminal for professors to withhold children from Christ, who delights to bless them. And very honourable to be like them in teachableness and humility.——No external privileges or duties are in the least to be rested in. Men may go inconceivable lengths in apparent holiness, and yet their hearts remain unrenewed, and attached to the world. Awful is the state when God's law does not convince men that they need a better righteousness than their own to justify them! and when love to Christ cannot wean their hearts from the world. Earthly enjoyments indeed often entangle and insnare men to their everlasting ruin. And there is need of almighty power to deliver us from a carnal mind, and to make us content to forego all for Christ. But everything suffered for his sake, from principles of faith and love, will be gain at last. And nothing is too much to suffer for him, who suffered so much for us. Yet, alas, how slow of heart are men to conceive aright of his sufferings and glory! It is a great mercy to be awakened to prayer by curiosity or any means. Jesus is ready to take notice of, and grant relief under, all our troubles. And a deep sense of sin, and earnest desires of mercy, will quickly issue in grateful praise and holy obedience.

AND [a]it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, [*] [b]the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, Tell us, [c]by what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?

3 And he answered and said unto them, [d]I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 [e]The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, [f]saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

6 But and if we say, Of men; [g]all the people will stone us: [h]for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, [i]That they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, [k]Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things. [†]

9 ¶ Then began he to speak to the people this parable; [l]A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to [m]husbandmen, and went into [n]a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: [o]but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? [p]I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is [q]the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. [r]What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid. [‡]

* As he taught the people, and preached the gospel.—In modern times there have arisen professed ministers of the gospel, who undervalue the ordinance of preaching, and place the efficacy of religion chiefly in baptism, the Lord's Supper, or, fasting and prayer. Without once undervaluing any of these ordinances of God, let the teaching and preaching of the Lord furnish a rebuke to all such imaginations, which impiously undervalue what Jesus practised, as the chief means of "convincing and converting sinners, and of building up believers through faith, unto salvation."—Ed.

‡ They said, God forbid.—Because they (the people, ver. 11.) recollected the case of Archelaus, most probably alluded to, chap. 19. 27, and interpreting what was spiritual by what was temporal, they deprecated a judgment they could not deny to be deserved by the general unbelief of the nation, and blind infatuation of their rulers. See ver. 17.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—In religion it is necessary for men to hear and see for themselves. And even curiosity may issue in saving faith and repentance. Christ spies out his chosen sheep wherever they are: and in rich mercy he seeks them out, and touches their hearts, however hard: and his Spirit and grace, implanted therein, quickly makes great reformation. The covetous, cruel, and haughty oppressor, is rendered humble, honest, and merciful: and the power of grace is clearly discovered by deadness to the world—and by the affections being weaned from its pursuits. But pardon ought never to be expected without restitution of our ill-gotten goods. Yea, everything we have ought to be at Jesus' call: and it is better to give to pious uses while we live, than defer it to be given after our death.—His free grace is sufficient, both to seek and save us, be our guilt or malady what it will. And abundant are the gifts and privileges which Jesus hath given to the ministers and members of his gospel church. His exaltation to glory issues in blessings to men. But all that is received must be improved and accounted for. Happy are they, who, with deep humility and dependence on Christ, improve it well; and infinitely glorious, as well as free, their eternal reward. But fearful is their punishment, who, through hard thoughts of God, abandon themselves to sinful inactivity. Nowhere is sloth more criminal and ruinous than in the church of God. If men will not improve God's gifts, they must be deprived of them. And if Jews and others dare to reject an ascended 17 And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, [a] The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?

18 [t] Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 ¶ [u] And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 [x] And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so [y] they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, [z] Master, we know that thou [a] sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person* of any, but teachest the way of God † truly:

22 [b] Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cesar, or no?

23 But [c] he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why [d] tempt ye me?

24 Show me [e] a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, [f] Cesar's.

25 And he said unto them, [g] Render therefore unto Cesar the things which be Cesar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they [h] marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ¶ [i] Then came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him,

28 Saying, Master, [k] Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus answering, said unto them, [l] The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither can they die any more:* for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

37 Now that the dead are raised, [m] even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

39 ¶ Then certain of the scribes answering, said, Master, thou hast well said.

40 And after that [n] they durst not ask him any question at all.

41 ¶ And he said unto them, How say they that Christ is David's son?

42 And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

44 David therefore calleth him Lord, how is he then his son?†

45 ¶ Then, in the audience of all the people, he said unto his disciples,

46 Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts;

47 Which devour widows' houses, and for a show make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.

* There are several points of difference between our Lord's reply, as recorded in Mat. 22. 23, and in this passage; all, however, may, upon the following principles, be accounted for in perfect consistence with the doctrine of plenary verbal inspiration:—1. One evangelist might omit, what another, directed by the same Spirit, might insert—the one record being thus rendered the most valuable commentary upon the other. 2. As our Lord, most probably, spake in the Hebrew or Syro-Phenician tongue, the same Spirit actuating both writers, might yet, for the purposes of exposition, direct the one to a translation into Greek, differing from that of the other. 3. Our Lord, discoursing to a people dark of understanding, and slow of heart to believe, might, for the sake of impression, repeat some parts of his exposition in new terms, and thus furnish an opportunity for an amanuensis, faithfully copying the exact words of his mouth, to differ from another who was equally exact, who had copied a varied, but equally original version of the same ideas.—ED.

Here he, therefore, asserts it on the ground of Scripture; for if he were David's LORD, how could he possibly be David's SON? This difficulty, this contradiction in terms, can be solved upon no principle but one—"the WORD was God," and "the WORD became flesh." As God, he was David's Lord—as man, he was David's Son. Redeemer, they must be destroyed in the most public and fearful manner. Dreadful indeed is their condition whom even his compassion cannot deliver. It is strange that any should envy him a lowly triumph; that professors should hate him for purifying his temple, instructing the ignorant, and healing the diseased; and that nought but the fear of inferiors should hinder some from murdering the divine Saviour, or persecuting his people!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Fear of men may restrain persecutors from murdering, but not from cavilling. Satan and his emissaries will always oppose Christ and his gospel, and his spiritual Headship over his church, to their utmost. And it is but lost labour to attempt persuading such as are resolved to shut their eyes against all conviction, and who will take the most base and false evasions to avoid it. Surprising is the patience and mercy of God, that so long affords unfruitful and rebellious sinners such means of grace before he casts them utterly off. But dreadful will be their condition at last, when all the injuries they had done to Jesus and his ministers shall be avenged upon them, and he shall glorify his power in their temporal ruin or eternal damnation. Faithful ministers have great need to be always on their guard against deceitful brethren. Pretences to piety, and † So violent were the commotions that soon followed, that four Roman emperors, Nero, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, suffered violent deaths within eighteen months.—But the end of the Jewish polity is not yet.—Ed.

‡ By fearful sights and great signs from heaven, cannot be intended, as some suppose, the comet hanging over the city, like a flaming sword, and other aerial appearances mentioned by Josephus (De Bell Jud. vii. 12), for God had expressly forbidden any regard to these things (Jer. 10. 2). Nor can any natural, or even supernatural, wonder become a true sign to a rational being, without accurate prophetic description going before, or prophetic interpretation at the time of its appearance — without which every attention given to portents and omens, is neither more nor less than superstition; and both these essentials are totally wanting in the cases related by Josephus. The really "fearful sights" were the factious murders amongst the Jews themselves; and the "great signs from heaven," were the Roman armies encompassing Jerusalem (ver. 20); "the abomination that maketh desolate standing in the holy place," as described by the prophet Daniel, and repeated by our Lord himself.—Ed.

§ These persecutions will be so overruled by Providence as to enable you to bear your testimony for "the truth as it is in Jesus," before the great of the world, to whom you could not otherwise find any possible access.—Ed.

‖ Never was any religion introduced to the world under such repulsive announcements; and especially unacceptable must such announcements have been to disciples accustomed to all the Mosaic promises of national and individual prosperity, and whose imaginations had been fired by the glowing descriptions of the kingdom of Messiah exhibited in the prophets, and which they, instead of interpreting spiritually, had been taught to apply to a temporal sovereignty, eventuating in a universal monarchy, of which the Jews were to be the exalted functionaries, and all heathen people the vassals and tributaries. A religion received and propagated under such a heavy cloud, gives sufficient evidence, both of the integrity of its Founder, and the sincerity of its first converts; while the event of its success, with means the most inadequate, and in the face of obstructions the most formidable, affords an evidence of its divine origin, which nothing but the most blinded infidelity could fail to recognise and acknowledge.—Ed.

† The number of Jewish prisoners taken during the war, amounted, at least, to 97,000, besides 11,000 starved through neglect, or a sullen refusal of food. Of these captives, some were transported to Rome, to grace, according to the barbarous custom of that people, the triumph of the conqueror; others were distributed through the cities of Syria, where many fell, in combats in the theatres with wild beasts, or in compulsory conflicts with one another; others were condemned to toil in the Egyptian mines; many, including persons of the first distinction, were sold for the most trifling prices, and about 40,000 were liberated, because no one would purchase them.—Ed.

of regard to civil rulers, and cavils of carnal reasoning, will be all tried to insnare or expose them. But let us at once fear God and honour the king, and hold fast plain scripture truths, in the well-grounded hope of a glorious resurrection. It is necessary that we believe God's truths with all our heart; but not that we should be able to answer every wicked cavil against them. And in the faith and contemplation of Christ as God-man in one person, let us hate hypocrisy and avoid hypocrites.

Reflections upon Chap. XXI.—Christ takes exact notice of all our works, particularly those of piety and charity. But who can think of his awful predictions, and their exact accomplishment, without beholding him at once the Saviour and the God, without considering that the Jewish constitution is now totally destroyed, and a gospel dispensation extending to all the world established on its ruins. God permits men to go on to the most fearful lengths in sin before he utterly destroys them. But terrible are the judgments on earth and torments in hell, which obstinate despisers of the gospel shall meet with at last.—Christ's faithful ministers and people generally share deep in tribulation. But faith and patience will infallibly carry them through all their difficulties, to his and their honour, and to the confutation of their adversaries. His gracious direction and support attend, and his everlasting free rewards await them. Happy are they

NOW the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover.

2 And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him;[a] for they feared the people.

3 ¶ Then entered Satan into Judas[†] surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains,[‡] how he might betray him unto them.

5 And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them [§]in the absence of the multitude.[‖]

7 ¶ Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be [*]killed.

8 And [a]he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

12 And he shall show you a large upper-room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and found as he had said[†] unto them: [b]and they made ready the passover.

14 And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, [c] With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled[‡] in the kingdom of God.

17 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:

18 For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

19 ¶ [d] And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is [e]my body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup [f]is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ¶ But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table.

22 And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: but wo unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 And they began to inquire among themselves which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ¶ And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.

26 But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger;[*] and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations:[†]

29 And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;[‡]

30 That ye may eat and drink[§] at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones,[‖] judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you,[*] that he may sift you as wheat:

32 But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

35 ¶ And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip;[†] and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.[‡]

37 For I say unto you, That this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are

[a] How they might kill him.—That is, by what subtle methods they might turn the tide of popular opinion against him, so that they might with safety proceed to his destruction.—Ed.

[†] How Satan entered into Judas—whether personally, as the demons certainly did into the bodies of the possessed—that is, certainly, if credit is to be given to plain Scripture narrative—or, whether, by taking advantage of his corrupt dispositions, especially his avarice, and managing to present the appropriate temptations before him, and thereby suggesting correspondent ideas to his mind—has been matter of question. Guyse, Gill, Rosenmuller, &c. are of opinion that Satan entered merely by suggestion; but the identity of expression between this case and even that of the swine (Mark 5. 13), seems clearly to decide in favour of an actual entering and possession, as the means whereby Satan "put it into the heart of Judas" to betray his Master. John 13. 2.—Ed.

[‡] Captains—of the temple—commanding the divisions of the priests and Levites.—Ed.

[§] Or, without tumult.

[‖] At the time of the passover, as appears from Josephus, the number of persons in and around Jerusalem, amounted to 2,500,000;—amongst whom any popular commotion—and such occurrences were frequent—must have been an object of great dread to the rulers.—So wonderfully does God control wicked and lawless men, by men as wicked and lawless as themselves; and their passions, which, like pent-up waters, have thus been restrained, he can again, as a judgment against their wickedness, let loose at his will, and render wicked rulers and wicked people mutual executioners of justice upon their several or common crimes.—Ed.

[*] Or, sacrificed.

[†] Temptations.—Trials from the calumnies of evil tongues—from the assaults made upon his person, and the plots contrived against his life.—Ed.

[‡] The kingdom appointed, or promised by covenant unto the Son, was a kingdom, the entrance to which was through the suffering of death (Heb. 2. 9, 10. & 12. 2). Such an entrance was also appointed to the disciples, who were fully warned that "through much tribulation they should enter into the kingdom of God." (John 16. 33. Acts 14. 22.) This kingdom, as it is established in the hearts of God's people, consists in "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," which are all the gifts of Christ; and, as it exists in heaven, it is rest from labour, and the enjoyment of glory. Rev. 14. 13. Col. 3. 4.—Ed.

[§] That ye may eat and drink—of that righteousness after which the children of God do constantly "hunger and thirst." Mat. 5. 6.—Ed.

[‖] And sit on thrones, &c.—Even so do the apostles now sit enthroned in the church, by their testimony for Jesus, judging and condemning the twelve tribes who rejected him (Acts 28. 23—28), adjudicating between them and the Gentiles (Acts 15. 1—29), and, in the gospel and its ordinances, propounding those principles by which the whole world shall be finally judged. (Rom. 2. 16). Whether these "thrones" imply any special apostolic glory in the kingdom yet to be inherited, will not farther appear till "we see as we are seen, and know as we are known."—Ed.

[*] Satan hath desired to have you.—Not thee, Peter, alone, but all of you; even as he desired to have Job, when, with two limitations, he obtained his desire, and smote him in his property, family, and person. (Job 1. 12. & 2. 5.) Simon is specially warned, because his self-confident boldness exposed him to the greatest danger, and the deepest fall.—Ed.

[†] As if he had said, the time is now come when you will no longer receive hospitality, and must therefore labour, by industry, frugality, and prudent forethought, to provide for yourselves.—Ed.

[‡] That our Lord did not direct the purchase of a literal sword, either for defence or attack, is evident from ver. 51. Mat. 26. 52. 2 Cor. 10. 4. But, by a strong proverbial figure, he meant to prepare the hearts of the disciples for encountering, with faith and patience, the manifold dangers that were now fast closing around them, Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 6. 7. Eph. 6. 11, &c. 1 Pet. 4. 1.—Ed.

who in evil days discern the signs of the times, and with fervent prayer, and persevering watchfulness, avoid the dangerous snare of earthly cares and pleasures, and so attend on gospel ministration as to be ever ready for the judgment-seat! two swords. And he said unto them, [s] It is enough.*

39 ¶ And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

40 [h] And when he was at the place, he said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation.

41 And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be willing,† remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done.

43 [i] And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 And, being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow,

46 And said unto them, [k] Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus [l] to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?‡

50 ¶ And one of them smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far.§ And he touched his ear, and healed him.

52 [m] Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.‖

54 ¶ [n] Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst° of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

† The slight verbal differences in the various records of this prayer, are perfectly consistent with the doctrine of complete verbal inspiration; for—not to speak of the various forms of translation from Hebrew or Syro-chaldaic into Greek, which the Spirit of truth might equally and most advantageously sanction—there is no reason to conclude that our Lord uttered the petition but once, and in one form, but on the contrary, every reason to conclude that, as he recurred to the same petition in three successive prayers, he also recurred to it more than once, and in various forms, in each prayer—any one of which forms would be equally true, and verbally exact.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Whether should I here most admire the lengths in wickedness to which sinners will go when left to themselves; the covetousness, treachery, unbelief, hardness of heart, malice, and malignity, manifested in plotting against, betraying, apprehending, condemning, reviling, and murdering the Son of God, and Saviour of mankind;—or his love, in patiently undergoing everything severe and shameful; in feasting, warning, directing, and comforting his disciples; in solemn resignation of himself to his sufferings and death; in miraculously healing one of his miscreant apprehenders; in graciously converting him who most criminally denied him; and in avowing himself a divine person, at the hazard of his life!—How extensive were his sufferings in soul—in body—in character! And yet all the malice of his enemies was so overruled as only to accomplish the fulfilment of prophecies, the honour of God, and the salvation of men. Marvellously he changed the ancient passover into a crucified Redeemer, and a delightful feast on his fulness. Let us always then observe it in the faith of his institution, in obedience to his authority, and aiming at his honour. It is an awful thing for professed disciples, and dignified clergymen, to betray their Master; and highly shameful to indulge carnal pride and ambition in the presence of a suffering Redeemer, whose kingdom is not of this world. But seasonably preserved, highly

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, [c] I find no fault* in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod,† who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 ¶ And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle‡ done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but [d] he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him.

11 And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe,§ and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶ And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶ And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, and the rulers, and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death‖ is done *unto him:

16 I will therefore chastise him,† and release him.

17 (For of necessity† he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:

19 (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.

22 *And he said unto them the third time,‡ Why? what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 [f] And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 [g] And Pilate * gave sentence that it should be as they required.

25 And he released unto them him [h] that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 ¶ [i] And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of [k] women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus, turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, [l] behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 [m] Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

31 [n] For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?†

32 ¶ And there were also two others, malefactors,‡ led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary,§ [o] there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 ¶ Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them;‖ for they know not what they do. [p] And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 ¶ And the people stood beholding: and the rulers also with them [q] derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be [r] Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers* also mocked him, coming to him, and *offering him vinegar, 37 And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.

38 [t] And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ¶ And [u] one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other answering, [x] rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

* I find no fault.—The Roman government now was too strong to be moved with jealousy at our Lord's claim to be King of the Jews. Pilate, therefore, disregarded the implied charge of rebellion against Cesar. It is not improbable that Pilate was also moved by the sight of what he would consider fallen greatness. But, by whatever moved, his feelings were overruled by Providence to produce a judicial Gentile testimony to the innocence of our Lord, and an abiding record of the injustice and cruelty of his persecutors.—Ed.

† This was Herod Antipas, governor of Galilee, who had beheaded John the Baptist, an Idumean by descent, but a Jew by proselytism, and who had now come, at the passover, to worship at Jerusalem.—Ed.

‡ Since Herod believed that Jesus could work miracles, why did he not acknowledge him to be the Messiah? Because he attributed his admitted power of working miracles, not to the power of God working in attestation of his divine commission, but to his knowledge of mere natural causes, and superior skill in some occult philosophy, such as the Egyptians and Persian Magi were supposed to possess. Thus the Pharisees had also admitted his miraculous power, yet rejected his claims to be Messiah, because they attributed his miracles to Beelzebub. In all this, Herod and the Pharisees erred alike in looking merely at the miracles, and disregarding the prophecy by which they were preceded—which preceding prophecy is essential to the evidence of a divine commission. As a gift from Herod, it was intended to mock our Lord as a claimant of the kingdom; like the testimony of Pilate (ver. 4), it was converted by Providence into a second public attestation of our Lord's innocence.—Ed.

honoured, and plentifully rewarded, are they who continue faithful in times of trouble. Great is the danger of pride, self-confidence, and unwatchfulness; or of rashly entering into temptation: and there is need of Jesus' intercession to preserve his people's faith when it is sorely shaken. And if we experience his influences, let us improve them for the warning and strengthening of our fellow Christians. But sins of infirmity in his saints greatly differ from the presumptuous rebellion of hardened sinners. How shocking it is for men to interrogate Jesus concerning his person, doctrine, or work, merely to strengthen their own and others' prejudices against him! For soon will he appear in great glory and majesty, to the confusion and ruin of every obstinate despiser, and to the unspeakable comfort of every cordial believer.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Sinners often presumptuously charge their own faults upon Jesus and his faithful servants: and many cement their friendship by contempt of him. How strong is the power of prejudice against him! It undervalues and derides him, because he will not gratify curiosity, or answer unreasonable demands: it forms the falsest accusations: it prefers every temporal interest, or even a base malefactor, lust, or devil, to him;—indignant that he should reign or have any honour in the world. Yea, often they, who seem convinced of his excellency, through importunity and carnal fear, or other similar temptations, violate all the bonds of truth, and rights of conscience and honour, to injure him. Many have their affections touched with the cruelty or love of his death, whose hearts are never renewed to believe in and love him. But O how astonishing the grace, the infinite grace, of our Lord Jesus, in thus suffering, dying, and praying for his enemies! How great is his power and sovereignty in triumphing over Satan on the cross, and forming one of his fellow-sufferers from a hardened thief into a strong believer, a bold confessor, a fervent supplicant, an immediate partaker of heaven; while the other dies contradicting and blaspheming!

Nazareth, which was [s] a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

20 [t] And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he [u] which should have redeemed Israel:* and beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 [x] Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre:

26 [a] Ought not Christ to have suffered these things,† and to enter into his glory?

27 And [b] beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.‡

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, [c] and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.§

31 And their eyes [d] were opened, and they knew him; and he ‖vanished* out of their sight.

32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven [e] gathered together, and them that were with them, 34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and [f] hath appeared to Simon.

35 [g] And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 ¶ [h] And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them,* and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

37 [i] But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, [k] Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

39 [l] Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit† hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet.

41 And while they yet believed not for joy,‡ and wondered, he said unto them, [m] Have ye here any meat?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honey-comb.

43 And he took it, and did eat before them.

44 And he said unto them, [n] These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.§

45 Then [o] opened ‖ he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures,

46 And said unto them, [p] Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day;

47 [q] And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name [r] among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 [s] And ye are witnesses of these things.

49 ¶ And, behold, I send [t] the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

50 ¶ And he led them out as far [u] as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and [x] blessed them.

51 And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he [y] was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

52 And they worshipped him,* and returned to Jerusalem with [z] great joy;

53 And were continually in the temple,† praising and blessing God. Amen.

Reflections upon Chap. XXIV.—How certain and sweet is the news of our Saviour's resurrection! Yea, often he surprises the most unlikely and unworthy with such discoveries of himself as they are apt to think too great or too good to be true. They who seek him early find him quickly: and they who talk of him have their eyes enlightened and hearts warmed by his presence. How seasonable are his visits! and what light his explications cast on the scriptures, which relate to his sufferings or glory! And if men insist upon, and plead for the continuance of his presence, they shall receive still further information, which will render them ready and desirous to communicate to others the mercies they have been made to partake of. But, alas, wonderful is the remaining stupidity and groundless fears of many, who are really gracious in heart! And great is the folly of that unbelief which contends against the fullest evidence, and against our own best interests. And it is very unchristian, and unlike Christ, to eat our meals without asking God's blessing on them, or returning him thanks for them, or without attempting to hold fellowship with Jesus in them. Astonishingly great is our Redeemer, in whom all the oracles of God are yea and amen, to his glory. Endearing is his love that blesses his people, notwithstanding their manifold infirmities, and gives them his Spirit to qualify them for every trial or service to which he calls them. In abundant grace he began his work of pardon and conversion upon them who had just imbrued their hands in his blood. Delightful was his departure, blessing his disciples; and exalted and glorious is his dignity in heaven. O that my heart and eye, my faith and hope, could closely follow him, looking after him, adoring him, blessing God for him, depending on him for all necessary blessings, and longing to be with him; that when he appears the second time without sin, it may be unto my salvation.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LUKE.

There can be no doubt that Luke was that "beloved physician" who forsook a respected and lucrative profession to become the companion of Paul in persecution and poverty (Col. 4. 14. 2 Tim. 4. 11. Philem. 24.). The prescription which Paul gives to Timothy (1 Tim. 5. 23.), for his health's sake, was most probably suggested by Luke: the Spirit of God thereby honouring the medical profession in the person of a godly physician. By some he is supposed to have been the unnamed disciple that accompanied Cleophas to Emmaus (chap. 24. 13, 18.), and that, from modesty, he has suppressed his own name, as he has also done in the Acts of the Apostles, which internal evidence and history concur in ascribing to him. But whether he accompanied Cleophas or not, is a matter alike uncertain and unimportant.

The authenticity of Luke's gospel is evidenced even by those called apostolic fathers; and its special value consists in the amount of events and discourses which he minutely records, and which are not contained in the other evangelists, as may be seen by reference to the introductory observations.—Ed.

THE GOSPEL

SAINT JOHN.

John, the writer of this gospel, and of three short epistles, was originally a fisherman; who, being called to be one of Christ's disciples, became his peculiar favourite. Living long after the other apostles, when the church was first plagued with the denial of our Saviour's essential Deity, he aims more expressly to establish that fundamental article of the Christian religion, and to manifest the inexcusableness of the Jews in rejecting him. What he relates in his gospel is generally new, and related by none of the other evangelists: viz., John Baptist's directing his disciples to Christ; chap. i.: Christ turning water into wine; purging the temple of fraudulent merchants; ii: healing the nobleman's son; iv: and the infirm man at the pool of Bethesda; v: the blind man at the pool of Siloam; ix: and his raising Lazarus from the dead; xi. But he especially sets before us his divine discourses—with Nicodemus, touching the new birth; iii.: with the Samaritan woman, and his disciples; iv.: with the Pharisees, concerning his equality with the Father in Godhead, working, and worship; v. 18, 21, 23: with the Capernaumites, concerning himself as the bread of life; vi.: with the Jews, touching his power over the sabbath-day, and to save sinners; vii.: and his being the Light of the world, the Son of the Father, and teacher of that truth which alone could render them free from the bondage of Satan, sin, and death; viii.: and the chief and divine Shepherd of God's chosen people; x.: and with his disciples, for their direction and comfort, at his last supper; xiii—xvi.: and his prayer to his Father; xvii., &c.

According to all antiquity this gospel was written after the other three, and several years after the war with the Romans, that had terminated in the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jews. It is remarkable that he alone records the name of the disciple who smote Malchus with the sword; for Peter was now beyond the reach of his enemies, and that as Lazarus had, most probably, now also returned to his rest; he alone records his resurrection, which the others had omitted for fear of incensing the Jews, who had purposed to put him to death. It is also remarkable that the other evangelists record our Lord's predictions, and that John omits them; most likely because most, if not all of them had been already fulfilled; for Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus; and John was not banished to Patmos till the 15th of Domitian his successor, A. D. 95, and was recalled from exile upon the accession of Nerva, A. D. 96, when he returned to Ephesus, where he wrote his gospel, and epistles, and survived till the 3d year of the emperor Trajan, when he died in the 100th of his age.—Ed.]

IN the beginning* was the Word,† and the Word was with God,‡ and the Word was God.§

2 The same was in the beginning with God.

3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.

4 In him was life; and the life was the light of men.

5 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

6 ¶ There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

8 He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

9 That was the true Light, which lighteth* every man that cometh into the world.

10 He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He came unto his own,† and his own received him not.

12 But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:

13 Which were born, not of blood,‡ nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

14 ¶ And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth.

* In the beginning.—This phrase is taken from the first verse of Genesis, and signifies, at the creation of all things.—Ed.

† The Word.—Not the word spoken or written, for (ver. 14) this WORD became flesh. See 1 John 1. 1, 2. & 5. 7. Rev. 1. 2. 9. & 19. 11, 16. That it is spoken of Christ is farther evident from Luke 1. 2. Acts 20. 32. Heb. 4. 12. 2 Pet. 3. 5.—Ed.

‡ As the WORD was with GOD, the term "God" must here signify God the Father.—Ed.

§ The Word was God.—He was not made God, as he was made flesh (ver. 14), but was essentially, and eternally God.—Not one God with another God; but one person with another person in one Godhead, or communion of divine and uncreated attributes.—Ed.

* Which lighteth—which shines upon, and so renders visible, the moral good or evil of every man. Luke 11. 36.—Ed.

† His own.—The Jews, "his kinsmen according to the flesh," Rom. 9. 5.—Ed.

‡ "Not of bloods."—Neither by right of natural descent from Abraham, nor any of the tribes.—Nor of the will of the flesh—which is simply to seek present pleasure, and escape present pain—as is manifest in all the lower and mere animal natures.—Nor of the will of man—who, being compounded of flesh and spirit, can, under the influence of natural intellect, make many sacrifices of present pleasure, and endure many pains, from a calculating regard to futurity.—But of God—who, by his Holy Spirit, can alone renew man "after the image of him that created him." Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10.—Ed.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—CHAP. I. Ver. 1—5. From all eternity the Son of God, the great Speaker for and to men, the medium of divine manifestations to us, and to whom all the scripture gives testimony, who may therefore properly be called the Word, existed a distinct person, equal to, and the express image of, his divine Father, and the same in substance with him, necessarily possessed of every excellency of Godhead; and by him were all creatures, from the highest to the lowest, formed of nothing in the beginning of time. From that life necessarily existent in him, proceeded all kinds and degrees of life, knowledge, and comfort, found among men. And yet, though he, in the dictates of natural conscience and of revelation, manifests himself to men, such is the sinful ignorance and error of their minds, the bias of their will and affections, and corruption of their practice, that they do not naturally understand, but shut their eyes against, hate, and oppose these discoveries. 6—8. John the Baptist was eminently qualified, and divinely appointed, as the forerunner of his personal appearance, to point him forth as the glorious Sun of Righteousness, rising among men, that persons of all sorts, Jews and Gentiles, might believe on him for life and salvation. 9—13. And indeed he, in opposition to the false lights of heathen philosophy, the corrupted and faint typical light of the Jews, and in distinction from John the Baptist and the prophets and apostles, is the original fountain of light, from which all natural and divine knowledge is communicated to men in every period of time. By his upholding and governing providence, and by his dispensations of light and grace, he has all along been present in the world, which he created; and yet neither his manifestations of himself, in providence or revelation, have been duly discerned or improved: and when, in the fulness of time, he manifested himself in human nature, preaching the gospel, and working miracles among the Jews his peculiar people, most of them wilfully rejected him, and refused to acknowledge him as their Creator and Saviour. But to all such, whether Jews or Gentiles, as heartily received him by faith, as their Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, he bestowed the dignified right and privilege of being the real children of God;—all of whom, without any influence of natural descent, ceremonial law, or corrupt free will, have a supernatural habit or principle of grace divinely implanted in them, disposing them to every good word and work. 14, 16—18. And in order to effect 15 ¶ John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me; for he was before me.

16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.*

17 For the law† was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No man hath seen God at any time;‡ the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.§

19 ¶ And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not.‖ Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.*

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest† thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one among you whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 ¶ The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb‡ of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!§

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, [a] the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record [b] that this is the Son of God.

35 ¶ Again, the next day after, John stood, [c] and two of his disciples;

36 And, looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, [d] Behold the Lamb of God!

37 [e] And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, [f] What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where * dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, [g] Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was †about the tenth‡ hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was [h] Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the [i] Messias, which is, being interpreted, [k] the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, [l] A stone.

43 ¶ The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and [m] findeth Philip, and saith unto him, [n] Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of [o] Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael,§ and saith unto him, We have found him of whom [p] Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, [q] Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And [r] Nathanael said unto him, [s] Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?‖ Philip saith unto him, [t] Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold [u] an Israelite indeed,* in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, [x] thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.

* Grace for grace.—There being a fulness of grace in Christ (ver. 14), believers receive a measure of every form of grace in him. It may be illustrated by a garden, in which there are many plants, and a barren waste, into which there is made out of it a complete transplantation, so that they, at last, answer to each other—plant for plant.—Ed.

† The law—that condemns in the moral, and merely typifies in the ceremonial.—Grace—that pardons and saves.—Truth—that realises the types or shadows.—Ed.

‡ God being infinite in being and perfections, can never be perfectly seen by any finite creature. For though the Shechinah, or other visible manifestation of his presence, has been, or may be seen, still that manifestation is not God.—Ed.

§ Declared him.—Educed him, brought him out to the eye of the spirit in all his perfections, purposes, promises, and works of grace, providence, and final judgment.—Ed.

‖ John replies in the sense intended by the questioner, and denies that he is Elias in resurrection flesh. When our Lord affirms that John was Elias (Mat. 11. 14), he speaks in the sense of Malachi (4. 5), of his being in the "spirit and power of Elias"—"that prophet" foretold by Moses (Deut. 18. 15). It cannot be translated "a prophet," for John was even more than a prophet. Mat. 11. 11.—Ed.

* Pharisees—who, believing the resurrection, were the only persons disposed to ask the question.—Ed.

† The Jews were accustomed to baptize heathen proselytes, but never without an order from the Sanhedrim, or great civil and ecclesiastical council, or before three magistrates, or doctors of the law; they, therefore, very naturally, feel jealous of John, who not only baptized without their authority, but baptized Jews themselves, contrary to the practice of the Pharisees.—Ed.

‡ The lamb was the first sacrifice on record (Gen. 4. 4); a lamb was also the daily sacrifice in the temple.—It, therefore, furnished an appropriate title for him who came "to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9. 26.—Ed.

§ Taketh away the sin of the world.—Rather, "who is taking away," by first bearing our sins in his own body," and finally to the cross (1 Pet. 2. 24), whereby he finished the transgression, made an end of sins, and brought in everlasting righteousness." (Dan. 9. 24). "The world" of Jew and Gentile, wherein the sacrifice of Christ differed from those of the law, which were appointed exclusively for the Jews.—Ed.

these grand designs of our redemption, the eternal Son of God assumed our nature, in its debased appearances, into a personal union with himself; and therein, in all his fulness of Godhead, for a season dwelt among us men, particularly us disciples, as JEHOVAH did in the cloud of glory, which covered the mercy-seat, full of infinite grace and kindness to men, and of all necessary blessings, to be freely communicated to them. All the laws, promises, types, and prophecies, were fulfilled in him; and we, in his doctrine, miracles, transfiguration, resurrection and ascension, by faith steadfastly considered and admired, these glorious perfections, becoming him as one with, and in an inconceivable and unparalleled manner begotten by, his eternal Father: and out of his fulness of divine perfections, and communicative blessings, who is infinitely preferable to John the Baptist, all of us believers, great and small, have, do, and shall receive all spiritual blessings, multiplied one upon another, according to our capacities and wants, and answerable, in nature and kind, to the grace which is in him.—Far superior to Moses, who delivered the laws of God to the Jews in a manner suited to their circumstances, in a ministration of condemnation, and in obscure types, which could not make the worshippers perfect, Jesus has brought in the richest and plainest discoveries of God's love and grace, in which all the ancient types and predictions have their full accomplishment. And being himself the beloved and only begotten Son of God, intimately acquainted with all his excellencies and purposes of grace, he alone was fit for this work, and he hath now manifested these things to men, in such a manner as no other was able to do.

AND the third day* there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:

2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And when they wanted wine,† the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman,‡ what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler of the feast§ had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was, (but the servants which drew the water knew,) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 [a]This beginning of miracles‖ did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.*

12 ¶ After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13 ¶ And the Jews' passover was at hand; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen,† and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all‡ out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence: make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, What sign showest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six§ years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.‖

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

23 ¶ Now, when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast-day, many [b]believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men,

25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

* The third day from that on which Jesus had departed from Bethany "beyond Jordan," not Bethany near Jerusalem—(so called according to high authority of MSS.)—but called Bathabara, ch. 1. 28, of the received text. There is no difficulty in concluding that both names may have been given to the same town.—Ed.

† The marriage-feast lasted seven days; and this want, most probably, occurred at an advanced period of the feast; or from the large number of disciples that accompanied Jesus.—Ed.

‡ Woman, was no name of disrespect, but a name of truth, without flattery.—What have I to do with thee, in this matter?—leave it to me when "my hour is come"—when all their wine is so exhausted that there can be no question about the reality of my miraculous power.—Ed.

§ Ruler of the feast.—Some think the chief guest; others, the chief domestic, who, in either capacity, did not sit at table, but attended to the supply of the others. That an evidently poor family had not any chief domestic to preside, appears probable—the ruler was, therefore, a friend, as his familiarity with the bridegroom seems to imply—one part of whose duty was to taste the wine, and then send it to the guests.—Ed.

‖ It is not improbable that the only wine miraculously produced was the quantity drawn, the contents of the vessels still remaining water—thereby rendering the miracle so much the more palpable.—Ed.

* His disciples believed on him—not merely as a reforming teacher, such as John had been, but as a worker of miracles, placing him far above John. ch. 10. 41.—Ed.

† According to Josephus, there were ordinarily at the passover, 256,500 sacrificed victims—so that the market must have been very great; and as the priests sold licenses to the venders, this profanation must have been a large source of their revenue.—Ed.

‡ He drove them all—that is, the dealers, whom he expelled merely by authoritative injunction (ver. 16), the cattle only he would drive with the scourge. These dealers being very unpopular, because of their extortions, and conscious that they were profaning the temple and violating the law, and seeing Jesus surrounded by so many zealous followers, yield to an authority which otherwise their avarice and self-interest would have prompted them to resist. It is, moreover, not improbable that there was something so commanding in our Lord's manner, and in his character for working miracles—which must, by this time, have become public—that the most reluctant felt compelled to yield implicit obedience.—Note. It is matter of question whether our Lord cleansed the temple once or twice. Matthew (21. 12) and Mark (11. 15) certainly record such a cleansing near the end of his ministry; which same act some think John has also recorded, without reference to order of time. The narratives, however, are accompanied by such notes of difference, as seem clearly to indicate two distinct cleansings, the one at the opening, the other at the close, of our Lord's ministry. See note on ver. 20.—Ed.

§ The rebuilding of this temple was commenced by Herod the Great, sixteen years before our Lord's birth. He began to preach the kingdom of God in his thirtieth year, which gives the exact amount, forty-six; and fixes this cleansing of the temple at the beginning, as that of Matthew and Mark was certainly at the close of his ministry.—Ed.

‖ He had pointed to his body, laying the emphasis on the word this—intimating that therein, as in a temple, "dwelt the fulness of the Godhead."—Ed.

b Mat. 13. 5, 6, 20, 21. ch. 6. 14. Acts 8. 13. Jam. 2. 19.

Reflections upon Chap. I.—Infinite and divine are the glories of our Mediator! He is the eternal God, equal with his Father. He is the Creator of all things, and the original source of all light, life, and honour, in the world.—Marvellous is his person as God-man, and full of grace and truth for our supply! His divine nature puts the most wonderful dignity upon his condescension, and on his offering himself a sacrifice to expiate our sins. And his character and mission are gloriously attested by apostles, by John the Baptist, and by his Father and blessed Spirit. Alas, that any, especially such as enjoy his oracles and favours, should remain ignorant or obstinate rejecters of him! But happy are they whom he apprehends by his grace, adopts into his family, conforms unto his image, supplies with his light and life, humbles by his influence, informs by his Spirit, instructs by his visits, and honours in his service. And the more honour God puts upon men, the more humble they ought to be. The more they know of Christ and his work, the more they ought to extol him, that others, particularly their relations, may seek and follow him. It is habitual, not transient, fellowship with him that will supply the need, and satisfy the desires, of real believers. Acquaintance with him is the best answer to all prejudices and objections against him. They who find him cannot but exult in their acquisition. And great is the honour to have his attestation of our secret devotion and universal integrity.—Our views of his glory are but beginning, and will be for ever on the advance. And angels and men will eternally behold, and increasingly admire and serve him, in his kingdom above.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—Happy are those weddings which are directed by Christ's law, graced with his presence, and ratified by his blessing! With innocent pleasures friends may feast together, if they act as under his eye. Religion requires us not to be unsocial, but to rejoice with them that rejoice. In the very height of earthly comforts there is indeed something still wanting. But there are no wants in which Christ cannot supply us. And if we wish to receive his blessings, we must not prescribe to him, but follow his directions. Nor need we be discouraged by rebukes and delays: his mercies come soon enough, if they come large and sweet in the end. And the more we see of his glory, the more firmly shall we believe in him, and desire to be with him. Jesus makes but a short stay where he is signally contemned. And the most heaven-daring corruptions are introduced into churches by the love of filthy lucre. But wisely Jesus manifests his glory, vindicates the honour, and maintains the purity, of divine ordinances, without injuring civil property.—He knows what is in man, and can overawe the spirits of his most powerful and presumptuous enemies. And he had a sovereign power over his own natural life, as God equal with his Father. Alas, how ill understood, much hated, or but feignedly believed, are his words of truth!

CHAPTER III.

(1) Jesus teaches Nicodemus the necessity of being born again: 1—13. (2) Of faith in his sacrifice: 14, 15. (3) God's love to the world: 16, 17. (4) Unbelief the ground of condemnation: 18—22. (5) The witness of John: 23—36.

A. M. cir. 4031.
A. D. cir. 30.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:

2 The same came to Jesus by night,* and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit,† he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born [a] again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound‡ thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

* This case of Nicodemus is recorded chiefly for the exposition of the new birth from above; but also for the encouragement of timid believers, who, in fear of men's ridicule or displeasure, have not obtained full courage to follow conscience, and openly avow their profession of truth and godliness. But "him that was weak in the faith" Christ received without reproach, and treated with tenderness; let "them that are strong," "go and do so likewise."—Ed.

† Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit.—If this be spoken of what Bloomfield, Valpy, and others, call "baptismal regeneration," then what availed the promise to the penitent thief? and what is the condition of myriads of the children of believers dying in infancy, who were never baptized? Should not the passage rather be translated, "Except a man be born of water, even of the Spirit," of which water was the scriptural emblem? (See Is. 44. 3. Ezek. 36. 25—27.) And this translation is in perfect accordance with that of many passages exactly similar in construction,—such as 1 Cor. 15. 24. 2 Cor. 1. 3. Eph. 5. 5. Tit. 2. 13. John 4. 9. See Middleton on Gr. Art. c. 2 pp. 83, 84. & c. 3. p. 93. This translation seems absolutely confirmed by our Lord's immediate reference of this new birth (see ver. 6), not to water at all, but entirely to the Spirit. See Mat. 3. 11, where "water" and "fire," as here "water" and "Spirit," denote one thing.—Ed.

a Or, from above. 1 Cor. 2. 11. Zech. 8. 6. ver. 3.

‡ Even as the natural man hears the sound of the wind, so the man who is "born again" hears the word of the Spirit. 1 John 5. 6, 9.—Ed.

A. M. cir. 4034.
A. D. cir. 30.

12 If I have told you earthly things,* and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?†

13 And no man hath ascended‡ up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

14 ¶ And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up;

15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 ¶ For God so loved§ the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn‖ the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 ¶ [b] He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 [c] And this is the condemnation,* that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be † reproved.

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 ¶ After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the [d] land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and [e] baptized.

23 ¶ And John also was baptizing in Ænon,‡ near to [f] Salim, because there was much water§ there; and [g] they came, and were baptized:

24 [h] For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 ¶ Then there arose a question between

Corrupt hearts little relish reforming authority. Even believers slowly comprehend the nature of Christ's kingdom. And sometimes it is not till long after they are heard, that divine truths are remembered, understood, and believed. There is great need to avoid trusting in men, and to be careful whom we take for our friends. And studiously should we beware of hypocrisy, as Jesus hath an exact knowledge of our hearts.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 3, 5, 6, 8. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you, that be a man's moral attainments, religious advantages, or external privileges, what they will, he can by no means be a true member of the gospel church, or admitted into the heavenly state, except his heart and life be thoroughly changed in their principles, courses, and ends, and there be a new vital principle of holiness formed in him by the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost. Whoever is born of sinful parents, though it were ever so often, must be still sinful, and so unfit for fellowship with God. But whoever has a new spiritual habit, or principle of grace and holiness, implanted by the Holy Ghost, in all the powers of his soul, and acts accordingly, is made meet for the enjoyments and duties of the gospel state, and for the inheritance of the saints in light.—Nor is it any wonder that you cannot conceive how the Holy Ghost enlightens, quickens, and sanctifies, the souls of men, when you cannot even account for the causes and motions of the wind. 11—13. My forerunner and the prophets, and especially I, my Father, and the blessed Spirit, speak and attest what we understand and know to be certainly true; but, through blindness and prejudice, ye Jews neither understand, believe, nor embrace our doctrine. If therefore you do not understand nor believe the nature or necessity of that work of grace, which must be experienced on earth in order to salvation, when thus familiarly illustrated to you from earthly similitudes, how could you understand or believe my declarations of the more sublime mysteries of the gospel, relative to the dignity of my person and office, the design of my works, the spiritual nature of my kingdom, and the blessedness of the future state—which no mere man can comprehend, or fully declare to others, but only the Messiah who came from heaven, and who even now is still there, in respect of his divine nature? 14—17. And yet that divine person, the Messiah, must be put to an ignominious death, in order to his bringing about the salvation of sinners: for as Moses lifted up the brazen serpent on a pole in the wilderness, as God's ordinance for effectually healing all the Israelites, who had been mortally bitten by the fiery serpents, and looked on it for a cure; so the Messiah, who appears in the likeness of sinful flesh, though holy, harmless, and undefiled, must be lifted up on the cross, and afterwards exalted in heaven, and exhibited as God's ordinance in the gospel, for sinners to look to, by faith, for salvation; that every one, of whatever rank, degree, or nation he be, who, under an affecting sense of his own sinfulness and obnoxiousness to divine wrath, shall, according to God's appointment, look to, and trust in, him for salvation, may be delivered from all sin and misery, and be made a partaker of grace here, and glory hereafter, however weak his faith be, or great or many his sins have been. For God, who delights in mercy, looking with compassion on the sinful and miserable state of mankind, conceived such an amazing and unparalleled design of mercy and love towards multitudes of them, both Jews, and especially Gentiles, that he freely gave his only begotten to be their Mediator and atoning sacrifice, that whosoever receives him as God's free gift offered in the gospel, and depends on him for salvation, might not perish in his sins, however great or many, but obtain an everlasting life of holiness and happiness. For God sent not his Son into the world to pass and to execute a sentence of condemnation upon all others beside you Jews, as many of you think, but that persons of all nations may be effectually saved from sin and misery, and blessed with everlasting holiness and happiness. 18—21. And every one, Jew or Gentile, who believes on Christ as freely offered in the gospel, is freed from the condemning sentence of God's law: but whosoever rejects or neglects him, remains under the curse: yea, his guilt is increased, and his sentence of condemnation fixed and extended, through his rejecting the only Saviour and salvation by unbelief. And this will peculiarly aggravate the sin and misery of many, that, when blessed with the clearest light of the glorious gospel, they, both Jews and

CHAPTER IV.

(1) Jesus converses with a woman of Samaria, at which his disciples wonder: 1—30. (2) His meat and drink to do his Father's will: 31—38. (3) Many Samaritans believe on him: 39—42. (4) He removes into Galilee, and heals a ruler's son at Capernaum: 43—54.

A. M. cir. 4034.
A. D. cir. 30.

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples,)

3 He left Judea,[*] and departed again into Galilee.

4 And he must needs go through Samaria.[†]

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well; and it was about the sixth hour.[‡]

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? (for the Jews have no dealings[§] with the Samaritans.)

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God,[‖] and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw[*] with, and the well is deep:[†] from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob,

* He left Judea—that he might not give any unnecessary offence, even to the Pharisees.—Ed.

† The place in Judea where our Lord had sojourned, is not mentioned: but the chief road from Judea to Galilee passed through Samaria. The necessity, however, may have been as much spiritual as geographical—the necessity of doing his Father's work, by beginning to gather in his lost sheep, in the neglected region of Samaria.—Ed.

‡ The sixth hour.—The Europeans twelve o'clock or noon.—Ed.

§ No dealings.—No friendly intercourse of hospitality, such as implied mutual obligation. The ordinary dealings of buying and selling were not interrupted. See ver. 8.—Ed.

‖ The gift of God.—Not one form of his gifts, but his gift in all forms.—1. His Son (John 3. 16. 2 Cor. 9. 15. 2. The gift of the Spirit (John 14. 16). 3. Of pardon (Rom. 5. 16). 4. Of righteousness (Rom. 5. 17). 5. Eternal life (Rom. 6. 23. &c). Chiefly, however, it implies the gift of the Spirit through the word of truth—(see ver. 14)—the "living water" from Christ the Rock. 1 Cor. 10. 4.—Ed.

* Travellers in the East frequently carry a leathern bucket, with which they draw from public wells by means of the rope and wheel.—Ed.

† Maundrell estimates the depth of the well called Jacob's, at thirty-five yards, with five yards depth of water in the bottom. It is cut in the solid rock—what kind is not mentioned—and if it really be the well which Jacob dug, which can scarcely be doubted, it affords an interesting view of the engineering skill, perseverance, and expenditure, of those ancient times.—Ed.

Gentiles, through attachment to their own corrupt courses, will prefer their vain traditions, superstitious and idolatrous notions and worship, to it. For every one that is resolved to adhere to his sins, heartily hates the truths of divine revelation, which oppose and condemn them, stifles convictions, and shuns the light of that knowledge which presents his darling corruptions in their shameful, hideous, and dangerous forms: but an upright saint, who practises whatever divine truths he knows, is sincerely willing to be tried to the utmost, and to know the whole of the divine will, that his whole conduct, being regulated thereby, may evidently appear the effect of God's regenerating power, and the fruit of vital union and communion with him, and may tend to his glory. 27—30. Both Jesus and myself have our whole commission and success from God; nor can any receive our plain instructions without being enlightened and enabled by God. I appeal to you, that I openly declared I was not the Christ, but only his forerunner, to prepare the nation for the manifestation of himself. As his friend, I have laboured to gain sinners to him, the glorious Bridegroom of his church; and I exceedingly rejoice to hear and see them following after, and cleaving to him, whose property they are. For it is necessary that the manifestations of his glory, and the number of his disciples, should so continue and increase, that there will be no more use for me as his forerunner. 31—34. I, and every one of the ancient prophets, are but earthly in our origin and frame, and cannot of ourselves speak of divine things but in a weak, gross, and earthly manner: but he, being the Lord from heaven, and endowed with the Holy Ghost above measure, understands the whole mind of God, and speaks of heavenly things, as one fully acquainted with them. And yet, alas, how few heartily believe and receive his instructions! but every one who believes them, solemnly acknowledges him to be the Messiah, in whose person and work all the promises of God are, or will certainly be, fulfilled to the praise of his glory. 35, 36. Nay, such is the superlative love of the Father to this his only begotten Son, who freely undertook to be our Mediator, that he has committed to his management all things relating to the kingdoms of providence, grace, and glory, that he may judge and subdue his enemies, and distribute blessings among his people. Whosoever therefore receives his doctrine, and believes on him as the Son of God and Saviour of sinners, hath already in himself the beginnings, securities, and foretastes of eternal life, which shall certainly issue in the complete enjoyment of it; and whosoever wilfully and finally rejects him, lies under the most awfully righteous indignation of God, which shall certainly be executed upon him to the uttermost, and for ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—The miracles of Christ were manifestly divine, and his doctrines plain and important. He was ready to cure the most inexcusable ignorance, and to instruct by night such as were ashamed to own him by day. Infinitely important is the doctrine and experience of the Spirit's gracious implantation of new habits or principles of holiness in our nature, and infallibly damning is the want of it! Yet, alas, how many ministers and others are totally ignorant of it, and prejudiced against it! And because their carnal mind cannot comprehend how or why the Spirit works on the heart; how the Saviour can be at once God and man, in heaven and on earth; or how his being crucified and offered in the gospel, and received by faith, heals and saves sinners; they contemn and deny the same! But amazing is the love of God in setting up his only begotten Son as his ordinance for the salvation of sinners, even the chief, Gentiles as well as Jews. And dreadfully criminal and dangerous is that unbelief which rejects the testimony and offer of God; which hates his glory, and detests his truth, as a disturber of indwelling lusts. Nothing can save the man who perseveres in his unbelief. And nothing can damn the soul which by faith credits God's testimony concerning Christ, and receives him as a divine and well-qualified Saviour. It is absurd for professors to be more concerned about external performances of religion, than about the real work of grace in their heart. And it is honourable for all, and especially ministers, to view all their gifts and graces as coming from God, and to be content to be debased to the very lowest that Jesus Christ may be exalted, answerably to his Father's love to him, and the authority which he hath given him.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 10, 14. Christ himself, in all his offices, work, and fulness, is God's gift granted freely to sinners; and the water which he gives is the Holy which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water [a] shall thirst again:

14 [b] But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, [c] Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five [e] husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.[†]

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art [d] a prophet.

20 [e] Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in [f] Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, [g] when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 [h] Ye worship ye know not what: we [i] know what we worship; for salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the [k] true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit[‡] and in truth:[§] for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 [l] God is a Spirit:[‖] and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that [m] Messias cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, [n] I that speak unto thee am he.

27 ¶ [o] And upon this came his disciples, and [p] marvelled that he talked with the woman:[*] yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

28 [q] The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men,

29 [r] Come, see a man which told me all[†] things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 [s] Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 ¶ In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, [t] I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 [u] Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him aught to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, [x] My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; [y] for they are white already to harvest.

36 [z] And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: [a] that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 [b] I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: [c] other men laboured, and [d] ye are entered into their labours.

39 ¶ [e] And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So [f] when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days.

41 [g] And many more believed because of his own word;

42 And said unto the woman, [h] Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that [i] this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 ¶ [k] Now, after two days he departed thence, [l] and went into Galilee:

44 For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.*

45 [m] Then, when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen [n] all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again into [o] Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain [p] nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and [q] besought him that he would come down and heal his son; for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, [r] Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, [s] come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, [t] Go thy way; thy Ghost, in his person, operation, graces, and comforts, which solidly satisfies the soul, weans it from the cares of this world, prevents its perdition, and gradually prepares for, and certainly issues in, the eternal and inexpressible holiness and happiness of the heavenly state. 35—38. The coming of yonder crowds of Samaritans to hear and believe on me, betokens the near approach of the gospel dispensation, in which multitudes, both Jews and Gentiles, shall be converted to me;—as instruments in which ye shall be honourably owned and supported, and at last amply rewarded, in their and your own eternal salvation;—and shall, together with John Baptist and the ancient prophets, who sowed the good seed of the word, rejoice in your success:—and being sent by me to preach the gospel son liveth. And the man [u] believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, [x] Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in the which Jesus [y] said unto him, Thy son liveth: [z] and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second* miracle that Jesus did when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an angel§ went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: [b] whosoever then first after the troubling of the water stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

* Or, from the multitude that was.

† Sin no more.—Our Lord seems, in this admonition, to refer to some youthful sins of this old man, by which his disease had been induced; and, as the man was evidently friendless (ver. 7), and most probably a stranger—so that our Lord could know nothing of his history—in this reference he gives him an evidence of supernatural knowledge as well as power.—Note. As "the wages of sin is death," so are diseases the earnest of the payment. That sometimes they are punishments, is obvious to the senses, as in the case of intemperance; at other times they are admonitions to watch, pray, and be ready; at other times they are exercises of faith, producing more fruitfulness in the sufferers; and other times they are examples of patience, whereby God is glorified, his children and saints strengthened, and sinners induced to pray that they might "die the death of the righteous."—Ed.

8 Jesus saith unto him, [c] Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And [d] immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶ The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day; [e] it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, [*] a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more,† lest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and [f] told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day.

17 ¶ But Jesus answered them, [g] My Father worketh hitherto,‡ and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews [h] sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father,§ [i] making himself equal with God.

19 ¶ Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself,‖ but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth him all things that himself doeth: and he will show him greater works* than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

in all the world, and having the advantage of all my labours, as also that of the preceding prophets, ye shall perfect that blessed work, which we only began, in the conversion and eternal salvation of multitudes.

Reflections upon Chap. IV.—Those who hate the gospel will always be exasperated at its success. And if duty do not require us to stand, it is best to avoid their resentment by flight. Alas, how our sins debased our Redeemer, hunted him to and fro as a vagabond, fatigued him with travel, pinched him with hunger and thirst, exposed him to insult, and the want even of a draught of water! But cheerfully he laboured in seeking and saving that which was lost. Freely was he given by God. Abundant was his fulness of the Spirit, of grace, and every other permanent blessing: and he is earnestly intent on the free bestowal of them! And yet how are his blessings refused, even by such as infinitely need them, and for whom they are prepared! But so pungent are his convictions, so plain his instructions, so spiritual his exhibitions of God and his worship, so attracting his discoveries of himself and his Spirit, that even a heart hardened in whoredom and prejudice could not withstand them. And yet, alas, how often is the believer's sensible fellowship with Christ interrupted when at the very sweetest! A remarkable renovation of heart produces a deep concern for the salvation of others. No shame, no pains, are counted too much to win them to Christ. Perpetual and powerful are the labours of a Saviour; and inexpressible his delight in saving sinners, particularly the Gentiles. Happy is it when the labours of one generation of ministers prepare remarkable fruitfulness for their successors. And greatly efficacious is the gospel when preached and heard as indeed the word of Christ. It often does most good where it could have been least expected; and makes the bitterest enemies cordially to apply Jesus as their own Saviour. But aggravated is their wickedness who misimprove the best opportunities. Happy are those troubles which effectually direct sinners to him and his salvation; and when staggerings of heart issue in the firmness of faith. Happy is it when heads of families, great and small, are given to fervent prayer, and deeply concerned for the real and eternal life of children and servants; and when new favours from Christ, and a comparison of spiritual experiences, confirm men's faith; and especially when whole families are converted by his grace!

Chap. V.—Ver. 17—23. As my Father, who instituted the sabbath, continually performs his providential works on that as well as on other days, so I, who am his only begotten Son, partaking of the same nature and perfections, must be allowed to work along with him, as is meet.—My union with him, in nature, operation, and design, is such, that I can do nothing separately from him, but do always act in the same work, and in the same manner, and with the same divine power and authority, as he does. And such is our union, will, and affection, that nothing of his counsels or operations is ever hid from me: yea, in co-operation with him, I will perform works still greater than the healing a lame man, that, if you will continue obstinate in your unbelief, ye may at least be astonished and confounded thereat. And as he at pleasure can restore the dead to life, so I, with equal 22 For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father.* He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

* This perfect equality, nay identity, of "honour" between the Father and the Son not only proves the Godhead of the Son, but, from the strong declaration of our Lord, both positively and negatively expressed, may be gathered the heinousness of the infidelity that denies his Godhead, involving practical atheism, inasmuch as it makes the Father a liar in the testimony he has so abundantly and frequently given to his Son. 1 John 5. 10. —Ed.

† It is evident, since "the hour now is," that "the dead" to whom our Lord here refers are "the dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2. 1.) whom he "quickens" into the life of faith by his word and Spirit.—Ed.

† That the whole people of the Jews heard the "voice" of God at Sinai—that they saw his "shape," rather the visible representation of his presence, in the Shechinah, is recorded by Moses—and also that many of them heard the voice of God at our Lord's baptism, is declared by Matthew.—May not the apparent contradiction, however, be fully removed by taking the word "heard," as it often is, to mean hearing, "in attending, believing, and obeying." See Ex. 6. 12. Deut. 30. 17. Is. 30. 9. & 55. 3. Jer. 11. 10. Ezek. 3. 27. & 33. 31. Mat. 10. 14. & 18. 17. John 9. 27. Luke 18. 21. 1 Cor. 14. 21. Gal. 4. 21. Rev. 1. 3. 36 ¶ But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

37 And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. [o] Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.†

38 And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

power and sovereignty, will not only restore to natural life whoever I please, but quicken them who are dead in trespasses and sins, and bestow upon them eternal life. For the Father has not reserved for himself, nor doth he exercise immediately by himself, the management of the present concerns of providence, or the future judgment of the world, but has intrusted the same to his incarnate Son; that, instead of being offended at his deep humiliation, men might be induced, by his bearing and executing this high commission, to pay the same religious worship and obedience to him as they are obliged to pay to the Father himself: and whoever neglects to honour him in this manner, is held a neglecter of the honour of the Father, who has authorized, and is represented by, him. 24—30. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you, that whosoever heartily receives my doctrine, relative to my person and office, and believes on my Father, who has constituted me Mediator, has a full title to, and the beginnings and earnests of, eternal life, and is completely translated from under the curse and condemnation of the law into a state of justification of life: and that the time is at hand, when not only some, corporally dead, shall be restored to life by my word, but even they, who are dead in trespasses and sins, shall be regenerated, and quickened to the obedience of faith, and live for ever: for as the Father has life essentially and necessarily in himself, and communicates life to every living creature, so he has constituted me, his essentially living Son, a quickening Spirit, full of life in myself as Mediator, and authorized me to communicate it to others. Nor need you think it strange, that I say dead bodies and souls shall quickly be enlivened by my power; for, at the last day, the whole race of mankind shall by it be raised from the dead, and brought to my judgment-seat. The true saints, quickened by my Spirit dwelling in them, shall be adjudged to the full enjoyment of everlasting life; and they who died in their sins, raised by my power, shall receive a dreadful sentence of condemnation, to their utter and everlasting ruin.—But in all these things I neither do, nor can do anything separately from my Father; for in all my administrations I proceed as one perfectly acquainted with his counsels, and as his Messiah, instructed by him; and my whole management must necessarily be perfectly right, because I therein neither aim at nor pursue any private will of my own, different from, or opposite to, the will of my Father, but exactly discharge the commission which he hath given me in sending me into the world. 31—39. But I do not rest the matter upon my own mere testimony, as if that alone were sufficient: I appeal to that solemn testimony which John bare concerning me, and which ye cannot object against, since ye acknowledged him an eminent prophet, submitted to his baptism, and, for a time, appeared extremely fond of his instructions, till he offended you by his sharp reproofs and his attestations of my Messiahship. I mention his testimony, not as if it could establish my divine or mediatorial character, but only that I may reason with you upon your own principles, and omit nothing which may tend to your conviction and salvation.—For the miraculous and gracious works which I have performed, or will perform by my own power, are so great and good, as plainly to manifest me the Son of God and the promised Messiah. And the Father himself, in a manner which none of your nation ever before heard or saw, has, by a voice from heaven, attested me as his beloved Son, in whom he is well pleased. But it is evident, by your continued rejection of me, that neither his immediate declaration, nor the words of his prophets, make any lasting impression on you.—As ye profess to read and study the books of the Old Testament, as containing the true doctrine of eternal life, and as a mean of securing your eternal happiness, I charge you still more earnestly and impartially to search them, and observe what they teach: for they, in their types, promises, and prophecies, and the Holy Ghost by them, concur to represent me as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. 40—47. But notwithstanding all this evidence, such is your pride, prejudice, carnality, and wilful obstinacy, that you will not apply to, nor trust in me for pardon, peace, life, and salvation, in whom alone they are to be found. I neither need, have, nor seek, human applause or external pomp and grandeur, but only aim at advancing the glory of God in the salvation of men. But I know that, notwithstanding all your high professions, ye are quite destitute of the love of God, and have the love of the world reigning in your heart. Hence, when I am come, authorized by Jehovah, and sufficiently attested to glorify him, to effect a spiritual salvation from sin and wrath, ye reject me, because I oppose your darling vices, and give you no ground to expect worldly riches, honour, power, or pleasures. But if any mere impostors should flatter you in your sins, and promise you temporal deliverances, wealth, and grandeur, ye will readily entertain and follow them, to your own destruction.—And, indeed, while your hearts are so full of carnal ambition of worldly honours and applause, and so regardless of the spiritual, substantial, and eternal honours which God alone bestows on his favourites, it is impossible that ye can believe on me, whose appearances are so mean, and doctrines so self-denying. But though I charge home your faults upon you for your conviction, I came not to spy out, aggravate, or accuse you of your crimes to God, but to be a merciful Saviour and Advocate. Nor need I turn your accuser, when Moses, by whose law ye expect to be saved, by his writings sufficiently indicts and condemns you for your unbelief and other wickedness: and had ye believed his declarations, ye could not but have believed me, as all the types in his law, and the prophecies recorded by him, evidently point to, and are fulfilled in me. But if ye will not be convinced by what he, for whom you profess so high a regard, hath said, it cannot be expected that ye will believe me, whom ye treat with contempt, and run down as an impostor.

AFTER these things [a]Jesus went over the [b]sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.*

2 [c]And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And [d]Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 [e]And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 ¶ [f]When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 (And this he said to [g]prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.)

7 Philip answered him, [h]Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, [i]Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him,

9 There is a lad here which hath five barley-loaves, and two small fishes: [k]but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, [l]Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 [m]And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had [n]given thanks,† he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

A. M. cir. 4036.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, [o]Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, [p]This is of a truth that Prophet that should come into the world.*

15 ¶ [q]When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain† himself alone.

16 [r]And when even‡ was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea,

17 And entered into a ship, and [s]went over the sea toward [t]Capernaum: and it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.‖

18 And [t]the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty [u]furlongs, they see Jesus [x]walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: [y]and they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then [z]they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people which stood* on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereunto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats† from [a]Tiberias nigh unto the place [b]where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not [c]there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to [d]Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—It is a great mercy that our world is not altogether filled with persons diseased, since sin hath introduced such a variety of evils. Marvellous, as well as numerous, were the types by which God prefigured his Messiah. And who, sensible of spiritual distempers, would not gladly wait at the pool of ordinances for relief! Jesus graciously prevents the most needy and miserable with his mercy: and his word powerfully determines and enables to obedience. And yet much weakness and ignorance sometimes remain for a while. It is wonderful that his kindness should have occasioned to him such malicious hatred and envy. And marvellous is his wisdom, that this abuse of him should be the mean of a more clear manifestation of himself, as the Son of God and promised Messiah. How sufficient is he to save sinners, who is both God and man; one with, and equal to, God; knowing, willing, and performing the same things as JEHOVAH his Father! Even in his mediatorial character he is the absolute Lord of life and death, who manages all providences, quickens the dead, examines all causes, and distributes eternal happiness or punishment, as he pleases. Faithfully he executes his office, to the glory of God, and the salvation of men. And worthy is he to be honoured and worshipped equally with the Father, that God may be glorified and worshipped in him. What ground is there for the most undoubting confidence in him who hath such attestation from prophets, from miracles, from God himself!—And it becomes us seriously to search the scriptures, where every saving truth concerning him is to be found.—But, alas, fearful are the effects of ignorance, pride, and carnal ambition. No clear and earnest ministrations of truth can affect such as are under the power of these things.—Owning the authority of the scriptures, they neither understand, believe, nor practise them. Pretending regard to Jesus, they will never receive him for salvation, and yet are ready to run after the vilest impostors.—It is the highest folly to lean to the broken law for happiness, when it so charges us with our sins: and greatly absurd to prefer men to Christ, and yet disregard even these our human favourites when they instruct us concerning Christ.

verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles,* but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.†

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe‡ on him whom he hath sent.

30 ¶ They said therefore unto him, What sign§ showest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven;‖ but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.*

35 And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you,† That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All that the Father giveth me‡ shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in nowise cast out.

38 For [e] I came down from heaven, [f] not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then [g] murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, [h] Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 [i] No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw* him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 [k] It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. [l] Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

46 [m] Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 [n] Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 [o] I am that bread of life.

49 [p] Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 [q] This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 [r] I am the living† bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is [s] my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 [t] The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, [u] How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [x] Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood,‡ ye have no life in you.

54 [y] Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life;§ and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For [z] my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 27—29. Beware of laying out your principal care and labour about temporal provision, or other perishing enjoyments; but chiefly inquire after, and labour to possess, those spiritual and eternal blessings which I, as anointed and miraculously attested by my Father, freely give to every one that believes in me. Your great and important work, which God commands and effects as a source of obedience and means of acceptance, is cordially to believe on and receive me, as the SENT of God, and his unspeakable gift, offered in the gospel. 30, 31. What token can you produce of your Messiahship, and superiority to Moses, who not merely multiplied provision, but for forty years miraculously nourished our fathers in the wilderness with manna from heaven? 32—59. Christ calls himself bread in allusion to the manna, and because he, in his person, offices, work, and fulness, is the mean of all our spiritual and eternal life, happiness, and comfort. He is the true bread, of which the manna and all the bread used in the ancient oblations were but a typical shadow, and which is infinitely excellent, important, and permanent in its virtue. He is living bread, having all life in himself as Son of God, and as Mediator, and as being the Author of all spiritual life to sinful men. He is bread of life, which gives spiritual life to dead souls, and nourishes them up in knowledge and grace, comfort and holiness, to eternal life; and none that receive him by faith shall ever perish with hunger, or thirst for any necessary blessings. His flesh is meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed. His person God-man Mediator, and his righteousness, with the blessings purchased by it, are eminent and effectual means of our spiritual and eternal life. To eat his flesh and drink his blood, is by faith to receive and rest on him for salvation, as God in our nature, who has fulfilled the law, and purchased, and bestows all new covenant blessings upon us;—and by means hereof Christ dwells in us and we in him. There is the closest union and communion between him and us;—he dwelling in us by his Spirit, and we dwelling in him by the permanent habit of faith, and holding fellowship with him by repeated acts of it. 63, 64. Why do ye conceive prejudice against my saying that I came down from heaven, when in a short time some present shall see me ascend back to it? And the eating of my flesh, and drinking of my blood, must be understood in a spiritual, not in a carnal sense. It is only the operation of the Spirit of God that quickens souls to a spiritual and eternal life. The carnal eating of my flesh could profit no one. My words, which I have spoken unto you, relate to spiritual things; and are the means of conveying the Holy Ghost, and his enlivening influences, into men's hearts. But some of you, who profess to be my disciples, do not heartily believe in me; and are therefore ready to cavil at my doctrine, and put the most absurd construction on my words.

56 [a] He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, [b] dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 [c] As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; [d] so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 [e] This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in [f] the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 ¶ [g] Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus [h] knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 [i] What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

64 [m] But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, [n] that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ¶ [o] From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, [p] to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life.

69 [q] And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

70 Jesus answered them, [r] Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is [s] a devil?†

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon: for [t] he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

|| Or, learning.

* How they concluded that our Lord "had never learned," that is, had never studied in the schools of Jerusalem, is not stated. AFTER these things Jesus [a] walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3 His [b] brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples * also may see the works that thou doest.

4 For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly: if thou do these things, show thyself to the world.

5 For neither did his brethren believe † in him.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, [c] My time is not yet come; but your time is alway ready.

7 [d] The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, [e] not openly, but as it were in secret.‡

11 ¶ [f] Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him for fear § of the Jews.

14 ¶ Now, about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man || letters, having never learned?*

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Worthy of repeated remembrance are the great works of our Redeemer. He often graciously perplexes his people, that he may have the honour of kindly answering their doubts. And if we have him with us, we can never want any good thing. The more liberal we are to others, from a principle of faith and love, the more liberal God will be to us. But we must never waste any thing in hopes of his miraculous supply. Carnal minds greatly mistake the nature of Christ's kingdom. And his ministers ought earnestly to avoid every political office and work. Dark nights of desertion, temptation, and distress, often quickly succeed the most delightful seasons of fellowship with Christ, and even himself is suspected for Satan. But under all our distresses his word alone can relieve and comfort. And his presence is doubly precious after fearful storms of darkness and grief. Powerfully do his visits hasten forward his people to the haven of glory. They therefore, who truly love him, will grudge no pains to find him: and often they meet with him sooner, and more easily, than they expected. But, alas, that ever he should be sought, not from love, but for some carnal advantages! ——What a wonderful, well furnished, and divinely authorized Saviour is Jesus Christ! Heavenly and divine is his original;—deep was his debasement, even unto death;—and high his exaltation to his Father's throne. He hath in himself, and gives to our souls, the living, life-giving, substantial, and abundant provisions of his grace.—And freely granted by himself and his Father to sinful men are all the blessings of his love. Yea, even the weakest act of faith on him secures permanent grace, a glorious resurrection, and eternal life! Every elect sinner shall come to him; and no one who comes, however weak or wicked, shall ever be cast out, or finally lost. But none either will or can come till they be instructed by his Father, and quickened by his powerful and life-giving word and Spirit.—Awful is the thought that many should prefer earthly enjoyments to him and his everlasting salvation;—should ignorantly or maliciously cavil at the declarations of his grace; should apostatize from him, offended with his spiritual doctrines or necessary reproofs:—or should adhere to him in profession, while carnal lusts are indulged in their heart. Never, O my soul, cavil at his words who is the wisdom of God. Never attempt to deceive him who searches the heart. Never neglect him who is thy food and thy life, and the length of thy days. Never refuse him who is the free, the unspeakable gift of God. Never doubt of that salvation which is intrusted to his care, who shuts out none, and loses none that the Father has given him. And never desert him who is Christ the quickening Son of the living God, full of grace and truth.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 3, 4. Stay no longer in this poor obscure country, but go preach and work miracles at Jerusalem, that you may make the great and learned men your disciples; and that, their number being increased, they may, on such a public occasion, favour your designs to set up your kingdom: for if you can do any wonderful works, it is proper you should establish and spread your fame, by doing them in the most public manner, and in the most famous places, and on the most public occasions, that men of learning and authority may see, and be convinced by them. 6, 7. However safely ye, who have the favour of worldly men, being like them in your principles, tempers, and designs, may go up at the 16 Jesus answered them, and said, [g] My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 [h] If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 [i] He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 [k] Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? [l] Why go ye about to kill me?

20 The people answered and said, [m] Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 [n] Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath-day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath-day receive circumcision, [*] that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because I have made a man [o] every whit whole on the sabbath-day?

24 [p] Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, [q] lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. [r] Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit [s] we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, [t] no man knoweth whence [†] he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, [u] Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: [x] and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

29 But I know him: for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 ¶ [y] Then they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, [z] because his hour was not yet come.

31 And many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 The Pharisees heard [a] that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 ¶ Then said Jesus unto them, [b] Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 [c] Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the [d] dispersed among the [*] Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

36 [e] What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me? and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

37 [f] In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, [g] If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

38 [h] He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 ([i] But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: [k] for the Holy Ghost was not yet given,[†] because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 ¶ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, [l] Of a truth this is the Prophet.

41 Others said, [m] This is the Christ. But some said, [n] Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 [o] Hath not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?

43 [p] So there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but [q] no man laid hands on him.

45 ¶ Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, [r] Never man spake like this man.[‡]

But "the things of Christ" are, mainly, his incarnation, death, sacrifice, and resurrection—with none of which could he fully be sent until Christ had died, and risen, and ascended to glory.—Ed.

[‡] The Scriptures furnish no record of our Lord's personal appearance, stature, or voice. This reference merely indicates the effect, not the manner of his speaking. And there is something very peculiar in its influence upon public officials, whose habits of subordination, sense of accountability, and indifference to personal feelings, were all overcome, either by the matter or the manner of our Lord's discourse.—Ed.

very beginning of the feast, it is not proper that I, whom they seek to kill, should go up so early, and give them an opportunity to concert measures against me. 16—18. I did not learn my doctrine, which I preach, by any human assistance; nor is it an invention of my own. But God hath sent me as Mediator, and qualified me to publish it to the world, not to gain applause to myself, but for the advancement of his honour and glory. And whosoever will, by humble, serious and impartial reading, hearing, meditation, and prayer, labour to understand the will of God, in order to practise it, he shall experience such delight and power in my doctrine as shall prove it really divine. He will perceive that impostors suit their doctrines to the carnal inclinations of men, in order to establish their own reputation and carnal interests: and that, as an evidence of my sincerity, and of the truth of my doctrine, I am wholly intent upon promoting the glory of God, who authorized me, and publish only what tends to humble mankind, and reform them from their errors and corruptions. 19—24. When ye profess such zeal for the laws of Moses, why do ye so universally break them? Why, in direct contradiction to an unaltorable precept, do you seek to murder me? When on the sabbath-day ye circumcise children, and apply cures to the wounded, how absurd is it to seek to murder me, because on the sabbath I perfectly cured the man who had long been infirm at the pool of Bethesda? Beware, therefore, of partially indulging prejudices against me on account of my mean appearances, or in favour of your chief priests and rulers, on account of their specious pretences and authority over you; but carefully examine things, and judge according to truth and equity. 28, 29. Ye indeed know my earthly parentage, but my office and original are much higher than ye apprehend. My Father, of whom ye are grossly ignorant, hath, in the faithful fulfilment of his covenant and promises, sent me into the world.—I have a perfect knowledge of his mind and will; for I am from him, by a peculiar and eternal generation; and as the anointed Mediator, I am authorized by him to reveal the way of salvation to men. 33, 34. It is but a short time that I shall continue preaching and working miracles among you; and then I shall, in my ascension, return to my Father. Then, in your miserable extremities, ye shall earnestly, but in vain, wish for my presence and favour; but ye shall neither find me to your comfort, nor ever follow me to heaven, where even now I am in my divine nature, either to enjoy or persecute me. 37—39. Let every destitute sinner among you, who wishes after happiness, believe on me, as the only Saviour, that he may be refreshed and satisfied with an abundant, increasing, and continued supply of blessing, which may flow out from his heart, in plentiful streams of good works, for his own and others' edification and comfort.—This signified that all who cordially believed in, and received and rested on, him for salvation, should, after his ascension to glory, receive an abundant communication of the gifts, graces, and comforts of the Holy Ghost, to re-

2 And [b] early in the morning he came again into the temple, and [c] all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery: and when they had set her in the midst,

4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 [d] Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, †tempting† him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So, when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone‡ at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

fresh and cleanse their souls, and render them fruitful in good works, and useful to others:—which communication was not to be granted, till Christ should have the honour of sending the Spirit, to attest his exaltation and influence in heaven; and the Spirit could glorify Christ, in the numerous conversions and remarkable holiness and comfort of both Jews and Gentiles.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—It is a mournful case when the Saviour is banished. And base when men, even in religious duties, chiefly aim at their own carnal advantages. It wears but a very suspicious appearance when professors of religion are the darlings of wicked men. And it is highly shameful, when the near relations of faithful ministers, or they who have most means of instruction, are the most careless or carnal. Faithful ministers must expect to go through various scenes of good and bad treatment; and the more faithful they are, the more of the world's hatred will they experience. Men who hate the truth will always find something to quarrel with. But no malice can destroy them till their work be ended. They may therefore proceed boldly but cautiously in it.—Ignorance of Christ and his doctrines will make men doubt their divinity, or raise cavils against them. Prejudice against him will render them blind to the clearest means of conviction, make them reckon appearances realities, and pretend great zeal for God's law, while they indulge themselves in the grossest violation of it, and condemn in others what they approve in themselves. But delightfully Jesus vindicates his character, doctrine, and work, to his own and his Father's honour, and to the confusion of his enemies. And serious attention will either convince or confound his opposers. Astonishing are the riches of his grace, in offering a full and free salvation to his contemners and murderers. And abundant are the communications that flow from an exalted Redeemer. And it is most dreadful to seek occasions, and raise cavils, against his kindness. It is dangerous to enjoy ordinances without his presence. And his despisers shall be awfully deprived of him, and all the means of his grace, in a little time. But it is a great mercy that the poor embrace and enjoy him, when most men of rank and learning contemn both him and them. Wicked men readily curse whom the Lord hath blessed. But Christ can easily overawe, if not convert, the most stubborn, and render them witnesses for his honour. Easily he can imbolden the most cowardly in a time of need, and disappoint and dispirit the crafty. And nothing more plainly manifests a bad cause, than that its friends have recourse to persecution rather than to arguments.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 3—6. If he had encouraged them to stone her, they might have reproached him with cruelty, in partially ordering a severe punishment against one, no worse than the publicans and sinners with whom he conversed or they might have accused him to the Roman governor, as an usurper of judicial authority, and an abettor of tumults. If he had declared against stoning her, or bade them refer the matter to the Roman governor, they hoped to incense the people against him as an enemy to the law of Moses and their liberty. 12. Having, in myself, all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, I am come into the world to direct both Jews and Gentiles into the way of life and salvation by my word and Spirit. And whosoever believeth on me, and follows my direction and pattern, shall not go on in ignorance, error, sin, or misery, but have the saving light and comfort of a spiritual life here, and eternal life hereafter. 13—19. Though, in ordinary cases, a man's testimony concerning himself avails nothing, yet it is otherwise in the case of one, who is light and truth itself, and whose original and commission are from God, and whose return is to him;—of all which things ye are wilfully ignorant. Ye judge and condemn me only from carnal considerations and appearances: but I interfere with no civil judgment, and at present condemn or my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins:* whither I go, ye cannot come.

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.†

26 I have many things to say and to judge of you: but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man,‡ then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, many believed on him.

31 ¶ Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

33 ¶ They§ answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and [z]were never in bondage‖ to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [a]Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 [b]And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: [c]but the Son abideth ever.

36 [d]If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are [e]Abraham's seed; [f]but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 [g]I speak that which I have seen with my Father; and ye [h]do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, [i]If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 [k]But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.*

41 [l]Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication;† [m]we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, [n]If God were your Father, ye would love me: for [o]I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 [p]Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word.‡

44 [q]Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: [r]he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And [s]because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 [t]Which of you convinceth me of sin?§ And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

A. M. cir. 4036. A. D. cir. 32.

* In your sin—not "sins," viz. the sin of unbelief. See ver. 21.—Ed.

† The original presents a greater difficulty than appears in the translation, John's customary phrase for "from or at the beginning," being of very different construction. See ch. 6. 64. & 8. 44. & 15. 27. & 16. 4. 1 John 1. 1. & 2. 7, &c. Paul, no doubt, uses a phrase for "at the beginning," similar to that in the text; but the phraseology of John should rather be interpreted by his own writings. If so, the view of Augustine seems preferable, "Believe me (ver. 24) to be the beginning, head, or chief, of all principality and power—(see Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 8. & 21. 6.)—that which now I declare myself to you."—Ed.

‡ When ye have lifted up the Son of man upon the cross (ch. 3. 14. & 12. 32), then, by his resurrection and ascension, "shall ye know that I am the light of the world" (ver. 12), "the Son of God" (ch. 5. 25), and "head over all things to the church," Eph. 1. 21, 22.—Ed.

§ These respondents were, most probably, the captious Pharisees mentioned ver. 13—29, and whom our Lord accuses of seeking to kill him (ver. 37); but could not be the parties to whom he had just been speaking, for they were "Jews who believed on him" (ver. 31).—Ed.

z Ex. 1.—x. Judg. iii, iv, vi, x. Ezra ix. Neh. v.

‖ Some consider this statement a gross historical falsehood, as the Jews had been in bondage to the Egyptians, Philistines, Moabites, Babylonians, and now were subject to the Romans. But such glaring historical facts, even Pharisees could not have ventured publicly to deny. The meaning is, therefore, to be sought in giving a distinctive emphasis to we; and, in point of fact, up till this period, the Romans were rather arbitrators and protectors than masters. The Roman bondage did not properly commence till several years after our Lord's resurrection.—Ed.

punish no man, but call sinners to repentance and salvation: and yet, though I were to pass or execute judgment, my sentence would be just and valid, on account of my oneness with, and commission from, my Father. Nor is my Messiahship destitute of sufficient attestation, since I myself, as a divine person, assert it; and my Father, by his prophets, and by his immediate declarations from heaven, as well as by many other signs, hath attested it. Notwithstanding repeated instructions, ye continue wilfully ignorant of my person and office, and of my heavenly Father, from whom I come to you. If ye had considered me as one in nature, counsel, and operation with him, ye would have seen his perfections shining forth in me, and discerned the relation in which he stands to me, as his Son and mediatorial Servant. 21—26. Knowing how eagerly they desired that he might be murdered before the time appointed by his Father, Jesus said to them, I will soon ascend back to my Father, and ye shall earnestly wish to have me among you to deliver you from your miseries, but shall die under the power and guilt of your sin, especially your rejection of me, and be rendered inexpressibly wretched, both in time and through eternity. Nor shall it be in your power to follow me into the heavenly state, either to bring me back, or to partake of my glory.——Being not only of an earthly origin, but of unregenerate hearts and carnal tempers, ye cannot have fellowship with me, who am divine, and whose affections are perfectly set on heavenly things: but on account of your obstinate refusal to embrace and acknowledge me, as the promised Messiah, and only Saviour, and other sins attending it, your city and nation shall be fearfully destroyed in this world, and yourselves for evermore terribly tormented in hell. I still insist on it, that I am the Son of God and promised Messiah:—I could easily charge you with a multitude of crimes, and condemn you for them; but as that is not my present work, I only tell you, that my Father infallibly performs all his promises concerning me, and to me, and them that believe in me, and all his threatenings against those that reject me: and whatever I say to men, is exactly according to the commission which I have received from his uncontrollable and awful authority. 28, 29. But however ignorant ye now are of me, when once ye have crucified me, and occasioned my exaltation to glory, either the happy influences of my Spirit, or the miseries on yourselves and nation, shall convince you, that I act by my Father's authority, and have faithfully declared his doctrines, promises, and threatenings.—And meanwhile my Father, who is one with me in essence, continues with me the unmeasurable unction of his Spirit, and the tokens of his favour to me, as one who always acts agreeably to his will, and for his honour. 31, 32. Jesus said to these weak, or pretended believers, If ye really embrace and adhere to my holy doctrine, and subject your whole souls to it, ye shall be proved and owned to be my disciples in truth, as well as in name; and ye shall be still further enlightened and confirmed in the certainty, excellency, and importance of my gospel; and by means of it be honourably delivered from everything inthralling, mean, or miserable. 34—36. Notwithstanding your haughty, and even notoriously false, boasts of civil and religious freedom, I assure you, that, be whose descendants you will, if ye indulge yourselves in the practice of wickedness, ye are slaves under the power of your lusts, and the guilt of your sins: and as such all unbelieving Jews, though the natural seed of Abraham, shall be quickly excluded from God's church and favour; while I, the Son of God, and eminent seed of Abraham, shall continue as Head of the church, and all true believers abide therein as members. If therefore I, who am the Son of God, and Lord of my church, grant you my spiritual freedom, ye shall be really and eminently free from the guilt and dominion of sin, and from the law, as a covenant, and from burdensome ceremonies; and, in fine, free from all evil, and fully possessed of everything glorious and comfortable. 37—41. I know that ye are the natural descendants of Abraham; but ye are so far from being like him in his faith or obedience, that ye seek to murder me, merely because your own proud and carnal hearts cannot relish nor receive the holy, spiritual, and self-humbling doctrine which I preach unto you. I speak and act as one intimately acquainted with, and obedient to, God my Father: and ye act as under the influence of, and in communion and concert with, the devil as your true Father: a very sure evidence that ye are not the genuine and believing children of Abraham. 45—47. Not only do ye discredit the proofs of my Sonship and Messiahship, and † These words of our Lord are as literally true of the first as of the second death. That the believer never sees the second death, is unquestioned; but neither does he see the first. Death is literally not death to him. It is a serpent unstinged, an enemy conquered, a power destroyed. He thinks not of the world he is to leave behind, but the heaven to which he is removing, and the crown of righteousness and glory. AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?*

3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents:† but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he ‡anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7 And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam, (which is, by interpretation, Sent.) He went§ his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of ‖ Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

* Some think the question of the disciples had reference to the doctrine of metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soul of a dead man into a living infant—a doctrine prevalent among the Egyptians, and, at least, to some extent among the Greeks. But had it been their object to obtain information concerning this doctrine, it seems scarcely possible our Lord should have neglected or refused to answer. Their meaning, therefore, seems rather to be—"Who hath sinned? this man, that he is become blind? or his parents, that he was born blind?" for, being generally Galileans, they knew nothing about the man or his parents—(see ver. 8).—Ed.

† Our Lord does not mean that neither the man nor his parents had ever committed sin, but merely that neither had sinned so as to bring on blindness as a judgment.—Ed.

‡ Or, spread the clay upon the eyes of the blind man.

§ The sending of the blind man, and his ready compliance, without any mention of a guide, when contrasted with the reference to the common practice of leading the blind (Mat. 15. 14), furnishes a striking internal proof of the truth of the narrative, and that it was written by an eye-witness of the fact: for men "born blind" do frequently acquire the most wonderful local knowledge, so that they can find out any place as readily as those who see. But the inventor of a "cunningly-devised fable" would never have omitted, to add to the verisimilitude of the miracle, the accompaniment of a guide.—Note. The use of the clay, and washing in Siloam, may, perhaps, represent that incrustation of worldliness (Hab. 2. 6), which the water of life "sent" from above, must wash away before the eyes of a sinner can be spiritually opened; and the act of washing, in obedience to the word of the Lord, may well represent the "diligent use of all the outward and ordinary means whereby Christ communicateth to us the benefits of redemption."—Ed.

the doctrines which I preach; but because I tell you truths, which are spiritual and holy, disagreeable to your corrupt inclinations and interests, ye reject both me and them: and so perverse are you, that though ye cannot point out the smallest fault in my behaviour or doctrine, ye obstinately persist in your unbelief. From this it is evident that ye are not children of God, who are all of them desirous to know, and ready to receive and observe whatever he speaks. 49—51. My continual and earnest study to advance the glory of my Father, in the salvation of his people, fully manifests, that in my work I am no way influenced or directed by the devil; nor am I solicitous about either your reproaches or your applause, as I know that my Father will secure me the regard of all his chosen people, and will effectually vindicate my character, and avenge all the indignities offered to it. And I solemnly assure you, that whosoever heartily embraces and holds fast my spiritual and holy doctrine, in faith and obedience, shall be delivered from every real misery, and enjoy everlasting happiness. 56—58. So highly did your father Abraham esteem me, that he earnestly desired to see my appearance in the flesh, and exceedingly rejoiced in the foresight of it. How young soever I be, with respect to my human birth; yet I existed from eternity, as the unchangeable I AM.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—There is great need of caution in dealing with malicious hypocrites. Very abominable is adultery, and richly deserving of capital punishment. But those who indulge themselves in it, or any like wickedness, are very unfit to be zealous prosecutors of the guilty. Many fear shame, on account of sin, more than damnation. And by fleeing from Christ, the merciful Saviour, wilfully destroy themselves. Now he is ready to pardon the greatest transgressions; but he will quickly be an inexorable judge. He is come into our dark world to reveal the method of salvation by the gospel, and to illuminate our hearts by his Spirit. Ignorant of, and far from him, we shall certainly wander into everlasting perdition. But under his enlightening influence, we shall avoid dangerous errors, be freed from spiritual slavery, and safely arrive at eternal life. Being a divine person, one with, and sent by, the Father, we may safely rest in, and abide by his testimony. But no external evidence is sufficient to persuade a carnal heart. Many were the blasphemous contradictions which he endured in the cause of mercy and truth. While he was horridly insulted by the wicked, the hypocritical, the proud, and malicious children of Satan, as if he had been diabolical and mad. And great was the forbearance and meekness which he manifested in his own vindication. It looks ill when men are enraged by reproof. Unprofitable is descent from the most godly parents, if we continue strangers to their faith and holiness. And it is base to boast of such while we obstinately persevere in our sins. It is impossible either to know or believe Christ's words, while we remain hardened in carnal lusts, and under the power of the devil. Yea, an empty profession of the true religion but tends to make our case still the more miserable. And if we drive Jesus the Saviour from us now, he will at last leave us in our sinfulness and ruin. But happy they who know his truth, and have it abiding in their heart; who are conformed to his image, and desire after, and delight in, him! Thrice glorious their gospel-liberties, and unspeakable their eternal felicities.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 3, 4. It was not on account of any particular crime, either of his own, or his parents, more than others, that this man was born blind; but that, by opening his eyes, I might manifest my Father's glory, and prove myself to be the Messiah, in miraculously curing him. I must therefore improve the present opportunity of giving him his sight, as an emblem of my enlightening blind

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man [a] is not of God, because he [b] keepeth not the sabbath-day. [c] Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, [d] He is a prophet.

18 But the [e] Jews [e] did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, [f] because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that [g] if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, [h] Give God the praise: we know that this man is [i] a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 [k] Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and [l] ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are [m] Moses' disciples.

29 We know that [n] God spake unto Moses: as for [o] this fellow, [p] we know not from whence [†] he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why, [q] herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doth his will, him [r] he heareth.*

32 Since the world began was it not heard [s] that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 ¶ They answered and said unto him, [t] Thou wast altogether born in sins, and [u] dost thou teach us? And they [x] cast him out.

35 ¶ Jesus heard that they had cast him out; [y] and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the [z] Son of God?

36 He answered and said, [a] Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, [b] Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 ¶ And Jesus said, [c] For judgment I am come into this world; that they which see not might see; [†] and that they which see might be made blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.‡

souls. And since the day of my mortal life hastens to a period, as long as I am in the world, I must cure not only corporal blindness, but instruct, enlighten, and comfort them that are spiritually blind. 39—41. I am come to establish a rule of judgment; to alter the present state of the church; to try men's spirits; and, by distinguishing grace, to separate the precious from the vile; to open blind eyes, and teach ignorant souls; and to manifest and occasion the increase of their stupidity and perverseness, who, through self-conceit, shut their eyes against the light of my word. If you, Pharisees, who pretend to so much knowledge and ability to instruct others, were either grossly ignorant, or as sensible of your ignorance as many of the common people, your sin, in rejecting me, would be far less heinous, and there would be hopes of your deliverance from it; but while you are so self-conceited, your sin is highly aggravated, and it is most probable that you will remain under its guilt and power for ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—We ought to be extremely cautious in our interpretations of providences. Men's sins are not to be judged of from their sufferings. It is enough that God is righteous, and will make all things turn out to his own glory. We have great need to be diligent in working out our salvation while we have life and opportunity to walk in Christ's light. Marvellous is his power, and ready his grace towards the unworthy and distressed. He works the most effectual salvation by means the most unlikely. It is his appointment, not any natural virtue, that renders them effectual. And only in obedience to his authority can we justly expect benefit by them.——What blessed experience of his mercy he gives to the obedient! and with cheerful thankfulness it should be acknowledged to his glory. He can easily make the weakest of his followers wiser than their teachers,—bold confessors of his Name,—and humble adorers of his Majesty. And if men reject and abuse them for his sake, he will reward them with repeated manifestations of his glory. But alas! how desirous are some to avoid owning him, even after he hath bestowed singular favours upon them. The fear of men causeth a snare. The censures of the church are often turned against her best friends. But inexcusable are they, who, through self-conceit, contemn all means of conviction, and upbraid Jesus and his followers. Rage against reproof most plainly discovers real ignorance. But hopeful is the case of such as perceive their own weakness and sinfulness, and dangerous is theirs who are proud of their knowledge and religion.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 1—5. I, who am truth itself, solemnly assure you, that whoever they are who enter into any office in God's church, not according to his appointment, but by methods of their own devising, are intruders and seducers, who, instead of feeding and governing his people, attempt to rob God of his authority over, and property in them, and to pervert and destroy their souls. But he who, from right principles and ends, and in the manner appointed by God, enters upon the work of feeding and guiding the church, hath a proper right to take care of his people, those cleanly and tractable, meek, patient, harmless, and cautious, but timorous and exposed, social and useful, fearers of God. And having invested him with all proper authority, God, by his Spirit, and the ministry of his servants, opens the hearts of his people to receive him, and they are taught to understand and distinguish his voice in the gospel; while he, by his grace, calls them to himself, in the most particular manner, and leads them into the good pastures of his word and ordinances.—In so doing, he, by his instruction and example, shows them the way; and they, understanding and approving the same, willingly yield up themselves to his authority, and tread in his steps. But the chosen and called people of God have a fixed aversion to the unscriptural doctrines and bad example of false teachers, because they perceive their tendency to lead them away from the right way of salvation. 6—9. Finding that, through their self-conceit, the Pharisaic teachers did not comprehend his meaning, Jesus added, I am the only door of salvation, and way to eternal life, and the only one by whom ministers can have admission to office in the gospel-church, or people have access to spiritual privileges and saving benefits. All that, before me, pretended to Messiahship, and all that oppose me, and teach other methods of salvation, are but mere intruders into their office, who rob my Father and me of our honour and property, and destroy men's souls: but none of God's elect shall ever be deceived into perdition by their errors, or find satisfaction in following them. I therefore insist on it as a matter of infinite importance, that I am the only true door of the church, and entrance to eternal life. Whosoever therefore enters upon religion, by faith in me, as the only Saviour, shall certainly be protected from spiritual enemies, delivered from misery of every kind, and obtain eternal blessedness; and shall, under the conduct of my word and Spirit, find access to, liberty in, and spiritual support, nourishment, and comfort, by my divine ordinances. 10—13. False teachers come only to seduce church members, murder their souls, or plunder and persecute them; but I am come to manifest the method of obtaining spiritual and eternal life, yea, to purchase it for them, and to bestow it upon them, in the most undeserved, unexpected, eminent, inconceivably large, and everlasting manner. I am the eminently and infinitely good Shepherd of the church foretold by the prophets; and who not only lead, protect, and feed, but give my very life, soul, and self, in the stead of chosen men, to purchase their eternal happiness.—But they, who from selfish views commence pastors in the church, having no real affectionate concern for their people, are unwilling to hasard their life, reputation, or secular interests, in their service; but are alway ready to shift for themselves, and leave the people to be seduced or perverted, as Satan and his emissaries please. No wonder they are so careless of their hearers' spiritual and eternal advantage, when they only entered on their office from a regard to secular advantage. 14—18. And being the infinitely good, and the chief Shepherd of the church, I perfectly know, exactly observe, and tenderly care for, all my chosen people, who are, by my Father's gift, my own purchase, and their self-dedication, my peculiar property; and they spiritually know me and my doctrine, and fiducially and affectionately embrace me, and hearken to it. And as the Father perfectly knows, loves, approves, and confides in me, I also am perfectly acquainted with him and all his counsels, and trust in him, and delight to do his will. Such is my love to him and to my chosen people, that I am willing and ready to lay down my life in their stead, that they may obtain eternal salvation. And besides those Jews which I have called, or will effectually call, into my church, I must, in pursuance of my eternal engagements, and in justice to my purchase of them, effectually bring in multitudes also of chosen Gentiles, and unite them with those Jews in the gospel church, new covenant, or heavenly state, under my special care, influences, and government.—And not only doth my Father love me as his only begotten Son, but even on account of my zeal for the manifestation of his glory in the salvation of sinful men, in so cheerfully dying for the expiation of their sins, that I might rise again for their justification.—No man, by either stratagem or force, can deprive me of my life without my own consent;—but, as absolute proprietor thereof, I voluntarily lay it down, and will, by my own power, rise from the dead, after making satisfaction for the sins of my people according to the commandment and will of my Father. 25—30. Not only have I, in the strongest declarations, asserted my Messiahship, though ye perversely refused to believe me, but I have demonstrated it by my divine and miraculous works: yet such is your obstinacy, that no declarations or demonstrations will persuade you; as I know, and the event proves, that ye are none of my chosen people, whom the Father hath given me, and whom he, by the effectual power of his grace, draws to me.—As I distinctly know, observe, and love them, all of them, in the day of my power, attend to, distinguish, prize, and willingly obey the voice of my word and Spirit, and readily follow my instructions and example. And I freely give them an irrevocable right to all spiritual and eternal benefits, lead them now into some enjoyment of them, and, in due time, will put them into the full possession.—Nor shall either their own weakness, unworthiness, or sinfulness, make them fall short of heaven; nor any artful power or combination

5 Now [c]Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee, and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day,† he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world:

10 But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

† The Jews divided every day, from sunrise to sunset, into twelve hours; so that the number of hours was always the same, but the length of the hours varied according to the seasons. And as the principal means of measuring time among the ancient Jews was by sun-dials (2 Kin. 20. 11. Is. 38. 8), a practical mathematician would have little difficulty in constructing, either one dial-plate with moveable parts, capable of extension, or contraction, on the hour line—or a succession of dial-plates, to be changed at brief and fixed intervals throughout the year, still dividing the absolute time of sunshine into twelve equal parts.—Note. Hence learn the necessity of measuring and noting time, and see how equal are the opportunities of working for God presented by the shortest, as well as by the longest life! The question is, not how long we walk, but how circumspectly we walk. The Lord preserve our hearts from fearing and our feet from stumbling! Ps. 116. 8.—Ed.

(1) Lazarus is raised from the dead, whereupon many Jews believe on Jesus: 1—46. (2) A council gathered against Jesus, to which Caiaphas prophesies: 47—53. (3) Jesus hides himself: 54. (4) His enemies lay wait for him at the passover: 55—57.

of men or devils ever wrest them out of my protection, care, or keeping. Nay, my heavenly Father, who loves them, and hath a peculiar interest in them, and who committed them to me that I might bring them safely to glory, being infinitely superior to all their enemies in power and wisdom, it is absolutely impossible to defeat his gracious designs towards them, or to entice or force them out of his almighty hands, in which they are kept, through faith unto salvation. And my Father and I, being the very same in nature, power, and every other perfection, as well as in will and design, we must be both overcome before the weakest of our chosen ones can be deprived of eternal life. 32. Many great and merciful works I have wrought among you, in confirmation of my character, in feeding multitudes of hungry persons, healing all manner of diseases, raising the dead, and casting out tormenting devils. For which of these do you intend to stone me to death? 34—38. And when the scripture, which is infallible, and must be accomplished, calls your magistrates Gods, who were but types and shadows of the Messiah, why do you perversely charge me, in whom these types are perfectly fulfilled, and whom the Father hath appointed from eternity, and hath sent into the world to exercise all authority as the true Messiah, with blasphemy, for asserting my oneness in nature and perfections with the Father! If I do not perform works as great and glorious as could be expected from the Father, and which, being superior and contrary to the laws of nature, must be performed by that power which is in the Father himself, I do not claim your belief as the Son of God or promised Messiah. But if I perform works peculiar to God, and in a manner proper to him, then, however ye disregard my person or doctrine in itself, submit to the unexceptionable evidence of my miracles, that ye may be convinced that my Father and I have essential and necessary communion in Godhead.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Infinitely necessary and useful is Jesus Christ to sinful men, as their Shepherd, to seek out, gather, and feed them; as their door and entrance to, and the precious price of salvation. Indissoluble are his new covenant connexions with his people, and kind his regards to them. Unbounded was his love in giving his life for their ransom, and rising again for their justification. And through him they receive the most holy liberty, inexpressible delight, spiritual supplies, and superabundant and endless felicity. With what transcendent faithfulness, wisdom, and grace, he seeks them out, brings them from their lost estate into his covenant and church, and guides, governs, protects, and goes before them through life and death into everlasting blessedness! Infallible is their perseverance, and certain their eternal life, when all the glorious perfections, relations, and promises of Jesus Christ, and his Father, are their security. But base are the men who, without his commission, thrust themselves into offices in his church, or behave indolently, unconcernedly, or tyrannically therein. Let every one that regards the life of his soul flee from them. The purpose of God certainly stands firm, whether with respect to men's salvation or damnation. But how implacable is the rage, which words of infinite grace, offers of unbounded fulness, declarations 17 Then, when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about [a]fifteen furlongs off.)

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, [b]to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, [c]if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, that even now, [d]whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, [e]Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith unto him, [f]I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, [g]I am the resurrection, and the life: [h]he that believeth in me, though he were dead,[†] yet shall he live:

26 [i]And whosoever liveth, and believeth in me,[‡] shall never die. [j]Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, [k]Yea, Lord: I believe[§] that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.[‖]

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, [l]The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 [m]As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then which were with her in the house, and [n]comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed[*] her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, [o]she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, [p]Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, [q]he groaned in the spirit, and [†]was troubled,

34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They say unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 [r]Jesus wept.

36 Then said the Jews, Behold, how he loved him![‡]

37 And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died.

38 Jesus therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. [s]It was a cave,[*] and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh; for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, [t]that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but [u]because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead[†] came forth, bound hand and foot[‡] with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ [v]Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doth many miracles.[§]

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him; and the Romans shall come and take away both our place[‖] and nation.

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.[*]

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;[†]

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together[‡] for to put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a

[‡] The groaning and the weeping of Jesus appear to the Jews incontestible evidences of love. There must have, therefore, been an intensity of feeling in them that removed them beyond all suspicion of simulated sorrow. Yet these sorrows were not altogether what the Jews supposed. For while they, no doubt, sprung, in part, from the remembrance of him that was gone, and sympathy with the bereaved and defenceless sisters, they also arose from the view of the fearful and universal ravages of sin and death, and the darkening shadows of that unbelief that he foresaw would defy even the evidence of light from the grave.—Ed.

The objection vanishes, when the nature of the grave is considered. [*] Caiaphas, according to his own view, was merely giving utterance to a common sentiment, that "whatever is politically expedient for a nation is to be boldly executed, however it may be morally wrong in itself or injurious to individual rights." He does not assert that Jesus for any crime deserves to die, but that, for sake of the people and nation, it is expedient that he should die. But yet, while he thus utters his own opinion, God, unknown to the speaker, overrules his words (ver. 51), and, in honour of the office of the high priesthood, of which he was personally unworthy, he employs him, in his bloodthirstiness, as he employed Balaam in his covetousness, and draws from him an official exposition of the great doctrine of atonement by sacrifice.—Ed.

Every one therefore that believeth in me shall be quickened in his soul, and even in his body at the resurrection; or if I please, in this world also. And no one that, being spiritually quickened, believeth on me, shall ever undergo eternal death, nor shall his body be always continued in the state of the dead. 41—43. 3 Then took [c] Mary [*] a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

Reflections upon Chap. XI.—Jesus keeps an exact account of all his people's works of faith and their labours of love. But the most eminent piety cannot exclude afflictions and death. Yet if Christ love us, we may boldly apply to him in our distress. And happy is it if our troubles give him an opportunity to glorify himself, and either prepare us for, or usher us into, everlasting happiness. He often indeed sovereignly defers relief till it become seemingly impossible. But neither danger nor provocation can make him to neglect his work in its proper season. And with cheerfulness and activity we ought always to follow his example. The death of our godly friends should make life less sweet, death less bitter, and heaven more desirable to us. Dead saints ought not to be lamented as lost, but as gone before, to be with Christ, and to be raised with him to glory.—Many mournful changes may happen in a short time. And it is absurd to pride ourselves in our bodies that may quickly become so ugly and loathsome. It is very friendly to attempt comforting the distressed; but only Jesus' presence can afford solid relief. He at once delightfully acts as the mighty God, the object of faith, and raiser of the dead; and as the affectionate man, whose heart sympathizes with the afflicted, and is burdened with their unbelief. With eagerness then should we run to meet him, and pour our lamentations, as well as our requests, into his bosom. Secret fellowship may ascertain his approaching gracious deliverances. For quickly his salvation comes, whenever our heart is prepared for it by faith. And we never believe aright till we receive and rest on him as God's eternal Son and our given Saviour. With eager delight he lays hold on every opportunity to comfort his people and glorify his Father: and with the greatest ease he can command instantaneous deliverances to either soul or body. No death, no bands, can hinder his work. Alas! that while his marvellous works affect some, they should but enrage others against him. And great must be the wickedness of human hearts that can be thus influenced. But none are more furious enemies to the Redeemer than careless clergymen; and nothing more hurries men into plots and practices against him than worldly views. While all things work together for the redemption of God's elect, Jews or Gentiles, the sinful methods taken to preserve nations do but accelerate their ruin. While Christ hides himself, he may be sought for different ends; and though he delay his approach, he will always attend the ordinances of his own grace.

Chap. XII.—Ver. 23—26. This request of the Greeks manifests that the time appointed of the Father for glorifying me, in the salvation of the Gentiles as well as the Jews, is just at hand.—Were I to continue in my present state, without dying a sacrifice for sin, I should not have the honour of raising up a spiritual seed to bear my image, and show forth my praise; but, being made an offering for sin, I shall be glorified in the conversion, and salvation, and praises of ransomed multitudes.—And ye likewise must be conformed to me in entering into your glory through much tribulation: for whoever, from love to this life, and the enjoyments of it, denies, disowns, and rejects me, that he may escape persecution and danger, shall certainly fall short of the heavenly felicity; and he that undervalues his natural life, and all its enjoyments, for my sake, shall certainly inherit eternal life as his gracious reward. If any man therefore would be a true disciple and servant abideth alone: but if it die,* it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour:† but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.‡

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

33 (This he said, signifying what death he should die.)

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law‖ that Christ abideth for ever:‖ and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him;

* This statement of our Lord, and that of Paul, 1 Cor. 15. 36, have been impugned as contrary to fact; for, say the objectors if the grain of wheat die, there can be no produce. This objection is a melancholy specimen of ignorance. When a man dies, the outward body dies—the inward "spirit returns to God who gave it." So, when the outward parts of the seed are chemically changed by moisture and heat, the inward germ, the embryo plant, is developed, and presents, if not an intended type, yet a natural parallel and illustration of the resurrection.—Ed.

† If our Lord prayed to be saved and was not answered, how can it be said that "the Father heareth him always?" (ch. 11. 42.) Two simple and efficient answers present themselves:—1. The words may be taken interrogatively: "What shall I say? (Shall I say) Father, save me from this hour? (Nay) but for this cause came I unto this hour." 2. A more literal translation will totally remove the difficulty without the interrogation: "Father, save me out of this hour:"—(which prayer was literally fulfilled, for out of that hour of darkness he arose more bright than ever)—"but for this cause came I into this world," and, therefore, know I must patiently endure till thy name is glorified in my sufferings.—Ed.

‡ Now is the judgment," &c., commenced and in progress to speedy completion. The prince of this world, Satan, (ch. 14. 30. & 16. 11. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. & 6. 12), cast out, dispossed from his usurped authority.—Ed.

§ From comparing ch. 15. 34. with Ps. 82. 6. it will be evident that "the law," when not used in contradistinction from "the prophets" was popularly used to signify the whole Scriptures.—Ed.

‖ Abideth for ever—that is, upon earth. This opinion the Jews, who looked only for a temporal Messiah, founded upon Dan. 7. 14. and similar prophecies.—Ed.

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, [s] Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath [a] the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 [b] Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again,

40 [c] He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, [d] when he saw his glory,* and spake of him.

42 ¶ Nevertheless [e] among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but [f] because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 [g] For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 ¶ [h] Jesus cried and said, [i] He that believeth on me, believeth not on me,† but on him that sent me.

45 [k] And he that seeth me, seeth him‡ that sent me.

46 [l] I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.

47 And [m] if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him [n] not:§ for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 [o] He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: [p] the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 [q] For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that [r] his commandment‖ is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

to me, let him follow my example, and the instructions of my word, providence, and Spirit. Then shall he quickly share with me in the felicities of the heavenly world, in which my divine nature is at present, and my human will shortly be; and his unfeigned devoting himself to my service shall issue in his obtaining immortal honours from my Father. 27—30. My soul is inexpressibly distressed, in the views of my approaching sufferings and tribulations from every quarter. If it were possible, I could gladly be excused from it; but I do not insist upon it, as the great end of my coming into the world is to undergo them: I therefore entirely resign myself to the will of God, and beg that, in all I do or suffer, his perfections may be glorified to the highest.—To which the Father, by a voice from heaven, replied, That he had already glorified himself in his obedience, ministry, and miracles, and would further glorify himself in his sufferings and death, and in the complete salvation of Jews and Gentiles flowing therefrom. 31. Certainly and quickly shall both Jews and Gentiles be tried with regard to their thoughts of me; the righteous shall be distinguished from the wicked, and they shall be acquitted or condemned answerably to their believing or not believing in me. And Satan, who hath long reigned over most part of the world, in ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness, and who reigns in the hearts of worldly men, shall be totally vanquished, his claim defeated, his oracles silenced, and himself be cast out of men's hearts, by the powerful spread of the gospel. 32. And I, after first offering up myself a sacrifice for sin on a cross, and in the virtue of it ascending to my Father's right hand, will erect my kingdom upon the ruins of his, drawing multitudes of all ranks, Gentiles as well as Jews, to myself by my word and Spirit. 35, 36. As the light of my personal ministry, or even the dispensation by my apostles, is to continue but a short time with you Jews, ye ought without delay, to make the most diligent improvement of it; for, if ye do not, ye must be left to continue in your ignorance and unbelief, to your utter destruction, in time and eternity. While you have me and my gospel among you, to show you the way of salvation, believe in me that ye may receive the truth in the love of it, and be under its infallible direction, till ye be admitted into the mansions of glory above. 44—50. He that truly believes in me as the promised Messiah, believes not in me only or ultimately, but, together with and through me, believes in my heavenly Father, who sent me into the world to seek and save lost sinners. And he who, by faith, discerns my person and office, is thereby led into the knowledge of my Father's nature, perfections, and will. I am come into this world to dispel the darkness of ignorance, superstition, and idolatry, and to bring life and immortality to light by the gospel, that whosoever receives and trusts in me should not continue under the power of spiritual blindness, nor wander in the way to eternal misery, but be instructed and guided in the way to everlasting blessedness. And if men, who have had opportunities of hearing and knowing my gospel, wilfully refuse it, and me in it, I will at present neither accuse them to the Father, nor pass nor execute upon them any sentence of condemnation; as the direct design of my coming into the world is not to accuse, condemn, or punish, but to purchase, offer, and effectually apply spiritual and eternal salvation to all that believe, whether Jews or Gentiles. But he that contemns and rejects me and my doctrines, shall, in due time, find an impartial Judge to try, condemn, and punish him: and the truths which I have preached shall be the rule of judgment, and the awful means of aggravating his offences, in the last day. For the holy, excellent, supernatural, and gracious nature of the doctrines which I have taught, and my manner of delivering and confirming the same, manifest that I have uttered them as one directed and authorized by my Father. And whatever ye think of it, I know that what I preach by his authority is the only means of bringing lost sinners to everlasting life; and it is at your infinite peril to reject it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Grateful acknowledgments should never be long delayed. While true believers think all expense and service for Christ too little, hypocrites grudge him either heart, hand, or purse: and it is not regard to the poor, but love to the world, that sways them. A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

NOW before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew† that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.‡

2 And supper being ended,§ (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him,)

3 Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments, and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter said unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet.‖ Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not,* thou hast no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed† needeth not, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet,‡ ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 [a] Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17 [b] If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all: [c] I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, [d] He that eateth bread with me* hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 † Now [e] I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 [f] Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, [g] he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.‡

22 [h] Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, [i] whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned§ to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then, lying on Jesus' breast,‖ saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give a [k] sop,* when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop [l] Satan entered† into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou dost, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because [m] Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then having received the sop [n] went immediately out: and it was night.

‡ Note.—The former chapter having closed John's account of our Lord's public teaching and procedure, here commences a specimen of his private instruction and domestic intercourse with his disciples — a portion of the word most deeply interesting, both as the best example for fathers and mothers, and the highest practical authority for the use of family prayer.—Ed.

† Rather "He that is bathed," whose whole body has been washed, (for so the original signifies,) needs not but to wash his feet. That is, he that has once truly received the gospel, who has been "justified by faith," and entered into "peace with God," will never again require such renewal; but will require, nevertheless, continual watchfulness and prayer, that in his daily walk he may "keep himself unspotted from the world."—Ed.

‡ Had this precept been literal, there would, doubtless, have been some subsequent mention of it in the Acts or Epistles. The precept, however, is not literal, but emblematic, as the act of which it is the exposition. It is annually caricatured at Rome, when he, who proudly professes to be the successor of Peter, and blasphemously asserts himself to be the vicar of Christ, washes the feet of a company of poor; and it is truly fulfilled wheresoever one Christian, of whatsoever rank, performs an act of mercy and kindness to another; but it is violated wherever pride despises, indifference neglects, or covetousness refuses to condescend and relieve. —Ed.

the report of Jesus and his works, others are thereby filled with murderous rancour. And the more Christ honours men, the world will hate them the more. Yea, the stronger evidence of his character Christ gives, obstinate unbelievers are the more exasperated; and if God check them, they become more resolute in wickedness. But let them rage as they please, Jesus will royally triumph over all opposition, fulfil his Father's promises, and honour his perfections, in both his sufferings and glories.—Thrice happy is it, if even curiosity lead us to the saving knowledge of him, and if regard to his favourites occasion our intimacy with himself!—Great is the virtue of his obedience and death, for glorifying God, vanquishing Satan, and converting Jews, and especially Gentiles, to God. Much self-denial is necessary in following him aright. And transcendent is their reward who faithfully serve him, and, by faith, improve the light of his gospel while they have it. But great is their guilt and misery who indulge spite, devise cavils, and shut their eyes against the illuminations of his word; or who, for secular honours, avoid the open profession of his name. Abandoned by God, they go on in the ways of ignorance and self-deceit, till they land in the depths of hell. Dreadful will be their case when he, who came into the world to save men, shall judge and condemn them at last. Yea, nothing will more fearfully aggravate their guilt and punishment than abused means of salvation.

Chap. XIII.—Ver. 1, 7. You know not the reasons of what I am now doing and little think what is my meaning in it; but I will in a little time somewhat explain my design: and when the Holy Ghost shall be poured out from on high, he will further acquaint you with it, and make you to experience the benefit of it. 8. You may think your refusal is a humble aversion to my disparaging myself; but you cannot be my disciple if you set yourself against my authority, wisdom, and love: and you can have no fellowship with me, or interest in my saving blessings, unless you be spiritually washed in my blood, and, by my word and Spirit, from the guilt and filth of your sins. 10. He who is once justified and sanctified by my blood and Spirit, needs only to be further cleansed, in the daily exercise of faith and repentance, from the guilt and defilement which, through remaining corruption, he perpetually contracts by his conversation in the world. And most, though not all, of you present are cleansed in this respect. 18. I do not expect you all to be either obedient or happy. I know that, though I have chosen you all to the apos-

‡ God, in his infinity of being and perfection, must be essentially invisible to every finite creature; for it is manifestly impossible for the finite, either by bodily or mental sight, to comprehend the infinite. God, therefore, becomes "manifest in the flesh," and he that has, on examination and conviction, acknowledged Jesus to be the "Son of God," has seen all that man can see of the eternal love, the tender mercy, the overflowing goodness, the unerring wisdom, and the saving power of "God the Father."—Ed.

k Ch. 5. 17. Acts 10. 38. Heb. 2. 4.

tleship, there is one among you, sitting familiarly with us at table, that is not chosen to faith, holiness, and salvation, and who will ungratefully desert and betray me. 31, 32. Now the hour is just at hand when I, the Messiah, shall, by more remarkable sufferings and death, gloriously fulfil all my engagements in the room of elect men, conquer sin, Satan, and all his assistants, and purchase an eternal redemption; yea, all the perfections of my heavenly Father shall be harmoniously exalted in this my astonishing self-abasement, and therefore shall he honour me in my sufferings by amazing signs and wonders, and with testimonies extorted from enemies themselves; and shall speedily and suitably reward me with a glorious resurrection, ascension, and exaltation at his right hand. 34. The command of brotherly love is here called NEW, not as if it had not all along existed in the law of God, but because Christ revived it when it was sadly corrupted and almost forgotten, and enjoined it by a new example, and with new explications, motives, and enforcements, that it might be observed with a new spirit and temper, and in a new manner, as a fundamental law of his kingdom, written in his people's hearts by the spirit of the New Testament; and because it is most excellent, and will be eternally in full force.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—How affectionate and permanent is Christ's love to his people! Astonishing was his condescension for their instruction and advantage. And it is impossible to be his disciples unless he wash us by his blood and Spirit, and render us ready to obey his command, and imitate his condescension and kindness. If his providences be dark, we must wait till he explain them, and meanwhile daily apply his word, Spirit, and blood, for the further purification of our heart and life. Without hesitation we must always submit to his authority, and put all the knowledge which we have of his truths into practice. To know better, and do worse, is doubly criminal. And, alas, awful is the thought, that any, who are in profession Christ's disciples, and under the highest visible relation and obligation to him, should kick at and betray him! But fearfully Satan leads men captive at his will when they are left to their own corruptions. Yea, never is he more ready to enter into men than when they are employed in solemn acts of religion: and desertion of godly society is a common inlet to final apostasy.—It is a great mercy that the Lord knows them that are his, and will preserve them in their new covenant state and gracious course, notwithstanding all their mistakes, defects, ignorance, rashness, and self-confidence; and that, notwithstanding the most dreadful falls, he will guide them by his counsel, and afterwards bring them to his glory. Transcendent were the glories of our Redeemer in his death and exaltation to heaven; and marvellous the displays of the divine perfections in him, as manifested, and to be for ever manifested, in the salvation of men. Strong then is the reason, and plain the duty, of following him through good report and bad report, and of loving all them that bear his image for his sake.

CHAP. XIV.—Ver. 1—3. Be not discomposed or terrified at my being betrayed, nor at my approaching ignominies and death, nor at the disappointments and sufferings which ye may be called to undergo on my account; but labour to live by faith, not only on God's promises, but also on my character, offices, relations, work, and fulness, as represented in the gospel, as the effectual means of quieting your hearts. For in heaven, where my Father dwells in the highest manifestations of himself, there are many delightful abodes, and some in which ye shall have eternal rest and satisfaction after your toil and trouble on earth. If it had been otherwise, I would have faithfully and kindly undeceived you; but I am going away from you by death to purchase that glory for you, and, by my ascension, to take possession of it in your name, and to prepare everything in the best manner for your arrival thither.—And when, and as surely as, I go in this manner to prepare heaven for you, I will quickly return, by my Spirit, to prepare you for it; and will receive your souls at death, and your whole persons at my second appearance, into my immediate presence and fellowship, that ye may be for ever in a state of freedom, honour, and delight, where I already am in my divine nature, and shortly will be in my human. 6, 7. I myself am the only mean of access to, and acceptance with God, and of your receiving grace and eternal blessedness from him. I am the Way, as, by my own blood, I am entering into the holy place, and will thereby open a path for you to follow me. I am the Truth, as all the legal types and ancient promises are fulfilled in me, and as I attest the truths of God, and teach you the sure way to heaven. And I am the Life, as I have life in myself, and am the author of spiritual and eternal life to all that believe in me:—so that no man can acceptably approach to God in worship, or have any comfortable communion with him, by faith and love here, or any personal admission into his immediate presence hereafter, in any other way than by me. And if ye had known what I am in my person, natures, and office, ye would have known what my Father is, who is one with me in all essential properties. And as ye have begun to see him in the manifestations which I have made of his power and goodness, ye shall hereafter, by the descent of the Holy Ghost, and by other means, know more and more of him. 9—11. Whoever is duly acquainted with me, who am his express image, in my person, offices, and work, hath seen the most lively displays of the Father's perfections. Why then, after so long acquaintance with me, do you unadvisedly desire a visible representation of him to satisfy all your doubts? Do you not yet believe that I and my Father, though distinct persons, are essentially united, and have the most real, mutual, and intimate communion in Godhead? For neither do I preach the doctrines which you have heard, nor perform the miraculous works which you have seen, but as inseparably united to and sent by him. Believe therefore upon the authority of my word, and upon the credit of my miracles which I perform in so godlike a manner, that I and my Father have an essen-

* This promise has, undoubtedly, a special reference to the apostles, and was most literally fulfilled when Peter, not by a power inherent in himself (as was the power of our Lord), but merely by a power derived from the name of Jesus, converted, by one sermon, 3000 (Acts 2. 41, 47), and by another, 5000 souls (Acts 4. 4); and when Paul turned to the Gentiles, preached the gospel in every nation, and reared up churches in every city. And greater, by far, than all miracles upon their bodies, were these miracles of converting grace upon the souls of men. The promise has, moreover, an encouraging reference to every believer; for he that "attempts great things for God, will also, in due time, perform great things for God." See, for instruction and encouragement, almost every history of Protestant missions to the heathen.—Ed.

† If Jesus prayed to the Father, then, say the deniers of the true and proper Godhead of the Word, how could he be God? for God would thus be found praying to God. This objection proceeds upon two overnights:—1. That Jesus was as truly man as he was truly God. 2. That man prays, only in proportion as he is God-possessed. — Wherefore, as in Jesus "dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," from him, as our Mediator, must ever ascend the voice of all our necessities to the Father, and through him must come down, in reply, "every good and every perfect gift."—Ed.

A. M. cir. 4037.
A. D. cir. 33.

‡ We will come unto him, &c.—The union of Jesus and the Father in one word, "we;" and in one action, "we will come;" and in one permanent "abode" with every believer, is surely an assertion of the Godhead-attribute of omnipresence common to the Father and the Son, which is not to be resisted or gainsayed! Had the speaker been a mere man, or the highest angel, the language had been folly, falsehood, and blasphemy!—Ed.

† This is the accustomed stronghold of all who deny the Godhead of the Son. But surely, whether they assert Jesus to be mere man or highest angel, the declaration, that God was "greater" in power than either man or angel, amounts to the merest and most useless truism, conveying no new information. How, then, is the Father greater than the Son? Even as every believer is greater, not in nature, but in work, because the Son has gone in righteousness to the Father (see ver. 12), and thence supplies him with grace and power (ver. 13). Thus also the Father is greater, not in nature, but in working for the glory of the Son, than was the Son, either for his own glory or the glory of the Father. In the days of his humiliation he "finished the work which the Father had given him to do," but no more.—But the Father has reserved "in his own power" (Acts 1. 7) the "greater work" of progressively subduing all the enemies of the Son, even to the last enemy, death. 1 Cor. 15. 24.—Ed.

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him,‡ and make our abode with him.

24 He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 ¶ Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is greater† than I.

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

tial and inseparable inbeing in one another. 12—14. And I assure you, my disciples, that if ye believe in me, according to the declarations which I have made of myself, ye shall be enabled to do as great miracles as ye have seen me do; nay, be instrumental in the far greater and more extensive work of converting multitudes of Jews and Gentiles through all nations of the world;—because I will ascend to heaven, to intercede for, and send down, my Spirit upon you and them. And whatsoever ye shall ask for the glory of God, and your own assistance, acceptance, and success, upon the ground of my grant and promise, and with humble dependence upon my wisdom and power, faithfulness and grace, merit and advocacy, I will certainly perform it in answer to your prayers, that the Father may manifest his glorious perfections through my obedience and sufferings, and in my gracious and almighty works. 15—17. Since such shall be the fruits of my departure from you, instead of being anxiously concerned at losing my bodily presence, or at the disappointment of your secular expectations, show your affection to me in a conscientious respect to all my commandments.—And to encourage you herein, I, as your High Priest and Advocate, will intercede effectually with my Father for you; and he, in concurrence with me, will send you another Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply the want of my bodily presence, in instructing, assisting, and exciting you to every duty, in pleading your cause against your enemies, and comforting you in all your tribulations;—who shall not abide with you a little while, as I have done, but in every period of time and eternity: even the Holy Ghost, who, being of the same nature with me and my Father, is truth itself, infinitely faithful, and the author and teacher of all truth; and whom carnal and unregenerate men cannot entertain or embrace, because they have no true knowledge of, or affection towards, him; but ye, who are enlightened and renewed by his operation, have an experimental acquaintance with him; for he at present dwells, and works, and manifests himself in you, by his gracious and miraculous influences; and shall quickly further manifest himself in you with increasing light, power, and consolation. 18—20. And though I am going from you by death, I will not leave you destitute, exposed, friendless, and forlorn, but will pay you repeated visits after my resurrection; and will return, by my Spirit, after my ascension, to your unspeakable comfort and advantage. Shortly these wicked men, who reject, despise, and abuse me, shall see me no more on earth, but ye shall see me alive after my passion; and because I am the living God, and shall rise again to an immortal life in my manhood, and always live in heaven as the Head of my mystical body, ye shall, in union to my person, in fellowship with me, and by virtue derived from me, live spiritually, in a state of justification, sanctification, and consolation, in this world, and of glorification in the next. And when I have risen from the dead, as a triumphant Conqueror over sin and Satan, death and hell, and have poured out my Spirit upon you, ye shall begin more clearly to understand that I am essentially one with the Father, and that ye are spiritually united to me as the source of your life. 21—24. Whoever, by virtue of this union with me, not only hears, but receives, hides in his heart, and faithfully observes, my commandments, manifests his love to me; and shall in return be accepted and approved of, and delighted in, by me and my Father; and we will favour him with the peculiar manifestations of our glory; multiply the tokens of our special presence with him, by our word, ordinances, and Spirit, and continue to hold the most free and intimate fellowship with him, as the spiritual house and temple in which we desire to dwell. 26, 27. But when, after my death and ascension to heaven, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father shall, for my merit and upon my intercession, send as a Guide, Advocate, and Comforter, to supply my room and carry on my work, is come unto you, he shall lead you into a more clear and extensive acquaintance with all truths necessary to be known or preached, and shall revive in your minds the remembrance of all the particulars which ye have heard from me, that ye may fully apprehend and properly improve the same. And meanwhile, as your parting and dying friend, I not only earnestly wish for you, but promise, and effectually bestow upon you, all that solid and substantial peace and happiness which I purchase and enjoy, and which the world neither can give you nor take from you. Let therefore no apprehensions of my approaching death, nor of your own loss or trouble, discompose your minds. 28, 29. I have told you that I am just going to leave you, with a design to return and receive you into my Father's heavenly palace. If your love to me were truly spiritual, regular, and considerate, instead of being troubled, ye would, both for my sake and your own, rejoice at my departure to my Father, that I, his servant as Man and Mediator, may with him enjoy the utmost blessedness, and all power in heaven and earth, as the reward of my obedience and suffering, to exercise it for your advantage.—And I have told you these things beforehand, that, when you see them accomplished, ye may be the more confirmed in your belief of my being the promised Messiah, able and ready to fulfil whatever I have promised to you. 30, 31. I shall have little opportunity of discoursing more to you before my death; for Satan, who formerly pretended to offer me all the kingdoms of this world, and who powerfully works in the hearts of its rulers and people, is now making his last effort, stirring up his evil instruments, to unite their stratagems and force for murdering me. But he can find no corruption in me to work upon by his temptations, or to give him power over me. Nor can he hinder my death from tending to the glory of my Father, the salvation of my people, and destruction of his own kingdom, or even bring it about, without my own free consent. But to make it evident, both to friends and foes, that I love my Father, and am now heartily willing to obey his commandment in laying down my life for my chosen people, let us therefore rise from this table, and retire to the garden, whither my enemies are coming to apprehend me.

Reflections upon Chap. XIV.—What a safe and suitable object of faith is our Redeemer! All his Father's perfections shine in him as his only begotten Son

I AM the true vine,* and my Father is [a] the husbandman.

2 Every branch in me† that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and [b] every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 [c] Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 [d] Abide in me, and I in you. [e] As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for ‡ without me ye can do nothing.§

6 If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, [f] ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

and mediatorial Servant. There is no saving knowledge of, faith in, or fellowship with God, but through him. Infinite was his condescension in becoming his Father's servant, and cheerfully yielding up himself to obedience and sufferings. And great is the glory to which he is advanced as his reward. It is a sure confirmation to our faith that all his predictions are exactly accomplished. And strong is the consolation to our souls that he is our new and living way to God and glory; and that he has risen from the dead, and in our nature ascended to heaven, to secure our interest there, and provide delightful mansions for us. In death, and at the resurrection, he will therefore receive us to, and keep us for ever with, himself. His life secures ours, spiritual and eternal; and his and his Father's presence, and his Spirit's indwelling influence, shall refresh and comfort our hearts; his peace allays our troubles and our fears; his answers to our prayers supply our wants; and his instructions and influences infallibly conduct us to the heavenly mansions, where we shall sit with him on his throne, and see him as he is. Astonishing is it that he should thus manifest himself unto us and not unto the world! And if we desire further discoveries of his glory, and experience of his goodness, let us love him, keep his commandments, and faithfully follow him whithersoever he goeth.

CHAP. XV.—Ver. 1—5. In my peculiar relation to the church, I am the fountain of spiritual influence, and the means of conveying it to her members: and my Father plants and takes care of me, and of all that are connected with me. Such members of the church as are united to me only in profession and appearance, without bringing forth the fruits of holiness, he, in his righteous judgment, cuts off as unprofitable and injurious. Such as, being spiritually and vitally united to me by my Spirit and faith, bring forth fruits of righteousness, he, by the various methods of his word, ordinances, influences, and rods, purges from their remaining corruption, that they may abound more in good works, and have their end everlasting life. Now therefore, Judas being gone, ye are all my living and fruitful members, partakers of my Spirit, and inwardly purified by faith in my word, which works effectually in you: adhere therefore more and more closely by faith and love to me, as your source of perpetual support and supply; for, whatever be your present attainments in grace, ye cannot continue to perform holy obedience any otherwise than by continued union and communion with me. And the more abundantly ye cleave to me by faith and love, and have my Spirit dwelling in you, the more ye will abound in spiritual fruits, to the glory of God, and your own and others' advantage: for, separate from me, and without my continual influence, even ye, my real members, can do nothing truly good and acceptable to God. 6, 7. Such church members, as do not thus adhere to me by faith and love, shall quickly be stripped of all relation to me or my church; and their gifts, profession, and specious appearances, shall wither and die; and they shall be gathered together at the last day, as fit fuel for divine wrath, and cast into everlasting burnings. But they who steadfastly cleave to me, and have me and my word dwelling in their heart by faith, to guide, govern, quicken, and establish them, shall have everything which they request of God, for his glory and their own edification and fruitfulness, granted them to the utmost of their desires and wants. 8—11. By your thus abiding in me, and I in you, and having your petitions answered, my Father's wisdom, faithfulness, and grace, are gloriously manifested; for thus he enables you to abound in holy tempers and works, by which he may be still further glorified; and ye may more plainly appear to yourselves and to the world as my true disciples, and be approved, esteemed, and owned by me as such. For as my Father dearly loves and delights in me, not only as his eternal Son, but as the root and medium of all gracious communications to you, so I dearly love and delight in you, as branches united to me, and deriving virtue unto all holy fruitfulness from me. Cleave therefore affectionately and steadfastly to me, that ye may be still further approved of and delighted in by me. And if, from a principle of faith and love, ye cheerfully obey my commandments as your Lord and Saviour, ye shall continue to be approved and owned by me as my dearly beloved friends, even as I, in the character of man and Mediator, have cheerfully fulfilled all righteousness in obedience to my Father's commandment, and am continually approved by him, and know that he loves me.—These things have I thus freely and plainly declared to you, that I may rejoice in you, as my fruitful members; and ye may rejoice in your union with me, and in my abiding love to you; that through the influences of my Spirit, ye may have fulness of joy to support you under all your troubles and losses; and all may issue in your complete and everlasting joy with me. 12—17. The great command which I now insist on, as a proof of your sincere affection and discipleship to me, is, that you be affectionate, and ready to perform all kind offices one to another for my sake, in consideration and in imitation of my fervent love to you in laying down my life for you. For greater love I cannot show to you, who were naturally my enemies, than in dying for you, as if ye had been my most important and endeared friends. And ye will manifest yourselves to be my true friends, and be esteemed and owned by me as such, if, from the sense of my love to you, ye make conscience of a ready and impartial obedience to all my commandments.—I neither have nor will use you as mere servants, who are kept ignorant of their master's secrets, but as friends, to whom I have imparted, and will further impart by my Spirit, all the secret counsels of my Father, which are profitable for you to know or preach.—And not from any prior choice of yours, or obligation upon me, have I chosen you either to salvation or to the apostleship, but by my own grace have I made you my servants and friends, that, by virtue derived from me, ye may bring forth the fruits of righteousness in your lives and ministrations, and persevere in them, till ye and your converts propagate my cause on earth, and arrive safe in heaven: and that my Father may grant you everything you ask in my name, as your prevailing Advocate and friend, to promote these holy purposes. These things I require of you, in order that ye, after my example, may heartily love one another, as members of the same body, partakers of the same blessings, and as servants, disciples, and friends of the same Lord. 18—21. Do not wonder if carnal and worldly men, the children and subjects of Satan, hate, oppose, and persecute you; for ye know that they began with me, and have been as full of rage and spite against me, your Head and Chief, as they can be against you.—If ye were of the same carnal temper and disposition with worldly men, encouraging them in their sinful courses, they would esteem you as persons of their own party and likeness; but because ye are not conformed to them in their corrupt principles, manners, and customs, but are by me distinguished from the world, and set apart to exemplify and preach my spiritual and holy gospel, they have an irreconcilable antipathy to you. In order therefore to prevent murmuring at the maltreatment which you must meet with, often consider that you are not worthy of, nor warranted to expect, better treatment than I, your Lord and Master, have found. If then, these carnal men have reviled and persecuted me, ye may expect they will do the same to you: and if, instead of receiving the truth in the love of it from me, they have carped and cavilled at my doctrine on account of its contrariety to their depraved sentiments, tempers, and views, they will, for the same reason, set themselves against it when delivered by you.—And on account of your relation and likeness to me, and your zealous profession and publishing of my gospel, they will thus hate, oppose, and persecute you, as they have no true knowledge of God, nor of his sending me into the world to purchase the salvation of men. 22—25. If I had not in the plainest manner asserted and demonstrated my Messiahship among them, their sin, in refusing to believe in me, had been less: but since they have had so long the enjoyment of the clearest evidence of the Divinity of my person, office, and doctrine, their sin is so highly aggravated, that they can plead no excuse for it.—And whoever hates and opposes me, is an enemy to my heavenly Father who sent me, and hath given public testimony to me as his beloved Son.—Nay, if I had not wrought among them such a multitude of merciful and public miracles, as neither Moses nor any other man ever wrought in such a sovereign and godlike manner, they might still have had some pretence of excusing their infidelity, or at least of lessening its guilt: but their persisting in it, notwithstanding their being eye-witnesses of all, must proceed from a rooted enmity at the holiness and authority of both me and my Father; and is, as the Psalmist David typically foretold, a hating me without any just provocation. 26, 27. But notwithstanding their most furious and causeless enmity to my person, truths, and interests, they shall triumph over all opposition; for when that divine Counsellor, Advocate, and Comforter is come, whom I have promised, and with my Father's concurrence will send unto you,—even the Holy Spirit, who is infinitely faithful, and the enditer of all inspired truth; and who, in a divine manner, proceeds from the Father as well as from me,—he will direct, encourage, comfort, and support you under all your difficulties and dangers, and will attest my dignity and character by the further revelations which he will make, and the miraculous operations that he will enable you to perform; and will assist, own, and succeed you in confuting your enemies, and bringing vast multitudes of all nations to the obedience of faith. And under his conduct and influence, ye shall be enabled to give a noble, plain, courageous, and unexceptionable testimony to me, and my cause, in your doctrines, miracles, lives, and deaths, as persons who have, during the whole course of my public ministry, been acquainted with my discourses, miracles, sufferings, and behaviour, public and private, all along, till my ascension to heaven.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—God has made the most abundant provision in Christ for the spiritual life, growth, fruitfulness, and happiness of believers, and for advancing his own glory in and by them. Intimate, beneficial, and endearing is their union with him, and effectual his influence upon them. But without union to, and fellowship with him, there can be nothing in religion done in a spiritual or acceptable manner. While under the influence of his grace, received by faith through his word and ordinances, a most abundant production of good works may be expected. The more vigorously faith is exercised, the more will our holiness in all manner of conversation increase; and everything that we ask for God's glory and our own good, shall be graciously bestowed. But, alas! great is their folly and guilt who take up with external forms of religion instead of vital union with Christ, and by their dead works of formality and wickedness prepare themselves for infernal flames.—Infinite is his love in dying for us his enemies, and in constituting us his endeared friends. But we cannot have the evidence of our union to him, or friendship with him, but in cleaving to him. Nor can we expect the manifestations of his love, but in believing his promise, and gratefully keeping his commandments, without reserve. His love to us, and ours to him, ought to make us obey and imitate him in a sincere, affectionate, and active love to our brethren.—Thrice happy is it when he grants us his Spirit to attest his truths, and, as our Advocate, Guide, and Comforter, to animate us with holy courage in our profession of his name, and to support us under all the tribulations which we endure for his sake. And never should we wonder at, or be discouraged by, the hatred, reproach, contempt, and persecution, we may be called to suffer from carnal men for the sake of Christ, when he, our great Lord, has undergone all and much worse for us. All that will live godly must suffer persecution; and the more faithful professors are, especially ministers, the more must they expect of it.—But inexpressible will be our guilt if we pervert the clearest revelations of Christ, and render them the occasion of greater enmity and opposition to him and his gospel, his servants and followers. It is to quarrel with our own mercies, and become our own worst adversaries: and whatever we may pretend, it is all owing to our ignorance of, and enmity against, God himself.

CHAP. XVI.—Ver. 1—3. I have beforehand told you of the trials and comforts which lie before you, that ye may not be discouraged in, or turned from, your duty by my leaving you, or by the troubles which you may meet with from my enemies and yours, whose rage will lead them to all manner of violence and cruelty against you. The ecclesiastical rulers will excommunicate you from all church fellowship, as the most abandoned wretches. Nay, so furious will be their mad zeal against you, that multitudes will barbarously take pleasure in murdering you, imagining it an honour done to God, and a mean of promoting his interest in the world.—Thus they will persecute you for my sake, because, through the wilful blindness and hardness of their hearts, they neither know, nor believe in, nor love me nor my Father. 4—6. These things I have thus plainly foretold you, that, when such trials come, ye may hereby be the more confirmed in your faith in me and my words.—And I did not tell you of this sooner, because I was with you to shelter you from trials, by exposing myself, and to support and comfort you under them.—But now I am just going to leave you, and return to my Father's immediate presence in heaven; and yet ye little understand my meaning, or rejoice in my happy departure and the fruits of it, nor do ye even make inquiries about it, as ye did when ye thought I was going somewhere on earth to erect a temporal kingdom. And so much quicker are your apprehensions of things grievous than 7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; [i] It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter* will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will †reprove‡ the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 [k] Of sin, because they believe not on me;

10 Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 [l] I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you.

15 [m] All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you.

16 ¶ A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.

17 [n] Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith.

The Spirit, in his divine nature, has never been absent from the world or the church (Gen. 1. 2. Ps. 139. 7—10. 2 Pet. 1. 21); but as a Comforter he was not with the church, otherwise than in promises, and in shadows, and in types, until Jesus departed, after which he came in witness of his resurrection, bringing life and immortality to light, proclaiming his victory over death, the spotlessness of his righteousness, the prevalence of his intercession, and the certainty of his power to save. of gladdening promises, that what I have said of my leaving you, and the troubles that will ensue, hath quite overwhelmed you with sorrow. 7—11. But notwithstanding all your dejection and fears, it is really necessary, and for your unspeakable advantage, that I leave this world and ascend to my heavenly Father: for, according to our eternal counsels and the just order of things, unless I return thither, the Holy Ghost, that blessed Guide, Advocate, and Comforter, will not visit you with his richest gifts, graces, counsels, and assistances, supports and joys; but when once I am enthroned in my heavenly kingdom, I will send him to answer all the great and glorious purposes for which ye and my church shall need him.—And he, coming from on high, by virtue of my death, and in consequence of my resurrection and exaltation, shall carry on my cause in this lower world, demonstratively convincing both Jews and Gentiles of their sinfulness and misery, of the insufficiency of all their works to recommend them to the favour of God, of the sufficiency of my obedience and suffering to justify them in his sight; and of my judicial power to reform the world, overthrow the kingdom of Satan, and at last condemn to punishment the unbelieving and unrighteous. By his miraculous gifts and operations for confirming the gospel, and by his internal illumination and influences, he shall convince multitudes of the sinfulness of their hearts and lives, and especially of their great sin of unbelief in wilfully rejecting me. He shall convince them of the righteousness of my person and cause, and of the necessity and perfection of that everlasting righteousness which I am come to work out by my obedience and death, because I am now to be exalted at my Father's right hand, in testimony of his full acceptance of it in the room of an elect world;—and ye shall no more see me in this state of debasement, in which I must continue till it be finished. He shall also convince them of my power and will to renew and sanctify sinners, to destroy the kingdom of darkness, and to execute judgment upon all the finally impenitent and unbelieving; because Satan, who rules in the hearts of carnal men, is tried, and judicially defeated in all his power and claims, by my death, resurrection, and ascension; and my kingdom of light, grace, and holiness, established on the ruins of his dominion on earth; and he and his agents shall be condemned to everlasting ruin at the last day. 12—15. I have still many other things to inform you of relative to the future alterations of the state and worship of the church under the direction and influence of the Holy Ghost; but through the weakness of your faith, and the strength of your carnal prejudices, ye cannot as yet apprehend, or be reconciled to them. But when the Holy Ghost, who is faithfulness and truth itself, shall come to do his work upon and by you, he shall give you a complete understanding of the whole of divine truth relative to my gospel kingdom. And he will reveal these things unto you, not as separate from, but as one with, me and my Father, and entirely acquainted with our whole mind and will. He will also acquaint you with all that is necessary for you to know, or make known to the church, relative to time or eternity. And his manifesting to you the things relative to my person, offices, cause, and kingdom, will tend to my honour, and make you to have clear, exalted, and endearing thoughts of me, of my love, fulness, office, and work. For in this he will manifest to you what concerns my Father, as I am one with him in nature, perfections, counsels, and property; and the administration of all that he does is committed to me. 16, 20, 22. In a few hours I shall be taken from you by death and burial, and after that ye shall have but for a few days an opportunity of seeing me, and then I will ascend to my Father.—My sufferings and death shall quickly overwhelm you with sorrow and mourning, while my carnal enemies will triumph and rejoice, imagining that they have ruined me: but very soon after, by my personal visits, and the pouring out of my Spirit upon you, I will turn your sorrow into the greatest joy, the foundation of which neither men nor devils shall ever be able to shake, and of which no one can rob you. 23—27. And under this comforting light, and these influences of my Spirit, ye shall neither need my bodily presence, nor to ask information as ye now do. But I solemnly assure you, that whatever ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, shall ask my Father and yours with faith in my name, as your only Mediator, High Priest, and Advocate, he will readily grant it on my account. Hitherto ye have had recourse to me in all your difficulties, and have not well understood how to plead with him upon the ground of my righteousness, and interest with him for you.—But henceforth, in all your wants, present your petitions and pleas with faith in my atonement and intercession, that, by the gracious answers which you receive, your joy may daily increase, till it be completed. These things I have delivered to you in short substantial sentences, which, by reason of your ignorance, sorrows, and prejudices, ye do not well understand; but in a little time after my resurrection, and afterwards by my Spirit, I will make to you a free, open, and full discovery of my Father, and of all his gracious counsels; of my own person, office, and work; and of your proper method of fellowship with us: and then shall ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, offer up all your requests, with express mention of my name, and entire dependence on me.—Nor need I again in-

28 [f] I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, [g] I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 ¶ His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou [h] plainly, and speakest [i] no proverb.

30 [k] Now are we sure [*] that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: [l] by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, [m] Do ye now believe?

32 [n] Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to [†] his own, and shall leave me alone: and [o] yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world. [‡]

CHAPTER XVII.

(1) Jesus prays to the Father that he may glorify him: 1—5. (2) That he would preserve his apostles in unity and truth: 6—19. (3) To glorify them, and all who should believe through their testimony: 20—26.

THESE words spake Jesus, [a] and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2 As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3 And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, [*] and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished [†] the work which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

6 ¶ I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee:

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world, [‡] but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.

11 And now I am no more in the world,

[a] Note. It is recorded of our Lord that he continued all night in prayer, but this is the longest of his prayers of which the Spirit has left any verbal record.—Ed.

[*] This, like chap. 14. 23, has been a special stronghold of all who deny the supreme Deity of the Son of God; yet requires merely the application of one Scripture rule, the "comparing of spiritual things with spiritual" (Cor. 2. 13.) to show itself in perfect accordance with that essential doctrine. 1. Then, be it remembered that our Lord teaches us to say, "Our Father who art in heaven." 2. That the gods of the nations are idols—false gods—always on earth—never in heaven. 3. That "THE WORD was God" (John 1. 1), "and dwelt among us." 4. That, as such, he is called "the true God"—and therefore, the Father is called "the only true God"—God in heaven—not in opposition to Jesus Christ, who is "the true God," "God manifest in the flesh," dwelling among us on earth; but the Father is so called in opposition to idols, which are vanity and a lie.—Ed.

[†] The work of instruction, of miracles, of witness-bearing—the work of contending with Satan and his auxiliaries—and now I am about to enter upon the sufferings I have been appointed to undergo.—Ed.

[‡] When Christ prays he is certainly heard, (John 11. 42). But he prays not for the unbelieving, impenitent world, else were his prayer lost, which is impossible; wherefore, for them he prays not.—Ed.

form you, that I, as your great Advocate, will recommend your persons and prayers to the Father's acceptance: nay, he himself will delight to hear your prayers thus presented to him, and to manifest his affection towards, and bestow his favours upon, you as my disciples, who believe in and love me as his Son and the appointed Saviour of mankind.——28. I, who was with the Father from everlasting, voluntarily came forth from him, in a way of peculiar manifestation, into this world; and in a little time I am to leave this world and return to the Father in my ascension, that I may be glorified together with him, and may manage the concerns of my Redeemed in heaven, and, by my Spirit, apply my purchased salvation to them on earth. 31—33. Do ye now at last clearly apprehend, and firmly believe what I have said? or do ye imagine that ye are so established in the faith, that ye shall no more stagger through unbelief? Nay, to manifest my omniscience, and to warn you to be humble and watchful, I assure you that within a very little time, even this same night, ye shall all, suddenly affrighted, leave me to my murderous enemies, and disperse yourselves, for your safety, among your friends. But though you will thus shamefully desert me, my Father will assist, own, and carry me through all the sufferings which I have consented to undergo in his service and for his honour. Now all these things I have delivered to you in this farewell discourse, that, by virtue of your union with me, and by faith in me, ye may enjoy the most refreshing peace with God and your own consciences. While ye continue in this world, great troubles and persecutions for my sake will attend you; but courageously trust in me, and expect a happy issue: for, having vanquished all opposition from men and devils, I am going, through my death and resurrection, to the heavenly mansions, that, by my intercession and the outpouring of my Spirit, I may prepare you and others to dwell with me for ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Blind bigotry often raises the most furious persecution in the church; and her best friends are frequently reproached and murdered as her worst enemies. True believers are sometimes grieved at that which, properly understood, is a real ground of their joy. For how much more advantageous is it to have Jesus, our exalted Forerunner and Advocate, on his throne, than to have him always continued on earth! How great is he!—possessed of all perfections and property equally with his Father and the Holy Spirit. And thrice happy is it that this divine Spirit, who perfectly knows all the designs and mysteries of the Godhead, comes to acquaint us with all needful truth, and to glorify Jesus Christ, in revealing and communicating his fulness to us. Powerfully he convinces men of sin, righteousness, and judgment,—all to the honour of Christ.—Kindly Jesus suits his instructions to our capacities and circumstances.—But great is our dulness and ignorance, that we rightly apprehend but few of them. Powerfully he dispels our griefs, and turns them into joy by his gracious visits. But never, when we are self-conceited, are we far from danger and shame. Let me therefore always be clothed with self-diffidence, and given to pour forth prayers in his name. The Father, who loves him, and us for his sake, will not refuse us a gracious answer. And faith in, and love to him, will effectually secure his Father's delight to do us good.—What a scene of sorrow is this world! Quickly the triumphing of the wicked issues in everlasting disappointment and misery; and children are certain crosses, but uncertain comforts. They but come into a world of sin, snares, troubles, and griefs.—But if we meet with great tribulation, it is but the predicted lot of Christians. If friends forsake us, so they did Christ our Saviour. If his peace compose and victory comfort us, nothing need discourage us: and if he and his Father abide with us, our light and transitory afflictions shall work for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

CHAP. XVII.—Ver. 1—3. O Father, the time fixed in thy eternal counsel for completing my course of obedience on earth is now come. Own and support me as thy Son, under my sufferings, that, in finishing all righteousness, triumphing over sin, Satan, and death, and in ascending to heaven, I may manifest and spread the honour of all thy perfections in the world; that in the exercise of that mediatorial authority over all mankind, which thou hast allotted me as the reward of my obedience, I may freely and effectually bestow the great blessing of eternal life upon all those whom thou hast, in thy great love, committed to me as my peculiar property, trust, and treasure. And the way to, the beginning, earnest, and evidence of right to, this eternal life, and even the complete enjoyment of it, is by an approving and fiducial knowledge of thee as the only true and faithful God, in opposition to all idols; and of me as the anointed Saviour and the only Mediator, in opposition to all others. 4, 5. As I have invariably intended and manifested thy glory in the whole of my doctrine, miracles, and practice, and am just ready, without fail, to honour all thy perfections by my death, which will complete that work of the purchase of redemption which was intrusted to me; do thou therefore, according to thy engagements to me, advance my incarnate person to the highest glory at thy right hand, where I may appear in my human nature and mediatorial office like myself, and shine forth in that divine majesty which I had with thee from eternity, but which has been obscured in my debased state on earth. 6—8. As for those true believers, whom, as thine by peculiar and eternal choice, as well as by the right of creation, thou gavest to be the objects of my ministerial care, I have begun to give them a spiritual understanding of thine excellencies, mind, and will, and of my relation to thee and commission from thee; and they, under my powerful influence on their hearts, have embraced and adhered to thy truths which I taught them; and by my instructions, have been made to know and believe that all things, which I, as Mediator, have undertaken, taught, performed, or suffered, are by thy appointment and commission, and the fruits of thy infinite wisdom and sovereign grace. 9, 10. I therefore affectionately recommend to thy care, not all mankind, but only those whom, in thy purpose of election, thou didst commit to me as members of my mystical body, to be redeemed and saved by me, that thou mayest perfect everything which concerns them. And as thy right in them is so inseparably and entirely the same with mine, I pray that thou wouldest perform in them all the good pleasure of thy goodness, that I, together with thee, may be glorified in their redemption and effectual calling, and in their faith, love, worship, obedience, and eternal salvation. 11—13. And now the time is come that I must die a sacrifice for their sins, and afterwards be but little with them in this world, to instruct, defend, and comfort them; yet these but these are in [a]the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, [b]keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, [c]I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost,[*] but [d]the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 [e]And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy[†] fulfilled[‡] in themselves.

14 [f]I have given them thy word; and [g]the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15 ¶ I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest [h]keep them from the evil.

16 [i]They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

17 ¶ Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.

18 [k]As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And for their sakes I sanctify myself,[§] that they also might be [l]sanctified through the truth.

* In one body, and under one head. Eph. 1. 23.—Ed.

† How is it that "the world," out of which the disciples were taken (ver. 6), for whom Christ Jesus did not pray (ver. 9), that hated his disciples (ver. 14), and with which our Lord and his apostles had nothing spiritually in common (ver. 16), is here said to "believe" that the Father had sent him? Some solve the difficulty by taking the word "world" in two senses, viz., the one an unbelieving, and the other a believing world. But how strange must it appear, if the same word be taken thrice in one sense, and immediately after, twice in a sense the very opposite! Surely there is no necessity for this arbitrary and violent transmutation! Believing, when alone, is no mark of a change of heart (Jam. 2. 17). The "devils believe and tremble" (Jam. 2. 19). Even so, the time is coming when "the world" that hated both Christ and his disciples, will both believe and know that the Father sent the Son (ver. 23), even as multitudes of Mahometans and professing Christians both "believe and know" that he was sent, yet the one part prefer to him the "false prophet," and the other "hold the truth in unrighteousness."—Ed. 1 Col. 1. 23.

20 ¶ Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;

21 That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one* in us; that the world may believe† that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I [l]in them.

my apostles, as well as my other disciples, must, for a time remain in it, compassed about with many infirmities, temptations, and dangers.—And as I am coming to appear in thy presence for them, I beseech thee, by thy mighty power and infinite wisdom, and for thine own name's sake, to preserve them steadfast in their faith and holy profession, that, as my witnesses and chief ministers, they may be entirely united in heart and affection, testimony, interest, and designs, as we are in ours.—While I have been personally conversant with them, I have, according to thy commission, by my doctrine, example, and powerful influences, so confirmed and preserved them from apostasy, that not one of them has miscarried, except the perfidious Judas, who, by forsaking and betraying me, is just now bringing inevitable ruin upon his own head, agreeably to the ancient predictions concerning him. But now, as I am coming to be glorified at thy right hand in heaven, leaving them without the benefit of my company, to guide, protect, and comfort them, I thus supplicate thee in their hearing, that they may rejoice in hope of thy preserving, teaching, and comforting Spirit, and that their joy may be more abundant than ever it was in my personal presence. 14, 15. I have given them a spiritual understanding of, and commission to preach, thy gospel; and carnal and unbelieving men are filled with enmity, rage, and violence against them, because their principles, tempers, doctrines, and views, as well as mine, are utterly disagreeable to their carnal lusts, sentiments, and interests. However, I do not plead that thou, to deliver them from their troubles, shouldest deprive this world of their holy example and useful ministrations; but that thou wouldest preserve them from the temptations of Satan and their own remaining corruptions, and support them under, sanctify to them, and carry them through, all the persecutions which they may meet with before they have finished their work. 16—19. They are already of such a religious temper and disposition, and engaged in such excellent work, as is directly contrary to the inclinations of carnal men, even as I myself have been before them. Let this holy temper and practice be maintained and increased in them by means of thy word; and by the anointing of thy Spirit, let them be consecrated to serve thee in propagating gospel truth. For as thou hast sent me into the world with a commission to preach thy important and infallible truths to mankind, I have authorised them to carry on the same work, wherever Providence may cast their lot, after my departure from them. And for this, as one great reason, have I devoted myself to the mediatorial office, and am going to consecrate myself by suffering and death, that they, through the truth, may, by the Holy Ghost, be consecrated to, fitted for, supported, and succeeded in preaching it. 20, 21. Nor do I only pray for such preserving, supporting, sanctifying, and comforting influences to my apostles; but to all who, in this and the following ages, shall be brought to a saving faith in me, by means of their publication of the gospel;—that the whole number of believers, in all generations, may be joined together as one body, in faith and love, worship and obedience, by one spirit, in as near a resemblance as possible to that union which we have by our mutual inbeing; and that, in their measure, they may be united to us; that others, beholding the powerful effects of the gospel on them, may be induced to believe in me as the promised Messiah, 22, 23. And in pursuit of this great design, I have given them an interest and subordinate partnership in that glory which thou hast given me, as their Head, Representative, and Trustee; that, as members of my mystical body, and joint heirs of God with me, and partakers of my Spirit, they may be united in the most close, honourable, and beneficial manner, In order to which, I will dwell in them by my Spirit, according to their measure, as thou dwellest in me by him without measure, that they, being joined to me, may attain to the most perfect union they are capable of, in one spiritual body, under me as their Head;—that by means hereof, multitudes of both Jews and Gentiles may clearly and satisfactorily perceive and believe that I am the Christ whom thou hast sent into the world for the redemption of men; and that thou hast a peculiar, affectionate, and delightful love to them for my sake, some way resembling that supreme love which thou bearest to me as thine eternal Son and their Mediator. 24. And I further claim, that, according to my purchase and thy agreement, all those whom thou hast given me to receive eternal life, be in due time admitted into thy immediate presence in heaven, where I already am in my divine nature, and for ever shall be in my entire person;—that there they may have an appropriating, blissful, and transforming vision of that glory which thou hast bestowed on me as their Head and Representative, because from all eternity thou hadst an infinite delight in me, as thy Son and their Surety, who engaged to glorify thee in their salvation. 25, 26. All these things do I ask from thee, not only as thou infinitely hatest all impurity, and lovest me, and them for my sake, but as thou art a righteous and faithful Father, ready to give them whatever I have purchased for them. As for the unregenerate worldlings, they are ignorant of, and reject thee and thy counsels: but I am thoroughly acquainted with thy nature, perfections, and will; and these my apostles have known and received me as the true Messiah, whom thou hast sent for the salvation of Israel.—And as, according to my commission, I have fully declared to them whatever was proper, and have savingly enlightened them in the knowledge of thyself, I will, after my resurrection, by personal visits, and after my ascension, by the effusion of my Spirit, more clearly and fully acquaint them with thy glorious perfections and will, that the infinite love with which thou hast from eternity loved me, may extend to, and manifest itself in them; and that I may dwell in their hearts by faith, till they arrive at that perfection of eternal blessedness, which, in thy distinguishing love, thou hast prepared for them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—It is necessary to conclude important advices, and prepare for impending temptations, by fervent and solemn prayer, and with heart and eyes lifted up unto God. In what a dignified manner Jesus intercedes for his elect, particularly his ministers, upon the footing of his own finished righteousness, and his Father's perfections manifested, and promises ratified thereby! It is impossible for those to fall short of grace or glory who are interested in such prayers, which so closely connect the glory of God and the good of men.—Marvellous is his exaltation and his saving power! And thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of him as the only Mediator, and of his Father in him. His glorification of his Father's perfections, by fulfilling all righteousness in our stead, wonderfully secures eternal glories to himself, and conversion, perseverance, and everlasting happiness, to all his true members. And by our holding fast his doctrine, by our holiness in heart and life, and giving him the glory of all that we are and do, he marks our relation to him as his elect children.—Great is the mercy that all our spiritual knowledge, faith, holiness, and eternal happiness, are secured in and by him: and that though he be no more in this world, his word and Spirit are left to supply his room. This polluting and insnaring world is the greatest

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, [a] he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for [b] Jesus oft-times [*] resorted thither with his disciples.

3 [c] Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, [d] knowing all things that hould come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, [e] stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground. [†]

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: [f] if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way;

9 That the saying might be fulfilled, which he spake, [g] Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 ¶ [h] Then Simon Peter, having a sword, [‡] drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 ¶ Then the band, and the captain, and officers of the Jews, took Jesus, and [i] bound him,

13 And led him away to Annas first: (for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that same year. [k])

14 [l] Now Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die [§] for the people.

15 ¶ And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another [‖] disciple: that disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest.

16 [m] But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 [n] And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals, [*] (for it was cold,) and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ [o] The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, [p] I spake openly to the world: I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? [q] ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by [r] struck Jesus [†] with the palm [‡] of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, [s] If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why [§] smitest thou me?

24 ([t] Now Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.)

25 ¶ And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. [u] They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 [x] One of the servants of the high priest (being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off) saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 [y] Peter then denied again: and immediately the cock crew.

28 ¶ [z] Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the [‖] hall of judgment: and it was [a] early; [b] and they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled; [*] but that they might eat the [c] passover.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

e Is. 3. 9. Jer. 3. 12.

† By what peculiarity in the appearance or manner of our Lord this was effected, does not appear. But as the band, which was, doubtless, of Roman soldiers, must have heard much of the miraculous powers of Jesus, and as they had with them such light as would give full display to his person, it is not improbable that some indescribable heavenliness in his appearance, manner, or voice, produced an effect upon them, which, if not directly miraculous, was, in every sense, supernatural, and amounted to an acknowledgment of his kingly dignity. And, perhaps (as Boothroyd supposes), our Lord intended by this power over the soldiers, to show to his disciples that he could have escaped if he had pleased.—Ed.

enemy to his saints. But while multitudes of professors, and even noted preachers, are eternally ruined by its influence, Christ's prayers, the directions of his word, and the influences of his Spirit, will carry all his true children safely, and even comfortably and honourably, through it. If we be not carnally disposed, we shall quickly get to heaven, out of the reach of carnal men. For if Jesus devoted himself to sufferings for us, he will advance us to glory with him. Whatever good work he once begins shall be carried into perfection: and if his ministers need to be eminently holy, steadfast, and faithful, he offers up particular prayers in their behalf: and if he send ministers, he will make their labours effectual for increasing, uniting, and edifying his mystical body the church. Let carnal men deride it now as they will, they shall be made to know that Christ and his people are one in law, spirit, temper, and design. And while his enemies are ruined by their ignorance, his people shall be admitted into the most immediate vision of, and fellowship with, him, in his glory and in his Father's love.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, [d] Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, [e] It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 [f] That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.*

33 [g] Then Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself,† or did others tell it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, [h] Am I a Jew?‡ [i] Thine own nation and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me: what hast thou done?

36 [k] Jesus answered, [l] My kingdom is not of this world.§ If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, [m] Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth?‖ And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, [n] I find in him no fault at all.

39 [o] But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 [p] Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAPTER XIX.

(1) Jesus is scourged and crowned with thorns: 1—3. (2) Pilate desirous to release him, is overborne by the clamour of the Jews, and delivers him to be crucified: 4—22. (3) They cast lots for his garments: 23—25. (4) He commends his mother to the care of John: 26, 27. (5) He dies: 28—30. (6) His side is pierced: 31—37. (7) He is buried by Joseph and Nicodemus: 38—42.

THEN [a] Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted [b] a crown of thorns,* and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail,† King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man![†]

6 [c] When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We have a law,‡ and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid,§

9 And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore ‖ he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, [d] If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cesar.

13 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, * Gabbatha.

14 And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cesar.

16 Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he, bearing his cross, went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha;

* This is now the second time (see ch. 18. 38.) that Pilate, as a Gentile judge, has borne witness to the innocence of our Lord.—Ed.

† Behold the man!—From this example, as well as in ch. 18. 38, it is apparent that Pilate was a sententious and laconic speaker nor is it easy in either case precisely to pronounce upon his meaning. The Scriptures have left us not a single trace of the personal appearance of our Lord; yet it is not improbable that Pilate saw in the countenance of our Lord such evident marks of sincerity, guileless simplicity, and innocence, that he makes this appeal to the compassion of the Jews—as if he had said, "Behold the man you have accused, and let his meek, subdued, patient, and innocent aspect, excite your pity, while I pronounce his release!—Note. While such was, probably, the secret thought of Pilate, Providence overrules it to make him still further a witness for, and, as it were, a preacher of Jesus.—Ed.

‡ Either the law against false prophets, Deut. 18. 20) or that against blasphemy (Lev. 24. 16).—Ed.

§ His previous fear does not seem to have arisen from the danger of condemning an innocent man, for of that he afterwards showed himself perfectly capable; but he must have heard of Jesus as a worker of miracles, and stood in awe of his power; or, being convinced that he was king of the Jews, he may have dreaded some tumult of his partisans, in the event of his crucifixion.—Ed.

‖ Therefore, &c.—To discover the grounds of this conclusion has greatly perplexed commentators. Might we venture to suggest one additional solution, it would be this:—Take the words "Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above," as parenthetical, and consider the words "Therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin," as a reply to Pilate's assertion of despotic authority, "I have power to crucify thee, and I have power to release thee,"—and the reply is most applicable:—"Therefore he that delivered me (to a judge determined to assert, and act upon power, and not upon justice and mercy) has the greater sin; his own sin aggravated by that of the judge his accomplice."—Ed.

sions. Nor did I ever teach aught in private that I did not teach openly.—Let then my hearers, whether friends or foes, be examined as to what they heard me deliver. 36, 37. My kingdom is altogether spiritual and heavenly; consisting in a dominion over men's souls and consciences, and not over their secular affairs.—Nor does it in the least interfere with, or tend to the disturbance of, civil government; if it had, I should have allowed my followers to fight for my protection or rescue.—I freely own myself a king; but, to satisfy you that my kingdom is not of a worldly constitution or design, know that God hath sent me into this world, that, by my preaching and miracles, I might reveal and confirm the truth, and that alone, concerning God and myself, and the way of salvation to sinful men. This is the mean of my conquests and government; and every one that is acquainted with, and begotten by, the word of truth, heartily believes and embraces my testimony, and becomes my willing subject.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Garden retirements should at once lead our thoughts to Adam's ruining fall, and to the gracious promises and redeeming sufferings of Christ. Amazing was his willingness to die for us, who thus went forth to meet his murderers. And after showing his ability to strike them dead, he readily resigned himself into their hands, in obedience to his Father's will. Why then should danger or death ever deter us from faithfully owning his cause? Kindly he proportions his people's trials to their strength, and preserves them by offering himself a sacrifice in their room. And his cause is to be maintained by his ministers by weapons not carnal, but mighty through God. Yea, the most hasty in their zeal are seldom the most steadfast in his service. But hardened indeed are men, when even awful miracles cannot restrain their wickedness and folly. Dreadful is the nature of sin, that brought God, in our nature, under such debasement and suffering. And infinite was his kindness and condescension cheer-

19 ¶ [f]And Pilate wrote a title,[*] and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written [g]in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

23 ¶ [h]Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam,[‡] [§]woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, [i]They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶ [k]Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of [l]Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the [m]disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, [n]Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

28 ¶ After this, Jesus knowing [o]that all things were now accomplished,[‖] that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a spunge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop,[*] and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished:[†] and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

fully to submit to all, for our sake. O my soul, let the treachery of Judas, the rage of Jews, the repeated denials of Peter, the cowardly injustice of Pilate, serve me as a glass to view myself, as a warning to watchfulness, and to avoid fellowship with sinners. And let the wisdom, meekness, and boldness of Christ be my pattern. Let me adore that wonderful providence which overruled all for the fulfilment of scripture, the glory of God, and salvation of men. And never let me condemn persons or things because they are run down by the multitude.

Reflections upon Chap. XIX.—What struggles are there in the breasts of carnal men between the convictions of their conscience and their care of their secular interests;—between the terrors of God and the fears of men! But indulged lusts dreadfully bear down all religion, truth, and equity.—How shocking is it to behold the men of Israel persecute their divine King with outrage, indignity, and barbarity! Yet more amazing to behold the God of heaven giving up his only begotten Son into the hands of such vile and savage miscreants! But, lo, even the marks of disgrace proclaim his character, and spread his renown! Astonishing is his meekness, patience, and holy fortitude, under all his sufferings. Remarkable his filial regard to his mother, and his dying trust in his heavenly Father. And while his hypocritical persecutors pretend ceremonious scruples of conscience amidst their obstinate violation of important precepts, the blood and water streaming from his heart verify the scripture, mark him really dead, and figure out our justification by his blood, and sanctification by his Spirit. And to magnify the grace of God, fulfil the predictions of the prophets, and honour the crucified Redeemer, disciples, who had long been timorous and afraid to own him, are emboldened at such an important crisis to give him an honourable interment.—Now, my soul, behold the God-man, who was falsely accused, that I might be honourably acquitted;—was wounded and scourged, that by his stripes I might be healed;—was clothed with a robe of derision, that I might be clothed with robes of righteousness and garments of salvation;—was crowned with thorns, that I might wear a diadem of glory;—had his royalty insulted, that I might be made a king unto God;—was condemned, that I might be justified;—bore his own cross, and was crucified on it, that he might bear my sins and carry my sorrows;—was numbered with transgressors, that I might have a cup of salvation, joy, and praise;—and finished transgression and suffering, that I might be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation.

THE [a]first day of the week cometh Mary[*] Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the [b]other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together, and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, [c]saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and, as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre,

12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw [d]Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not;[*] for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to [e]my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ¶ [f]Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut[†] where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. [g]Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: [h]as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, [i]Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 [k]Whose soever sins ye remit,[‡] they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain,[§] they are retained.

24 ¶ [l]But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, [m]We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand[‖] into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶ And after eight days, again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, [n]Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, [o]Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, [p]My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: [q]blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶ And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

a Mat. 28. 1, 2. Mark 16. 1—4. Luke 24. 1, 10.

* The diversities in the four narratives of our Lord's resurrection present no contradictions; and while they testify that there was no private concert between the evangelists to produce a "cunningly devised fable," their textual difficulties may all be removed by the following principle, legitimately deducible from a combined view of the whole:—1. There were two companies of women—one of which immediately after the interment, on Friday, returned to the city, to prepare (purchase) spices (Luke 23. 55, 56. & 24. 1.)—A second, consisting of the two Marys and Salome, who still lingered in deep sorrow near the sepulchre (Mat. 27. 59—61), and did not buy their share of the spices till the Sabbath (Saturday) was past (Mark 16. 1).—Note. Though Mary Magdalene is mentioned here alone, because she alone ran to tell Peter and John, yet it is evident, from Mark 16. 1, that she had come in as one of a company. 2. That there were two visions of angels, and two separate addresses to two separate parties. 3. That Simon went at first time to the tomb, and returned unbelieving (John 20. 9); and a second time, and returned "wondering in himself," yet unbelieving (Luke 24. 12); when Jesus appeared to him (Mark 16. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 5), yet left him still in unbelief (Mark 16. 14); and finally yielded credence to the reality of the resurrection when sense and prophecy and the Spirit of God rendered further resistance impossible. See for a more detailed solution of the difficulties in the narrative of the resurrection, either Grotius, West, Doddridge, Pilkington, Townson, Cranfield, or Townsend, &c. West is said to have been an infidel, and being determined to write against Christ's resurrection, sat down to study the gospel narratives. But as he read the Spirit of God enlightened his eyes; and, like Paul, who preached him whom once he persecuted, so he produced an unanswerable defence of that resurrection which, in his blindness, he had purposed to overturn.—Note. The apparent contradictions between Mark 16. 18, 14, and Luke 24. 34, may easily be reconciled, by rendering the passage in Luke thus: "Is then the Lord risen indeed, and hath he (really) appeared unto Simon?" An exclamation of wonder, or question of doubt, not an assertion of belief.—Ed.

† The statement that "the doors were shut," is, no doubt, intended to declare the miraculous nature of our Lord's appearance. And, while no man may pronounce with certainty on the manner of effecting his entrance, the simplest seems that exemplified, Acts 5. 19, 23. & 12. 4, 6, 7, 10—the instant obedience of nature to the will of its Lord.—Ed.

‡ Remit.—To whomsoever ye shall preach redemption through my blood (Eph. 1. 7), they, on believing your testimony, shall receive that forgiveness which you promise (Mark 16. 16. Acts 2. 38).—Ed.

§ Retain.—And whomsoever ye shall, in my name, and upon my authority, and by my Spirit, pronounce guilty, they shall be held guilty. But these three conditions are essential both to the remitting and retaining of sin; and without them, every human pretension to either power is blasphemy and usurpation.—Ed.

* This cannot be an exclamation, for then it would have been a breach of the third commandment, which Jesus must have approved (Mat. 5. 19), instead of which (ver. 29), he interprets it as an evidence of faith, and furnishes thereby one of the plainest and most irresistible testimonies to the union of the divine and human natures in the person of Christ.—Ed.

CHAP. XX.—Ver. 17. Do not stay now to express your affection to me in this manner, as you will have repeated opportunities of seeing me before I ascend to my heavenly Father; but run quickly to my poor disconsolate disciples, whom, notwithstanding their late defection, I still love as much as ever, and esteem as my brethren, and heirs of the same glory with myself; and tell them that I am risen to an immortal life, and not to set up a temporal kingdom among them on earth; and am, after some time, to ascend to the right hand of God, who is my Father by nature, and theirs by regeneration and adoption, and who is my God as their Mediator, and their God as they are my members. 21—23. I now effectually confer my promised peace upon you; and as my Father hath sent me into the world to discharge the office of Mediator, so I, as the Head of the New Testament church, appoint you, as my apostles, to preach the gospel to both Jews and Gentiles, and to confirm it with miraculous signs wherever you go. And receive ye now the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, which I can as easily convey as I thus breathe upon you, to enlighten your minds, and strengthen your faith in me as a risen Saviour, and as an earnest of that plentiful effusion which ye shall in a short time receive for your spiritual illumination, sanctification, and consolation, and for your assistance and success in the ministerial work which I commit to you. And this shall be attended with such divine authority, that whomsoever ye, according to the gospel, declare pardoned as a believer, or absolved from church censure as a penitent, he may take the comfort of forgiveness and absolution, as ratified by my authority: and whomsoever ye declare unpardoned

CHAPTER XXI.

(1) The Lord appears again to his disciples, and is discovered by the miraculous draught of fishes: 1—11. (2) He eats with them: 12—14. (3) Questions Peter concerning his love to him, and commands him to feed his lambs and his sheep: 15—17. (4) Warns him of the manner of his death, and rebukes his curiosity concerning John: 18—24. (5) The conclusion: 25.

AFTER [a] these things* Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of † Tiberias; and on this wise showed he himself.

2 [b] There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night [c] they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: [d] but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, ‡ Children, [e] have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, [f] Cast the net on the right side§ of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore; and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore [g] that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is [h] the Lord. Now, when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,‖) and [i] did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship, (for they were not far from land, but as it were *two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw [k] a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.†

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

* Some commentators have ventured to call in question the authority of this chapter, not because it is wanting in any MS., but merely because they think it contains matter of too little consequence. 13 [l] Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now the [m] third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So, when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, [n] Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me [o] more than these?† He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; [p] thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, [q] Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed‡ my sheep.

17 He saith unto him [r] the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was [s] grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, [t] thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, [u] Feed§ my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt [x] stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying [y] by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, [z] Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple [a] whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and [b] what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry [c] till I come,‖ [d] what is that to thee? Follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Strong and many are the evidences of our Saviour's resurrection, that fundamental article of our Christian faith. An opened grave, his graveclothes orderly placed, the testimony of angels, and his own repeated appearances, and even the jealousies of disciples, concur to render it unquestionable. But marvellous was his condescension and kindness to such as had forsaken him in his extremity—to Peter, who had denied him, and to Thomas, who had so perversely indulged the most obstinate unbelief. He gives them his peace, owns them for brethren, and qualifies and appoints them to preach his gospel. Great is the mercy that we have all this recorded by eye-witnesses directed by the Holy Spirit, that we may believe it, to the eternal salvation of our soul. And that we have the weekly sabbath as a stated season of intercourse with our Saviour. If we love him much, eagerly and early, through darkness and danger, we shall push our way into his presence. For to a tenderhearted Christian the felt absence of his Lord is the most distressing and insupportable. But often that is mourned over which is a great ground of rejoicing. And Jesus and his consolations are frequently at hand when we know not where to find him. He takes delight to recognise his relation and hasten to our help. And neither shut doors, slavish fears, nor unbelieving hearts, can hinder his gracious visits. Yea, the stoutest hearts delightfully melt in confident believing, under the transcendent intimations of his love.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Often repeated, miraculous, and manifest, are the proofs of Christ's resurrection. And it is highly criminal to doubt of it after so many satisfactory documents. With what wonders of divine power, condescension, and kindness, he shows himself to his people! He is often near them while they know it not, and is better to them than they expect; or even visits them before they look for him. The sight of him powerfully draws out the heart of penitent beholders. And neither danger nor death can restrain their running to him. He delightfully prospers the labours, notices the circumstances, and supplies the wants of his people. But if they have been ashamed of, or in any way departed from him, their love to him must be thoroughly tried; happy are they who can prove it by their superlative esteem of, and faithful appeals to himself. And if we know that he first loved us, let our former falls lie heavy on our heart; and let us, without indulging vain curiosity, follow him through sufferings and death.—Without his direction, ministers spend themselves in vain in fishing for souls: but under his guidance and influence, multitudes are brought to him; nor can their gospel net be ever broken. The weakest souls must be equally taken care of as the strongest. Nor can ministers ever truly manifest their love to Jesus without earnest care and labour to feed his lambs and sheep with his gospel provision.—And blessed be the Lord that his own oracles have no uncertainties, and need no human supplements. On their contents we may safely rest the eternal salvation of our souls.

CONCLUDING REMARKS AND ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF JOHN.

The young student of the Greek language who attempts, in any degree, to become his own teacher, soon discovers some surprising difference between the style of John and that of the preceding Evangelists. He can read his Gospel with comparative ease, while he finds the difficulties of the others nearly insuperable. This simplicity of construction forms a beautiful example of the teaching Spirit, "becoming all things to all men, that he might (instruct) some;" furnishing "milk to babes," while abounding in "strong meat" for them who "are able to bear it."—ED.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 14. Mark says "it was the third hour, and they crucified him" (chap. 15. 25); John says, "it was about the sixth hour," even before he was delivered to his enemies. The most common method of reconciliation is that of Eusebius, who states that the Hebrew numeral for "the third" was mistaken by the early transcribers for the Greek numeral for "the sixth." In this reading seven of the best MSS. concur: it is also supported by several of the early fathers, and adopted bythe most learned modern commentators. But, in opposition to all these authorities, the early versions of this Gospel have all "the sixth hour"—an evidence of authenticity scarcely to be overborne. Perhaps a better solution of the difficulty may be found in the difference between the Jewish and Roman modes of commencing the numeration of hours. The Jewish numeration commenced at sunrise; the Roman, at midnight—so that, "about the" Roman "sixth hour" corresponded with the time about the Jewish first hour—most probably half-past the Jewish one o'clock A.M., at which time, according to John, Jesus was "delivered to be crucified" (ver. 16). Now as it is evident from Mat. 20. 12, that the Jews counted their hours from their commencement, and not from their conclusion, this would leave barely an hour and a half till the Jewish "third hour." And considering the slowness with which the mass of spectators could emerge from the hall, and advance through the crowded streets; and allowing a sufficient time for the procession to Calvary, which lay without, though near to the city (Heb. 13. 12; John 19. 20; and Robinson's Geography, pp. 64—80); and adding the time necessary for completing the cruel preparations for the crucifixion—it will be easy to perceive how this hour and half would be occupied; and the accounts of Mark and John perfectly harmonized.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 25. Contain.—This is no hyperbole, a figure totally incompatible with the derivation of the Scriptures from "the Spirit of truth." To "contain" a book is not to afford it room as an article of furniture, but to retain it in the memory, and digest it in the judgment. In this sense, a minute and complete narrative of "all that Jesus began to do and to teach" (Acts 1. 1), with all the immediate bearings and effects of every word and action, would, instead of a portable volume, suited to every man's time and capacity, have formed a library too voluminous for the leisure and study even of the most learned.——Ver. 25. Written.—These words form an incontrovertible evidence that the Scriptures (and not unwritten tradition, or the church) are the true and infallible rule of faith.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

[The Gospel by Luke and the Acts of the Apostles are both dedicated to Theophilus; and as the author of "The Acts" calls the Gospel his "former treatise," there is, therefore, internal evidence, with which all antiquity agrees, that the book of "Acts" was written by Luke. As it continues to the second year of Paul's imprisonment, it could not have been finished earlier than A.D. 64 or 65. The object of the writer was, evidently, not a complete history of the Christian church during the period which his narrative embraces; for he passes over all the affairs of the church at Jerusalem subsequent to the conversion of Paul; furnishes few records of the labours of any other apostle; while some he never mentions at all. Nor was it his object to write a complete history even of Paul, his companion; for he passes over in silence some of the most remarkable events of his life, such as his journey into Arabia, three of his shipwrecks, and his exposure and perils among the robber hordes of the deserts. His objects were higher than these, however gratifying they might appear to a pious curiosity, and however instructive as examples of devotedness and zeal. The object of Luke was mainly to record the wonderful effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, thus teaching the church that, without the Spirit of God, all other qualifications are impotent; to furnish a few specimens of apostolic preaching; to record some of the principal miracles by which the gospel testimony was confirmed; and to bear witness to the admission of the Gentiles into the Christian community.

This being the last historical book of the Scriptures, it is worthy of remark, that not one of the sacred biographers, from Moses to Luke, ever attempts to produce "a hero"—a man superior to all his contemporaries—the idol of historic worship! The Bible alone tells truth! Paul is introduced as a guilty murderer! and, subsequently to his conversion—though the writer passes no opinion—he faithfully records the fact, and leaves us to judge for ourselves, whether Paul or Barnabas was in error in that "sharp contention" that separated them in the work of the mission, chap. xv. 39. Yet the Bible produces really great characters! Men devoid of every ambition but to do good! Men capable of sacrificing every hour of ease, every prospect of emolument, and hope of honour; of undergoing every toil, of enduring every persecution, of repaying kindness for every injury, of rejoicing in tribulation, of hoping against hope, of enduring to the end; neither depressed by failure, nor rendered vain by success.—Self nothing—Jesus all! Such was Moses—such the prophets—such the apostles; and such, in some measure, must be every one who, "through faith and patience, would inherit the promises."—ED.]

THE [a] former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, [b] of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 Until the day in which he was [c] taken up, after that he [d] through the Holy Ghost [e] had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:

3 [f] To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them [g] forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 And, [*] being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 [h] For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, [†] they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom [‡] to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power:

‡ Restore the kingdom.—Not merely by breaking the Roman yoke, but by overturning the Pharisaic or Sadducean oligarchy, and re-establishing the constitutional monarchy of David? This idea of an immediate temporal kingdom still haunted the disciples; and, in prospect, is still the hope of the Jewish nation, unless where, alas! they have become totally infidel. The answer of our Lord (ver. 7,) seems clearly to intimate that a national restoration is one of the purposes of Providence, though the date of its accomplishment has not been revealed.—ED.

8 [1] But ye shall receive [*] power, [†] after the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be [k] witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 [l] And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 ¶ And, while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in [m] white apparel;

11 Which also said, Ye [n] men of Galilee, [o] why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, [p] shall so come in like manner [‡] as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 ¶ Then returned they unto Jerusalem from [q] the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem [r] a sabbath-day's journey. [§]

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an [‖] upper room, [t] where abode both [t] Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

14 [u] These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days [x] Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the [y] names together were about an hundred and twenty, [*])

16 Men and brethren, [z] this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was [a] numbered with us, and had obtained part of this [b] ministry.

18 [c] Now this man purchased [†] a field with the reward of iniquity; and, [d] falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called, in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, [e] Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his [f] bishoprick let another take.

AND when the day of Pentecost [*] was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them:

4 And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling [†] at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. [‡]

6 Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

8 And [a] how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The most glorious and uncontrollable evidence is given us of the resurrection and exaltation of our once crucified Redeemer, that through him our faith and hope might be in God. Great numbers of disciples had frequent opportunities of seeing and conversing with him after his death, and could not possibly mistake him for any other. Yea, saw him ascend, in our nature, to heaven, and heard the angel's attestation concerning him. Most gladdening truth! He has carried our nature to the right hand of God, and will in due time return, for our salvation, to judge the quick and the dead. And infinite is the mercy, that in his absence he has, by promise and fulfilment, secured for us the presence and influence of the Holy Ghost to supply his room, and to own, assist, and comfort us in his work. Let us then, in a humble dependence on, and patient waiting for him, avoid all carnal views of his kingdom, or curious prying into God's secrets. For there is need of great activity in his honourable work, and of preparation for his second coming, at which we must give our account. While the world rages in wickedness, let united devotions be the delight of our souls! The joint effectual fervent prayers of righteous men avail much. But O the inexpressibly terrible end of treacherous ministers! Their honour or wealth avail them but little in the day of God's wrath. Happy is it when God, even by terrible things in righteousness, degrades and punishes them for the confirmation of his truths,—and supplies their room with such as are qualified and faithful. And great care ought to be taken that none but such be admitted. But if God testify his call and approbation, all ought to receive 13 Others,† mocking, said, These men are full of new wine.

14 ¶ But [e] Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the ‡ third hour of the day.

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days,§ (saith God,) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:‖

21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.*

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands† have crucified and slain:

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death; because it was not possible‡ that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 [f] Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer [g] thine Holy One to see corruption.

28 [h] Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, * let me freely speak unto you [i] of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, [k] and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 [l] He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 [m] This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof [n] we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore * being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended† into the heavens: but he saith himself, [p] The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel [q] know assuredly, that [r] God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now, when they heard this, * they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, [t] Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission‡ of sins, and [u] ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For [x] the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off,§ even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he [y] testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 ¶ [z] Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 [a] And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread,‖ and in prayers.

43 [b] And fear came upon every soul: and [c] many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

† If Jesus was delivered by "the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God;" "why doth he yet find fault? for who hath resisted his will?" God hath said it, and "who art thou, O man, that repliest against God?" (Rom. 9. 19.) But, still it is questioned, if God "determined" that the event should come to pass, how could those who fulfilled his will be "wicked?" or, if God "determined" the act, is he not thereby represented as the author of sin? This, if really a question, is fair and reasonable—but if a cavil, most worthless and foolish. God cannot be the author of sin; for God is love (Jam. 1. 13. 1 John 4. 8.) God therefore does not, cannot, "determine" that men should sin—that is, should become "wicked." But God "foreknows" that men, of their own rebellious hearts, will sin, will be "wicked;" and God, as a judge, "determines" to give them up to their own hearts' lusts, and to walk in their own "counsels" (Ps. 81. 12. Rom. 1. 24, 28.) So that while men act freely, the event is "determined," because the judgment "giving them up" is fixed and certain.—Ed.

(1) A lame man cured: 1—11. (2) The cure ascribed to Jesus, and the people reproved for rejecting him: 12—16. (3) Their ignorance admitted and repentance urged: 17—26.

NOW [a] Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth *hour.

2 And a certain man, [b] lame from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful,[†] to [c] ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

4 And [d] Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, [e] Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and [f] immediately his feet and ancle-bones received strength.

8 And [g] he, leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

9 [h] And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and [i] they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in [k] the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

‡ How could they be said to have denied Jesus "through ignorance," in face of all his miracles? Their eyes were blinded through prejudice in favour of a temporal king and conqueror, and therefore the meek and lowly Jesus they could not acknowledge. Reflections upon Chap. II.—It was impossible that Jesus, who, by obedience unto death, had satisfied his Father's law and justice, should be held a prisoner in the grave. And glorious are the fruits of his resurrection and exaltation to his Father's right hand. Yea, astonishing is the effusion of the Holy Ghost thereby to qualify his preachers, and to convert hearers.—Quickly he comes to them, who, with united hearts, wait and cry for his presence. And he can suddenly effect a great spreading and understanding of the gospel, and fulfilment of ancient predictions. What bold resolution he gives his lately so timorous disciples! How open their avowal of Jesus' Messiahship, Divinity, and resurrection from the dead, where he had been lately crucified as a notorious malefactor! Great is the wisdom and power of God in thus overruling the wickedness of men for his own glory, for the honour of Christ, and the salvation of men. But his purpose, or overruling providence, in no respect excuses or extenuates our guilt. Alas, how perversely men will continue opposing and reviling the most evident manifestations of God's power and goodness till the Holy Ghost begins to work in their heart! But then the most wonderful effects will follow—the deepest impressions of divine truths—a thorough conviction and self-debasement—earnest inquiries after salvation—the most unfeigned faith and sincere repentance—dedication of men's riches and their children to the Lord—faithful subjection to Christ and to his gospel—joining in religious fellowship with his people—an observation of his commandments—delightful and reverential regard to his ordinances—grateful praise for his kindness, and zeal for his glory—heavenly-mindedness, contempt of this world, and compassionate love to poor fellow-saints—and a daily addition of members to the church.

(3) Peter and John are interdicted from preaching any more in the name of Jesus: 13—22. (4) On the report of Peter and John, the church praise God, who again pours out the gifts of the Holy Ghost: 23—31. (5) Great unity of spirit and liberality in the church: 32—37.

AND as they spake unto the people, [a] the priests, and the [*] captain [†] of the temple, and the [b] Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached [c] through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and [d] put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now even-tide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand. [‡]

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that [e] their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas [§] the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had [f] set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, [‖] or by what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, [g] filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by [h] the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 [i] This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation [*] in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now, when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned [†] and ignorant men, they marvelled; [k] and they took knowledge [*] of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 [l] And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, [m] they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, [n] What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us [o] straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, [p] Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 [q] For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So, when they had further [r] threatened them, they [s] let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, [t] because of the people: for all men glorified God for [u] that which was done.

22 For the man was above [x] forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was showed.

23 ¶ And, being let go, they went [y] to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard [z] that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, [a] which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, [b] Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For, of a truth, against thy [c] holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, [d] both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together,

28 [*] For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined [†] before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threaten-

† See note on chap. 2. 23. It is the counsel and purpose of God to save sinners —Jesus Christ comes to fulfil that purpose, saying, "Lo, I come to do thy will." That will must needs be fulfilled by the death of the Redeemer, (Heb. 9. 16.) and God "determines" two things in his "counsel," and fulfils them by his "hand:" first, to give up his Son to die for sinners; secondly, to give up sinners to their own will, so that, while rebels to his law, they shall yet most assuredly accomplish his work.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. III.—Thrice happy are they, whose hearts are so fitted for devotion, that the returning seasons of it, in public or private, are always welcome! And if men heartily love prayer, they will never think morning and evening too frequent for it. Many, rich in faith, are poor and destitute in this world: but the blessings of grace do more than balance their wants. It is good to attend God's ordinances in expectation of his favours. If he apprehend us by his Spirit, we shall lay hold on him by faith. And if we obtain his deliverances, we ought to triumph in his praise, and even dearly to regard the honoured instruments of our deliverance. But the more God honours ministers, the more should they lay out themselves for his honour, and take every opportunity of doing good to souls.—How glorious is our exalted Saviour! And safely may we believe his apostles' testimony concerning him. In him ancient predictions are fulfilled. And through believing dependence on his power and authority the most amazing miracles have been wrought. Marvellous is the wisdom and power of God in making even the most daring wickedness of men the great means of bringing about our salvation! And extensive is the instruction, ample the pardons, effectual the reformation, and abundant the blessings, which Jesus Christ bestows on the chief of sinners. What delightful encouragement is this to faith and repentance, that, in his seasons of mercy, we may find rest and refreshment to our souls! What excitement to rejoice in his exaltation, and to wait for his return to judgment!

* Since, in ver. 3, they are accused of lying to the "Holy Ghost," and here of lying to "God," it follows, without question, either that the apostles spoke in a most unguarded manner, or that the Holy Ghost is God. But in an unguarded manner they could not speak, for they spoke by the Holy Ghost himself; therefore, he must be God, and in this case is represented as searching and communicating the secrets of men's hearts—manifesting his Godhead by the attribute of omniscience. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Men, who heartily hate one another, often cordially unite in opposition to Christ, his gospel, and his servants. But it is delightful when fierce persecution animates to a prudent zeal for Christ's honour, and when he balances it by the conversion of multitudes of hardened sinners. For if ministers preach Christ faithfully and successfully, they must expect trouble for it. Rich, full, and free is that salvation for sinful men which is in him alone. It is necessary always to believe and receive it, and in our stations, to exhibit and declare it. Excellent is the cause of the gospel; and nothing but absurd rage, and overbearing violence, can ever oppose it. But in the most violent opposition Jesus can inspire his most cowardly servants with wisdom and courage to make an open and bold confession of himself and his truths; and by them he can confound their most potent and learned opposers, and even convince their consciences of the inconceivable advantage of fellowship with him. Easily he restrains the wrath of men, and makes the remainder of it to praise him. And it is manifest, that, however despised by men in authority, he is the head and Lord of his church. In every case it is much better to obey God than men. He is the almighty JEHOVAH, the Maker and Governor of all things. Nothing happens without his permission and appointment. All events are a fulfilment of his inspired oracles, and execution of his ancient decrees. In every time of need let us therefore address him by solemn prayer. Often he hears and answers in mercy while his people are yet speaking. And if he be with us, we need neither fear nor anxiously care who is against us. He knows every plot and every threatening of our enemies; and his presence and blessing are sufficient to encourage our perseverance in much tribulation. Heavenly is the delight and comfort that his Spirit can produce in our hearts. Yea, he can even make us rejoice in persecution for his sake. And glorious is the church when ministers are remarkably faithful and useful, and Christians so knit together as to be ready to give all they have for the relief of their indigent brethren.

THE APOSTLES DELIVERED FROM PRISON.

Acts V. 19.

20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people [x] all the words of this life."

21 And when they heard that, [y] they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. [z] But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, [a] The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors; but, when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now, when the high [b] priest, and [c] the captain of the temple, and the chief priests, heard these things, they [d] doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 [e] Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them [f] without violence: (for [g] they feared the people,† lest they should have been stoned.)

27 And when they had brought them, [h] they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them,

28 Saying, [i] Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and [k] intend to bring this man's blood upon us.‡

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, [l] We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 [m] The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew, and hanged on a tree:

31 [n] Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance§ to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And [o] we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also [p] the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 ¶ When they heard that, they [q] were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named [r] Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

* Josephus places an insurrection under Theudas in the fourth year of the reign of Claudius. But this may be true, without any impeachment of the accuracy of Luke, for Theudas was a common name among the Jews; and as there were several insurrections, two may have occurred under a leader of the same name.—Ed.

† False systems of religion have again and again succeeded in the world, and still continue, either where they have superseded Christianity, or where they have corrupted it. Does not this experience therefore contradict the doctrine of Gamaliel? No. Two circumstances, totally wanting in Christianity, have always characterized the false systems that have been successful in the world:—1. Every such system has flattered existing prejudices, adopted existing opinions and practices, or ministered to the baser passions of men. All these Christianity rejected, opposed, or mortified. 2. Every such system has had founders possessing such worldly learning, or employing such worldly means as obtained them influence with worldly men. Christianity had none of these means: its preachers twelve poor unlearned Galilean fishermen; its converts despised; and their only visible means, preaching boldly, bearing patiently, and praying continually. The eventual success of such a system, sustained by such inadequate means, Gamaliel did, therefore, rightly assume as a certain evidence of its divine origin.—Ed.

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theudas,* boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow† it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—It is impossible to find a church on earth without tares; or much Christianity without some hypocrisy. Satan's temptations and men's own corruptions, particularly covetousness, easily lead them into lying and falsehood. But most heinous is this in dealing with God, as it is a direct contempt of his all-seeing Spirit. And yet, if Satan fill our heart, he will delude us into it; and even our nearest relations will encourage us in it. Seriously then should we guard against prevarication with that God, who can strike liars and dissemblers dead for the honour of his gospel and church. And happy is it when such events deter hypocrites from joining her.—Well would it be if men showed as much care for their souls as most do for the health of their bodies! But, alas, with what blind fury do many, under pretence of religion, set themselves against Christ's eminent ministers, and fight against God; and by endeavouring to render them despicable, study to prejudice hearers against them! Yet his counsel and work shall stand, to the defiance and confusion of every opposer. At his pleasure prisons become paradises, or open their doors; marvellous miracles are wrought for the attestation of truth; the fury of the haughtiest rulers is restrained; the multitude is awed, and the church increased, amidst attempts to destroy her. Yea, learned, potent, and even inveterate enemies, are made advocates for his cause. If then we endure terrors and reproaches for his sake, we may despise them, or even glory in them. And let us always publish the praises of our once crucified, but now risen Redeemer, who is exalted as a Prince and a Saviour, freely to give repentance and forgiveness of sins to the most heinous transgressors.

CHAPTER VII.

(1) Stephen answers for himself, by instancing the personal appearance of God to Abraham, the heir of the promise of Christ: 1—19. (2) The fathers chosen before Moses was born, the tabernacle or temple erected: 20—36. (3) Moses a witness for Christ: 37—43. (4) All ceremonies temporary: 44—50. (5) He reprehends the Jews for the rejection and death of Christ: 51—53. (6) He is stoned to death: 54—60.

THEN said the high priest, [a] Are these things so?

2 And he said, [b] Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; [c] The God of glory appeared unto our father* Abraham, [d] when he was in Mesopotamia,† before he dwelt in Charran,

3 And said unto him, [e] Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.

4 [f] Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

† The Israelites were neither "evil-entreated" nor "in bondage" during four hundred years. The difficulty, however, is easily removed by a parenthesis, thus:—"That his seed should sojourn in a strange land (and that they should bring them into bondage, and evil-entreat them) four hundred years." For reconciling the four hundred years quoted by Stephen from Gen. 15. 13. with the four hundred and thirty recorded in Exod. 12. 40. and Gal. 3. 17, see note on Exod. 12. 14.—Ed.

* Here are two difficulties:—1. According to Gen. 23. 19. and Josh. 24. 32. the sepulchre of Sychem was bought by Jacob, and not by Abraham. 2. Jacob was buried, not in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre (Gen. 49. 30. & 50. 13). To reconcile the first, it is generally admitted by expositors, that "Abraham" has, by the oversight of a transcriber, been substituted for "Jacob;" but while nearly all MSS. have "Abraham," and none "Jacob," the substitution of "Jacob" seems totally unauthorized. May not both difficulties be solved by filling up the ellipses thus:—"But Jacob went down into Egypt, and died there, he and our fathers; and they were all carried over (our fathers) to Sychem, and buried (he, Jacob) in the tomb which Abraham had purchased, for a sum of money, and (they the fathers) in the tomb that Jacob had purchased from the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem." A similar construction, in which the nouns are all placed in the beginning, and the verbs in the end of the sentences, may still be frequently found in legal documents and in Latin epitaphs. And to the Jews, who were perfectly familiar with the history of their fathers, the statement of Stephen would thus be understood.—Ed.

1 Ex. 1. 8—22. Ps. 105. 25. & 129. 1—3.

† Or, fair to God.

5 [g] And he gave him none inheritance* in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.†

7 And [h] the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place.

8 And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve ‡ patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy,§ sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt, and all his house.

11 [i] Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction; and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, [k] threescore and fifteen souls.‖

15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers,

16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham* bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor, the father of Sychem.

17 ¶ But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt,

18 [l] Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilely with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In which time Moses was born, and was † exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

Reflections upon Chap. VI.—It is hard to manage much business without much inconvenience, and even some reflections. But it is shameful that money matters should occasion discontents among church members, who are otherwise of one heart and soul.—And to prevent this, it becomes us to use the strictest impartiality in the management of the money, and all other matters of churches or states. It is a great sin and reproach to many Christian congregations, that the office of deacons, so clearly appointed in scripture, should be so much contemned. And it is necessary that every church officer be intelligent, pious, and prudent; and that church members be always required to choose their own officers, small or great. No patrons or presbyteries can pretend more fitness to choose for others than the inspired apostles, who refused it. It is dangerous and awful when ministers give themselves to idle chat, unprofitable reading, unnecessary sleep, or civil business, instead of their important ministrations and fervent prayer. But when gospel ministers are faithful and diligent, God often works by them miracles of grace in the conversion of sinners, even of profane clergymen, whose spiritual case is peculiarly desperate. But, alas, how maliciously carnal men set them-daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 [m] And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.

23 And [n] when he was full forty years old,* it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but [o] they understood not.

26 [p] And the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, [q] ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, [r] Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday?

29 [s] Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 [t] And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sina † an [u] angel of the Lord ‡ in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, [x] he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, [y] the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. [z] Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, [a] Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 [b] I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. [c] And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses whom they refused,§ saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? [d] the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer [e] by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, after that he had [f] showed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years.

37 This is that Moses which said unto the children of Israel, [g] A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, * like unto me; him shall ye hear.

38 [h] This is he that was in the church † in the wilderness with the angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers; who received the ‖ lively oracles to give unto us:

39 [k] To whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts ‖ turned back again into Egypt,

40 [m] Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 [n] Then God turned, ‡ and gave them up to worship [o] the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, [p] O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, [q] ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I [r] will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 ¶ Our fathers had [s] the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, [t] that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen:

45 [u] Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus § into the possession of the Gentiles, [x] whom God drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 Who [y] found favour before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 [z] But Solomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit [a] the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet,

49 [b] Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: what house will ye build me? saith the Lord; or what is the place of my rest?

50 [c] Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 ¶ Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: ‖ [d] as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who have received the law by the disposition of * angels, and have not kept it.

54 ¶ When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, being full of the Holy Ghost,

* There is a tradition that the apostles were commanded by our Lord to abide twelve years in Jerusalem; but no value can be attached to it. Much simpler reasons may be assigned for their firmness:—1. Although they had received the gift of the Holy Ghost, it is probable they expected still something more from "the promise of the Father," (Acts 1. 4), and, therefore, did not judge themselves as yet at liberty to depart. 2. The peculiar courage evinced by Peter and John (Acts 4. 19), and by all the apostles (5. 29, 41), will fully account for their remaining when others fled, (see Neh. 6. 11). 3. ‡ Thy money perish with thee—seems an awful imprecation, scarcely reconcileable with charity; to avoid which appearance, others have represented it as a prediction. A more literal translation will remove both interpretations, and exhibit the address as neither imprecation nor prediction, but a mere warning of the tendency, and, without repentance, of the result, of Simon's trust in deceitful riches:—"Let thy money abide with thyself unto loss." "You can gain nothing substantial or permanent by it—move all, it cannot purchase the gift of God. Wherefore, repent, and seek for mercy and pardon."—"If, perhaps," &c., does not imply any doubt of the fulness of mercy in God, but a question whether Simon was at all sensible of his sin, or likely to look to Jesus for repentance and forgiveness.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—If we are called to account for our faith and hope in Christ, let the oracles of God be our sole defence: they all relate to him. In them he is represented as the God of glory; as the angel JEHOVAH, who appeared to the patriarchs; and as the worker of wonders for, and giver of laws to his people. He was prefigured by Moses and Joshua, David and Solomon, their distinguished rulers, and by the tabernacle and temple; and is now exalted to the right hand of God as the object of all religious adoration.—Infinitely faithful is God to his covenant promises: all are fulfilled in their season. But very mixed and mysterious is the conduct of his providence. Great perplexity and distress often usher in the most remarkable deliverances. And God's favourites are in general tried before they are honoured. It is a distinguishing mercy to be, even in our ancestors, early taken into his covenant, and to be always under his special direction, government, and care. And thrice happy are they, who not only have his ordinances established among them, but are themselves made his meet habitation through the Spirit!—But, notwithstanding all his awful or delightful providences towards his church, many hypocritical professors are more fond of rites and ceremonies, or of their own idolatrous inventions, than of either his law or his gospel. Obstinately they revolt from him, resist his Spirit, persecute his servants, and reject him and his salvation, to their own everlasting perdition.—Kindly and honourably Jesus stands by his faithful confessors; fills them with the Holy Ghost, Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. *

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace † queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and ‡ had come to Jerusalem for to worship,

28 Was returning, and, sitting in his chariot, read Esaias the prophet.

29 ‖ Then the Spirit ‡ said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, ᵇ Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, ᶜ How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, ᵈ of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. §

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; ᵉ what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, ᶠ If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they ‖ went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away * Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way ʰ rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found † at Azotus: and passing through he preached ⁱ in all the cities, till he came to Cesarea.

‖ From the act of "going down into (or unto) the water," no argument can be drawn for immersion, to the rejection of sprinkling, in baptism. That question must be settled by a reference to the use of the word baptize—the customs of the Jews, from which baptism was derived—apostolic practice, so far as it can be ascertained from Scripture—and the order of the primitive church, so far as it is not inconsistent with, or evidently derived from, and founded upon, Scripture. From all these sources of information combined, it will, most probably, appear evident to the impartial inquirer, that both immersion and sprinkling are authorized by Scripture, and the use of the one or of the other a matter committed to circumstances and the feelings of individuals or churches.—Ed.

AND ª Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him ᵇ letters to Damascus * to the synagogues, that if he found any of ᶜ this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 ᵈ And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus; and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou ᵉ me? †

5 And he said, ᶠ Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said, ᵍ Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, ʰ hearing a voice, but seeing no man. ‡ §

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, ‖ he saw no man: ⁱ but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days ᵏ without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ ˡ And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called ᵐ Saul of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, *

12 ⁿ And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that ° call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way:

* Prayer, private, habitual, humble, earnest, confiding, and persevering, is a striking and peculiar mark of a true convert. and grants them clear and seasonable manifestations of his glory. If enemies cast them out and murder them, he stands ready to embrace, support, comfort, and carry them to heaven. With the greatest confidence of faith may they therefore commit their departing souls to him; and imploring forgiveness to their murderers, with glory and triumph fall asleep in his arms.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—It seems hard and inexplicable that eminent ministers should be murdered when they begin to be remarkably useful. But the wisdom of God makes the blood of martyrs the seed of the church, and overrules the persecution of his servants for the spread of his gospel. And it is wonderful to see sometimes the most noted ministers protected amidst the fury of outrageous persecution; and that, while hell and earth rage against the gospel, Jesus Christ shall thereby convert multitudes to himself. If we believe his truth, we ought speedily and solemnly to devote ourselves to him and his service. But, alas! through ambition, covetousness, or other vicious inclinations, many profane the seals of his covenant, and publicly pretend to be his when they are not; and from mercenary views, many are too readily admitted as members or officers in the church. Dreadful will it be if a Saviour perceive them at last in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity! in an unconverted state! Yet it is to be feared that many ask, and rely on the prayers of others, who never heartily pray for themselves.—But no awful discovery of hypocrites must discourage ministers from going on with their work. While vengeance lights on the heads of dissemblers, true believers shall be instructed and strengthened in their most holy faith; and by following the means of grace which they have, they may hope to meet with a blessing, or even to receive means more eminent. If we be humble searchers of God's word, and often call ourselves to an account whether we understand it, he 36 ¶ Now there was at Joppa§ a certain disciple named Tabitha,‖ which, by interpretation, is called ¶ Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and alms-deeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an [m] upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not† delay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and showing [n] the coats and garments which Dorcas made,‡ while she was with them.

40 [o] But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and, turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up; and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive.

42 [p] And it was known throughout all Joppa; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in [q] Joppa with one Simon a tanner.§

will send us an interpreter. And much of Jesus Christ may be seen in the scriptures, if our mind be enlightened by his Spirit. Yea, nothing so affects the conscience as the gospel record concerning him.—What strange methods God sometimes takes to send the gospel to nations answerably to his own promises!—Shortived is the delightful fellowship of Christians on earth. But if Jesus and his Spirit go with each, all may go on their way rejoicing.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—Some of God's elected people may go the most fearful lengths in sin before their conversion, to manifest that it must be merely of free grace. Yea, great is their madness, their malice, against the Redeemer; and all at their own infinite hazard. How irrefragable are the proofs of our Saviour's exaltation to his Father's right hand! He has appeared and spoken from heaven with divine majesty and glory; and through an authoritative use of his name, by faith, has healed the sick and raised the dead;—even the dead in trespasses and sins. Victorious and sovereign also is his grace. It strikes the most daring sinner into trembling and astonishment; stops his career of wickedness, and makes him all concern, all resignation, all obedience to his will; gives him a heart to pray, and turns the furious persecutor into a zealous preacher of the faith which he had once destroyed. No wonder that both saints and sinners are amazed at the marvellous change. Through great distress and darkness the elect are sometimes brought into their new covenant state, to their spiritual comforts, and remarkable usefulness in the church. But the miraculous convert is gradually imboldened and strengthened, to the silencing and confounding of every opposer. With great caution ought church members to be admitted; but never should those, whom Christ has marked with his grace and truth be rejected.—It is impossible for Christ ever to want instruments for carrying on his work. If he find them not, he can make them, and can easily take away all their objections and discouraging difficulties. Nor can the most furious malice, nor the most crafty plots, cut off one of them till their work be finished. Whenever he pleases he can turn threatenings against, and slaughter of his people, into rest and peace,

CHAPTER X.

(1) Cornelius, a devout Gentile officer, sends for Peter, who is taught by a vision that God intends the gospel for the Gentiles: 1—33. (2) When he preaches Christ to Cornelius and his friends, the Holy Spirit is given, and they are baptized: 34—48.

A. M. cir. 4045.
A. D. cir. 41.

THERE was a certain man in Cesarea called Cornelius, a [a] centurion of the band called the Italian band,

2 [b] A devout* man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.†

3 He saw in a vision evidently, about the [‡] ninth hour of the day, an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are [c] come up for a memorial [§] before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 [d] He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea-side: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, [•] Peter went up upon the house-top [‖] to pray about the sixth hour:

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but, while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And saw [f] heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth;

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, [g] Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common [•] or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, [h] What God hath cleansed, [†] that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: [i] and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 ¶ Now, while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men [k] which were sent from Cornelius had made inquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate,

† And prayed to God alway.—Not intermingling, as some did, an occasional prayer to God, with others to idols; and one that habitually and statedly worshipped God at the accustomed hours of prayer.—Note. Prayer should never be mechanical or ostentatious, but, for sustentation of the divine life, it must be habitual and regular.—Ed.

§ The "memorial" was a part of the sacrifice (Lev. 2. 16), presented specially to God, in testimony and remembrance that the petitioner was a true worshipper of God by sacrifice—(by typical acknowledgment of the Lamb of God)—and had called upon God for pardon and salvation.—Note. Neither prayers, nor alms, nor other good works, can justify a sinner, either in whole or in part, (Rom. 3. 20, 31. Gal. 3. 10—14.) yet are they fruits and memorials essential to a living faith (Jam. 2. 17); necessary to the promotion of growth in grace (2 Pet. 3. 18); to the support of the personal assurance of faith (2 Pet. 1. 5—10); to the silencing or convincing of gainsayers (1 Pet. 2. 12); and to the visible and filial exhibition of the glory of our heavenly Father. 18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on [l] the vision, [m] the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 [n] Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing; for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, [o] Cornelius the centurion, a just man,* and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. [p] And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, [q] and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and [r] worshipped him.

26 [s] But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found [t] many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know [u] how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath showed me [x] that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, [y] as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was [z] fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in [a] bright clothing,

31 [b] And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.†

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea-side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

and can fill them with the comforts of the Holy Ghost, that they may be multiplied and edified. Pleasantly then do ministers visit churches, and impart benefits in the name of their Master. Thrice happy are they when their faithful ministrations issue in the conversion of multitudes. 34 ¶ Then Peter [d] opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation, he that feareth him,* and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 [e] The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he [f] is Lord of all:)

37 That word, I say, ye know, [g] which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How [h] God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him.

39 And [i] we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew, and hanged on a tree:

40 Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly;

41 [k] Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

43 To him give all the prophets witness, that, through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. †

44 ¶ [l] While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. [m] Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

For had it been a false religion, a "cunningly-devised fable," its first propagators would "have compassed sea and land to make a proselyte;" and, like the missionaries of Rome in Paraguay and China, would have yielded every accommodation to the opinions, prejudices, and practices of their pupils, instead of which we find them not only refusing converts upon any but the most stringent terms, and contending with their very leaders, when they appeared to relax their exclusive discipline.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. X.—It is an honour for persons of all ranks to be devout and liberal, and to worship God in their families as well as in secret. And how does this Roman soldier shame many professed Christians, who, on the most trifling pretences, neglect the worship of their Maker, who scarcely know what it is to observe family devotion, and who take no more pains in the religious education of children and servants than if they were beasts! God takes great delight to increase their knowledge and comfort who sincerely practise what they know, and earnestly ask his further direction. And though our best actions cannot render our persons acceptable to God, yet, if they are agreeable to his perfections and law, he graciously rewards them.—It is by men, not by angels, that we must expect to be taught.—With tender care God removes the conscientious scruples of his servants, and prepares them beforehand for their duty. And never are we more ready to receive his direction than when we are engaged in solemn prayer. Cheerfully therefore ought all, especially ministers, to go whithersoever he, in his providence, calls them, hoping for success, whatever impediments lie in their way. Gospel preachers ought to be gladly received and kindly entertained; and as many friends as we can influence be encouraged to share their instructions. With the deepest reverence and attention ought we to hear and believe the truths of God, on which depend our eternal salvation and his glory. And with their utmost care ought preachers to make known Jesus Christ in his person, offices, debasement, and glory, as the source and mean of our whole salvation, and as our great Judge, to whom we must quickly give an account. It is a delightful season when the Holy Ghost, with supernatural influence, attests the truths preached, and applies them to the hearts of hearers. Cheerfully they then surrender themselves to Jesus,

Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, [o] that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, [p] Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as [q] Phenice,* and Cyprus,† and Antioch,‡ preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem; and [r] they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch:

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God,§ was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled ‖ themselves with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians* first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them named Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world:† which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cesar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the [s] elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

† The word translated "world" is one of very indefinite application—sometimes describing the lands inhabited by the Greeks, sometimes those jointly inhabited by Greeks and Romans, sometimes confined to Palestine and its immediate dependencies, as Luke 2. 1, 3. & 21. 26.—Note. Four famines are recorded in the reign of Claudius, but none of them general. Indeed, among the merciful dispensations of Providence, there is one very remarkable, that a famine is seldom, if ever, universal; but while one country is visited with drought or deluged with rain, other, and even neighbouring, countries, are blessed with fair weather and fruitful harvests, by which the wants of other lands may be supplied. This seems to have been the case in the present instance, as the people of Antioch were able to afford a liberal collection to relieve their brethren during the famine at Jerusalem.—Ed.

NOW about that time [a] Herod the king * stretched forth his hands [b] to vex certain of the church.†

2 And he [c] killed James‡ the brother of John with the sword.

3 And [d] because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take [e] Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And [f] when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions§ of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter‖ to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but * prayer was made [h] without ceasing† of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have [i] brought him forth, the [k] same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains:‡ and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; [m] and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; [n] which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, [o] that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

and avow their faith in him. Cordially they praise him for his kindness, and desire to be more acquainted with, established in, and edified by his truths.—But O with what astonishing condescension, and marvellous operation of providence and grace, has God extended his gospel to us, unclean and brutish sinners of the Gentiles, and has made of both Jews and Gentiles one gospel church, so making peace!

Reflections upon Chap. XI.—Delightful are the tidings of sinners receiving, and being converted by, the gospel of Christ. The salvation of souls, the honour of Christ, and the glory of God are hereby highly promoted. And it is strange that even saints should be sometimes prejudiced, when their enemies, or persons of detested characters, are made partakers of the same spiritual blessings as themselves:—that rash censure should so often drop from gracious lips, and godlike charity should be reproached as looseness in religion! But ministers must bear with the weak; and though no unreasonable prejudice should ever hinder the execution of their commission, they should be always ready to clear their conduct to scrupulous minds. And every Christian also ought gladly to hear and receive anything that may tend to remove his prejudices.—What! are we to withstand God, who distributes his favour as he pleases, and overrules the fury of persecutors for the spread of the gospel and conversion of sinners? Thrice happy are they to whom he freely grants that repentance which manifests spiritual life received, and prepares them for the eternal life promised hereafter.—When his Spirit and power attend the preached gospel, multitudes believe and are turned to the Lord, and cleave to him with fixed purpose of heart. And with alacrity and diligence do ministers then attend their increasing work. Delightful is the name, and great the honour, to possess the privileges and tempers of Christians; and especially to act up to the profession and obligations included in the character! Happy had it been for the church if no other character had ever marked the followers of Christ. With harmony in the truth, with holiness and order, ought such to hold fellowship one with another: and with great cheerfulness should they supply one another's

NOW [a] there were in the church that was at Antioch certain [b] prophets and teachers; as [c] Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger,[*] and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, [†] which had been brought up with [d] Herod[‡] the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they [*] ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said,[§] [e] Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And [g] when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4 So they, [h] being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia;[‖] and from thence they sailed to [i] Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis,[*] they preached the word of God [k] in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also [l] John[†] to their minister.

6 ¶ And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos,[‡] they found a certain [m] sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Barjesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) [n] withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

wants; none of which can take place without the foreknowledge of God. Yea, he sometimes wisely plunges his people into calamities, for the trial, exercise, and improvement, of their own or others' faith, love, and self-denied obedience, and for the removal of groundless differences among them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Whether should we here most admire the wickedness of men in promoting, or the wisdom of God in overruling, the persecutions of his church? Alas what selfishness, pride, rashness, and cruelty, to murder one of the best, the most useful of men! And infernal the malice to take pleasure in it! But men-pleasers will lead themselves at last into the greatest guilt: and success in one sin will imbolden them to commit another. The united and fervent prayers of the saints will prove in the end too hard for all that oppose them. If God bestow his Spirit of grace and supplication, to make intercession with groanings which cannot be uttered, deliverance is at hand. And in their extremity, though often not till then, he will rise up for their help. And if ordinary means cannot avail for their preservation, he will work miracles for them. Nay, prophets, the [u] rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and, beckoning with his hand, said, [x] Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience.

17 [y] The God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, [z] and with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 [a] And about the time of forty years suffered[*] he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And [b] when he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that [c] he gave unto them judges, about the space of four hundred and fifty years,[†] until Samuel the prophet.

21 [d] And afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.[‡]

22 And when he had removed him, he [e] raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.[§]

23 [f] Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus;

24 [g] When John had first preached before his coming the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John [h] fulfilled his course, he said, [i] Whom think ye that I am? I am not he: but, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 [k] Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because [l] they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which [m] are read every sabbath-day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 [n] And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, [o] they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.[‖]

30 [p] But God raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his [q] witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers,

33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.[*]

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure [†] mercies of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in another psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.[‡]

36 For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.[§]

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish:[‖] for I work a work[*] in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.

43 Now, when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath-day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy,[†] and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles:[‡]

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

‖ And laid him in a sepulchre. — This statement seems to disagree with John 19. 38. &c., in which, as well as in the other evangelists, his sepulture is ascribed to Joseph of Arimathea and his other disciples. The difference may easily be removed by the most simple and natural supposition, that some of the Pharisees who took so deep and malignant an interest in securing and watching the tomb (Mat. 27. 62—66), had also taken an insulting and triumphant part in the funeral procession and act of sepulture.—Ed.

* This day have I begotten thee—that is, from the dead (Rom. 1. 4), even as every Christian is said to be "begotten" on the day of his conversion, of his spiritual resurrection (1 Cor. 4. 15. Phil. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 3. 1 John 3. 1, 10). But the address does not ascribe his Sonship to his resurrection, for he had already been acknowledged as "Son" by a voice from heaven—by his disciples on earth — and he himself had openly asserted the title before the Jews (Mat. 3. 17. & 16. 16. John 10. 36). Besides which, the eternity of the Father implies the eternity of the Son—he being described as "that eternal Life that was with the Father," (1 John 1. 2) and to whom (as Son) the Father saith, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever," (Ps. 45. 6, 7.) and, "Thou, Lord (JEHOVAH), in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands" (Ps. 102. 12, 25. Heb. 1. 8, 10).—Ed.

‡ Of "the Holy One of God" (Jesus Christ) it is expressly declared, that he "should not see corruption." Wherefore, it is impossible the doctrine of transubstantiation can be true. For while that doctrine asserts that a piece of bread becomes, by what is called "consecration," the very body, and blood, and soul, and divinity of Christ, it admits that that same transubstantiated bread (body, &c.) may, and often does, see corruption. Wherefore, because it sees corruption, it cannot be the body of Christ. See ver. 37.—Ed.

§ Justification by the law of Moses is simply this:—"He that doeth these things shall live by them." (Rom. 10. 5.) By that law, therefore, no sinner could ever be justified; that is, pardoned, and accepted as righteous before God. But "being justified by faith (in Jesus Christ), we have peace with God," having "redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of our sins," being made, through grace, "accepted in the Beloved." ‡ The Gentiles—that is, to the Gentiles of Antioch (ver. 42), but not to them, to the neglect or exclusion of the Jews; for even Paul, the apostle of the Gentiles, still continued to preach fervently and affectionately to the Jews. Ch. 17. 2.—Ed.

even by ordinary means, he can hide them from their most inveterate foes. But proud persecutors quickly meet with an avenging God. The prudent submission of neighbours, and the servile flattery of friends, but lift them up, that their destruction may be the more terrible. God seasonably cuts them off in the midst of their pomp and grandeur; and makes their fall, as well as their fury, subservient to the propagation of the gospel.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they [r]were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained [*] to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 ¶ But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 [s] But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

Taking the examples in order, six unquestionably signify "appointed," or "constituted," by authority or decision of another, a superior. The last alone appears to signify "self-devoted," but that must still be under the power of the Spirit of God, (1 Cor. 12. 6, 11. Phil. 2. 13.) so that no other conclusion can be drawn but that "believing" and "eternal life" are alike the gifts of God, the heavenly productions of free and sovereign grace.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. XIII.—Important is the work of preaching the gospel; and absolutely necessary for it is the direction of God's Spirit and providence. He qualifies his servants for it, calls them to it, and directs and succeeds them in it: and with pleasure and courage they may set about it, if satisfied of their divine call. But Satan and his instruments will certainly oppose them in it with great warmth and earnestness, especially if great sinners and persons in power appear to be converted by it. Great will be their subtilty and mischievous ardour in opposing the gospel,—the right ways of the Lord. All the arts of sorcery and infidelity; all the fury that blind zeal, temporal interests, and envy, can inspire; all the powers of this world are stirred up to oppress it. But no weapon formed against Zion shall prosper. For under the influence of the Holy Ghost the word shall the more spread and be glorified. Very important are the tidings it brings us concerning the promised Saviour; for whose being born, crucified, and raised from the dead, according to the ancient oracles of God, all former dispensations towards Israel but paved the way.—By infinitely wise and seasonable advances has the knowledge of Jesus Christ, and a full redemption through him, spread and prevailed in the world. Thrice happy are they who receive him as the light of life and propitiation for sins. From eternity they were chosen in him to everlasting life. In time they are justified through his righteousness imputed, even from crimes for which the ceremonial laws allowed no expiation. They are endowed with the presence, supplies, and consolations of the Holy Ghost, and enabled to continue in the faith, profession, and obedience of the gospel, notwithstanding the most cruel persecution.—If among these converts some be remarkable for sense, others for stupid idolatries, all marks the sovereignty and power of gospel grace.—But, alas! great is their sin and danger, who, notwithstanding their visible relation to him, reject the Redeemer, and set themselves to reproach his servants, his truths, and ways. They thrust the gospel and eternal life from themselves, and provoke God to cast them off with abhorrence into everlasting perdition. Take heed, my soul, to hear only such preachers as the Holy Ghost has qualified and regularly placed in their office. Let no station make me think myself above the gospel: and let no sinfulness make me reckon myself below it. Let reading and hearing of God's word be my constant delight. And let me carefully observe all providences in connexion with Christ. Regarding the word of salvation he hath sent, and receiving the sure mercies he hath given, let me serve my generation according to the will of God, and then fall asleep in the Lord.—If I am justified, let me manifest it by my good works.—If I have grace implanted in my heart, let ‖ Things strangled.—Animals killed by suffocation, or twisting the neck, and in which the blood was retained.—Ed.

¶ From blood.—Whether this precept, originally delivered to Noah (Gen. 9. 1—7), be still binding upon the Gentiles, is a point upon which much difference of opinion prevails among Christians: some holding the prohibition to be perpetually obligatory, as much as the prohibition of idolatry and fornication, with which it is associated: others holding the prohibition of idolatry and fornication alone to be perpetually obligatory, as founded on the first, second, and seventh, commandments: but the prohibition of "things strangled and blood" to be mere temporary accommodations to Jewish prejudices, (comp. ch. 16. 3. with Gal. 2. 3—5. & 5. 1—6); an abstinence from things not unlawful in themselves (1 Tim. 4. 4. Rom. 14. 14), but merely out of tenderness and charity to the prejudices and consciences of weaker brethren (Rom. 14. 15—21). In the midst of this division of opinion—a division among learned, sincere, and godly men—one thing is certain, that "every man should be fully persuaded in his own mind" that he is following scriptural authority, not led by bodily appetite "in that thing which he alloweth." Rom. 14. 5, 22.—Ed.

7 And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, [l] Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt [*] ye God, to put a yoke [†] upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And, after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles [m] are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, [‡] and from fornication, [§] and from things strangled, [‖] and from blood. [¶]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—God plainly testifies his own being, life, patience, goodness, power, and wisdom, to the heathen world in the works of creation and providence. And even while, by their perverse manners, they abuse the light of their consciences, he graciously gives them the necessaries and delights of outward life. Surely even these his common favours should attract their love to him. And, alas! great is their sin and misery, who, being left to their own lusts and imaginations, put vanity and devils as objects of worship in his place. Infinite is the mercy that now the door of faith is opened to the Gentiles; the gospel of salvation, through Jesus Christ, is preached to them. But, alas! while some believe it, others rage against and oppose it. Yea, while heathens believe and are healed, Jews oppose and are hardened, to their eternal ruin. And great is the unanimity of wicked men against Jesus Christ and his faithful ministers.—Inconstant and worthless is the applause of the multitude. To-day they admire preachers as gods; to-morrow they persecute and murder them as miscreants. But God's testimony to his word, in external and internal operations, is sufficient to overcome all opposition. With wisdom, care, and love, he forms his people into a church; and, by their own choice, provides them pastors and teachers after his own heart, for their further edification and establishment, and in compassion to the snares and troubles through which they must pass into the heavenly state. In the most solemn manner, by prayer and fasting, ought ministers to be set apart to their work. And their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed [n] Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles, and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that [o] certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law; to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled [p] with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved [q] Barnabas and Paul,

26 Men that have [r] hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and [s] Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by mouth.

28 For it seemed good [t] to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things;

29 [u] That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So, when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the * consolation.†

32 And Judas and Silas, being [x] prophets‡ also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and [y] confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were [z] let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas [a] continued in Antioch,§ teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶ And some days after Paul said unto Barnabas, [b] Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them [c] John, whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, [d] who departed‖ from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

with pleasure and hope, labour and diligence, should they spend and be spent in the conversion of sinners and edification of saints. And though they ought to avoid suffering as far as can be done without sin, yet none must ever deter them from the faithful execution of their office. Till their testimony be finished God will preserve them in life; nor will upright disciples ever disown them on account of reproach or danger.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Alas, how early a spirit of bigotry, legality, and attachment to ceremonies, began in the Christian church, to the great injury of the pure doctrines of salvation by Christ alone, through faith! And it is a great mercy that the church is now delivered from the ancient burdensome rites of Moses, which never availed to the purification of men's consciences; and that the salvation of sinners, greater or lesser, Jews or Gentiles, is wholly of free grace; for the faith of the gospel powerfully tends to the purification of men's hearts and lives.—When attempts are made, especially under pretence of apostolic authority, to corrupt the peculiar doctrines of the gospel, and to pervert the souls of believers, it is high time to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. But proud and angry contentions about mere circumstances should never trouble the church, and expose her to confusion, danger, and reproach. It is a mercy that Jesus has appointed courts in proper subordination, and proper regulations, for the happy adjusting of differences. And there is need in all our disputes to adhere closely to the scriptures, and in all ecclesiastical decisions to manifest a strict regard to the gospel liberty purchased by Christ, and to the weakness of tender consciences. If they be made with proper prudence and harmony, they will in general be heartily received by church members for their edification. And greatly should we rejoice in the success of other churches, and in the union of Jews and Gentiles into one body of Christ; and carefully should all avoid giving offence to their neighbours, even in things indifferent in themselves. But since the gospel is necessary for the confirmation of believers, as well as for the conversion of sinners, not only ought ministers to labour in the ministrations of it, but all to rejoice in their success.—It is an unpleasing reflection that smaller differences should so often occasion sharp contentions between the best of men;—and that dear friends should, in ill humour, bid each other adieu for life. It is nevertheless a mercy if God make the weakness of men a mean of spreading his gospel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—There is need of wisdom from above to direct us when to condescend to men's weaknesses, and when to assert our privileges, religious or civil. God remarkably owns his gospel for the conversion and edifica-

NOW, when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to [a] Thessalonica,* where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, [b] as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 [c] Opening and alleging that Christ must needs† have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom [d] I preach unto you, is Christ.

4 [e] And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the [f] devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ [g] But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, [h] These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and [i] these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And [k] they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.‡

10 ¶ [l] And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea:§ who coming thither, went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were [m] more noble‖ than those in Thessalonica, in that [n] they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 [o] Therefore many of them believed; also of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 ¶ But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, [p] they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now, while Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.

17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks,* encountered him: and some said, What will this babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods; because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto Areopagus,† saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of Marshill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.‡

23 For as I passed by, and beheld§ your devotions,‖ I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.* Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 God that made the world,† and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed,‡ and the bounds of their habitation;

* Epicureans—Stoicks.—Two philosophical sects among the Greeks. The former held that virtue was whatever promoted the happiness of the agent: the Stoics, that it consisted in living agreeably to nature,—systems alike calculated to mislead, unless man were a better judge of what constitutes true and permanent happiness, and unless human nature were cleansed from the selfishness of its desires, and restored to the love and obedience of God.—Ed.

† The Areopagus, or "hill of Mars," where the supreme court of judicature was held in the open air. Its judges were famous for their wisdom and impartiality, and their decisions are, even till this day, regarded as models of judicial purity. The side of the hill, partly by nature, and partly by art, presents a gently inclined plane of a semicircular form, bounded above by the brow of the hill cut down perpendicularly. In the centre the rock projects into a platform about ten feet square, on which public speakers stood; and from this place, it is probable (ver. 22) that Paul spoke.—Ed.

‡ Superstitious, in modern language, is always applied to an ignorant fear of, or dependence on, invisible powers, whether supreme or subordinate, or some vain inventions for averting their anger or propitiating their favour. There is no reason to imagine that Paul, a consummate orator, would commence his address with a description so calculated to excite prejudice and opposition. It should therefore be translated, "I perceive that in all things" (your temples, altars, sacrifices, &c.) "ye are, more than others, attentive to religious matters."—A character confirmed both by the most popular writings of the Greeks themselves, as well as by those Christian historians who have examined their national character. tion of men when it is faithfully and prudently preached. And in awful sovereignty he directs where to preach it, and where not. Marvellous is it that he has not forbidden nor hindered the preaching of it in Britain; where it has been so peculiarly undervalued, rejected, denied, and detested! God deals with his elect in very different forms in bringing them to his Son. And some of them, when near to the brink of hell, as well as to the ordinances of grace, are plucked as brands out of the burning. But it is enough if, either in a more kind or a more awful manner, they be deeply convinced of sin and self-insufficiency, and led to receive and rest upon Jesus Christ alone, in all his offices, for salvation, as he is offered in the gospel. And while God, in infinite kindness, becomes at once their God and the God of their seed, they will testify their high regard to the instrument of their conversion, and be deeply concerned for the eternal salvation of their whole family. Satan will turn himself and his agents into very different forms, will become a friend, an angel of light, a witness for Christ, or a selfish, outrageous, persecuting fury, in order to sully the honour, and prevent the spread of the gospel. But let them do as they will, Jesus can support, comfort, vindicate, and render victorious, his faithful servants. No persecutor is so proud or furious, but either the terrors of God can restrain, or his grace convert him. And, if possible, Christ's ministers should study to obtain their deliverances with honour as well as with safety; but they must never manifest any selfish resentment. Learn, my soul,

AFTER these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;*

2 And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla, (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome,) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: (for by their occupation they were tent-makers.)

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit,† and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

* Corinth.—One of the most illustrious cities of Greece, situated on the Isthmus that joins the Peloponnesus or Morea, to the continent. It is said to have been founded in the year 1known B. C., and to have been governed by native kings from 1360 till 728 B. C., when it came under the government of an annual magistracy. In 146 B. C. it was pillaged and burned by the Roman consul Mummius, but restored by Julius Cæsar, in the year 46 B. C., when it became the finest city in Greece. In this condition of prosperity (but accompanied, alas! with proportionate luxury and proverbial laxity of morals,) it was visited by the apostle Paul about A. D. 54.—Ed.

carefully to observe providential directions. Always delight in meetings for prayer or religious conference. Never relish dissembled applause, however just. In every distress believe in Jesus Christ; and always rejoice in suffering for his sake.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—How justly the Holy Ghost had witnessed that bonds and afflictions awaited the apostle in every city! And it is delightful to see ministers preaching the gospel, regardless of all fatigue, contempt, and persecution, counting nothing too dear for Christ and his cause. It is comely when all the sermon is plainly derived from the oracles of God, and when hearers attentively receive the truth, and examine all they hear by the scripture. Important is the matter of gospel preaching, even Jesus' person, sufferings, and glory;—his dying for our sins, and calling us back from our graves to his last judgment. Powerful is its efficacy in the conversion of multitudes, and even of persons of rank, in places the most wicked. Real converts take delight in owning, holding fellowship with, and caring for the safety and comfort of, faithful ministers; while the offscourings of mankind, and the high pretenders to wisdom, readily unite together against Jesus Christ and his gospel. Unhappy is the place where the mob are both judges and executioners. Very false, but common, is the pretence that Jesus' sole headship over his church interferes with lawful civil authority; and yet many magistrates dread danger chiefly from noted believers.—If ministers be persecuted in one city, they may flee to another. But they will everywhere meet with as abounding wickedness, and, in consequence thereof, much contempt and hatred. Yet, the nearer Christ's word lies to their own hearts, they will the more eagerly seize all opportunities of publishing it. Great prudence is necessary in dealing with self-conceited pretenders to wisdom. Nowhere has the gospel less success than among such. They are often ignorant of the plainest doctrines of nature, of the divine perfections, 6 [f] And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 ¶ And he went [g] into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing* and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 [h] But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that [i] way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

10 [k] And this continued by the space of two years: so that all they which dwelt in [l] Asia† heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 [m] And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul;

13 ¶ Then certain of the vagabond Jews, [n] exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We [o] adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, [p] Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 [q] And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

and of our relation to God as our Maker, Preserver, and Disposer. None are more madly set upon the most senseless idolatry, or more given to waste precious moments in mere trifles. Righteous is the sovereignty of God in permitting them to be so blinded by the god of this world: and great his mercy in calling men to repent, in view of the future judgment, whether they will hear or forbear.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Happy are those churches, where ministers are so hearty in their work, that they will rather labour for their own subsistence than prejudice men against the gospel, or give enemies a handle to reproach them as mercenary! But there is need of divine direction when to condescend, and when not. Ministers should take great pains in making known Christ, and persuading men to accept of him as their only Saviour, and in defending the great truths of the gospel, till their hearers manifest themselves incorrigibly wicked, and obstinate rejecters of it. And, alas, dreadful is their destruction whose blood faithful ministers stand clear of! But while some despise the gospel to their own damnation, God will make it effectual to others, even the most unlikely. His elect, whether great or small, shall be all gathered in. If ministers have God's direction, promise, presence, comfort, and protection, they need fear nothing. Success shall crown their labours; yea, even heathens, not very attentive to their duty as magistrates, shall refuse to persecute them. And the more success faithful ministers meet with, they are still the more diligent.—It is comely when old experienced Christians are inclined readily to instruct younger ones. And young preachers, who gladly accept instructions from exercised saints, though of the weaker sex, bid fair to be useful, if not famous, in gathering and edifying the church. There is 22 So [y]he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 [z]And the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines* for Diana,† brought no small ‡gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know [b]that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that [d]they be no gods which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple§ of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and ‖the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, [f]they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, [g]Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 [h]And the whole city was filled with confusion: and, having caught [i]Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the [k]theatre.

30 And when Paul would have entered in [l]unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of the chief of [m]Asia,§ which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 [n]Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew¶ [o]Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting ‡him forward. And Alexander [p]beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people.

34 But when †they knew that he was a [q]Jew, all with one voice, about the space of two hours, cried out, [r]Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

little hope of such as are too wise to learn. And nothing should preachers more study, than to have the scriptures stored up in their memories, and deeply written in their hearts, that all they deliver to others may be plainly marked with the authority of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Much more clear and glorious is the gospel dispensation which we enjoy than even the ministration of John Baptist. And much better the baptism of the Holy Ghost than that of mere water. But, alas, how many receive the external seals of God's covenant, who have no experimental, and very little notional, knowledge of him or his influences! And though baptism is never to be repeated, yet the Spirit is daily to be received. With great boldness and persevering courage ought the gospel to be preached: and dreadful is their fate who put it from them, or attempt to counterfeit its miraculous confirmations. They but fight and labour for the devil, that he may reward them with shame and ruin.—But happy are they who are turned to the Lord by a cordial faith and genuine repentance! And hopeful is the case when the peculiar favourites of Satan are made openly to renounce his service, sacrifice their dearest abominations with abhorrence, and remove every temptation of drawing back out of their

7 ¶ And upon the first* day of the week, when the disciples came together °to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and ᵖcontinued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights† in the ᵠupper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into ʳa deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, ˢand fell on him, and, embracing him, said, ᵗTrouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

13 ¶ And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

14 And when he met with us at Assos,§ we took him in, and came to Mitylene.‖

15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios;* and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium;† and the next day we came to Miletus.‡

16 For Paul had determined to ᵘsail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the ˣday of Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the ʸelders of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, ᶻYe know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 ᵃServing the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations,§ which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews:

20 And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house,

22 And now, behold, °I go bound in the spirit* unto Jerusalem, not knowing the thing that shall befall me there;

24 But none of these things move me, nei ther count I my life dear unto myself, so tha ᵈI might finish my course with joy, and th ministry which I have received of the Lor Jesus, ᵉto testify the ᶠgospel of the grace of God

25 And now, behold, I know that ye all among whom I have gone preaching the ᵍkingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28 ʰTake heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers,‡ to feed the church of God,§ which he hath purchased with his own blood.‖

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous ⁱwolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30 Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 ᵏTherefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night* and day with tears.

32 And now, brethren, ˡI commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.

33 I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel.

34 Yea, ye yourselves know, ᵐthat these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me.

35 I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.†

36 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all.

37 And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him;

38 Sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

own and their neighbours' way. How furiously zealous are the most of mankind for a false religion, especially if worldly gain and long custom are on its side. And, with such, noise and clamour are invincible arguments for the most blasphemous absurdities. When those are so zealous for the devil, it is much to be lamented that many, called Christians, have so little concern for the glory of God. —Safe are the persons of God's faithful ministers, since he can make heathens earnest advocates for, and prudent protectors of, them. Fear of men hinders many from wickedness: but much more wise are they who are prevented from it by serious views of their future account to God.

AND it came to pass, that after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Coos,* and the day following unto Rhodes,† and from thence unto Patara:‡

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto Phenicia,§ we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now, when we had discovered ‖ Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria,* and landed at Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days; who said to Paul through the Spirit,† that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed, and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned home again.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cesarea; and we entered into the house of Philip the evangelist,‡ (which was one of the seven,) and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy.

10 ¶ And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet, named Agabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages,* and went up to Jerusalem.

16 [a] There went with us also certain of the disciples of [b] Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of [c] Cyprus, an [d] old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 ¶ And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us [e] gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto [f] James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, [g] he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they [h] glorified the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, [i] how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all [k] zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed† of thee, [l] that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? [m] the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: [n] We have four men which have a vow‡ on them;

24 Them take, and purify§ thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; but that [o] thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, [p] we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, [q] and the next day purifying himself with them entered into the temple, to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 ¶ And when the seven days were almost ended, [r] the Jews which were of Asia,‖ when they saw him in the temple, [s] stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,

28 Crying out, Men of Israel, [t] help: This is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place; and further, brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

Philip, "one of the seven," (Acts 6. 5), has the name "evangelist," to distinguish him from Philip the apostle (Mat. 10. 3), and he was most probably the same who preached Jesus to the Ethiopian. unnecessary sloth and sleep, and almost forget the other by unfrequency. How criminal and dangerous is it, even at mid-day, to sleep at the worship of God! What if he—whom we affront as unworthy of our notice—he, whom we contemn as unworthy to be embraced—should seize the moment, and awaken us in eternal fire! REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—It is delightful to travel about under the special direction and protection of Providence, and in every place to have edifying converse with Christian friends concerning the great things which God has done for us and for his church. And it is comely for Christians to meet and part with cordial affection and solemn prayer. No wonder that loving Christians are averse to think of the sufferings or death of their faithful and useful ministers. But glorious is the fortitude to be ready to suffer anything for Christ, and to be entirely resigned to his will: and yet the tender affections of friends sometimes occasion a greater trial than the fury of enemies.—Entangling weaknesses and strong prejudices remain with real believers. And it is difficult to judge how far we ought to condescend to their infirmity, or to appear zealous for our Christian liberty. It is indeed needless to condescend to ignorant cavillers, or obstinate ungodly bigots, who will at any rate rage against us as the servants of Christ. Nothing can be expected in their popular tumults but violence and fury, confusion and injustice.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 [e] For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit; but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: [f] but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

10 ¶ And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 ¶ And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves [g] under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

a Ch. 22. 1.

[*] How may this declaration be reconciled with the facts recorded, ch. 22. 4, 20. Gal. 1. 13, and the guilt admitted, 1 Cor. 15. 9. 1 Tim. 1. 15? Some suppose that the apostle referred merely to his conduct since his conversion—his conduct as a Christian being the only subject of question or trial. It seems, however, more natural to understand him as speaking of his whole life, and declaring that as a Jew, when his mind was darkened and his conscience misled (see John 16. 2), still he had walked according to his light—sincere, though mistaken (Acts 26. 9, 10), and that now, as a Christian, when "light had shined into his dark heart," and his "conscience had been purged from dead works," he had, with equal sincerity, disinterestedness, and zeal, devoted himself to the work to which the Lord had miraculously called him. The whole amounts to a solemn assertion that his life as a Jew would furnish a public test of his integrity in embracing the religion of Jesus.—ED.

[†] This was no angry invective or imprecation, but a terrible prophecy, which, five years after, was remarkably fulfilled—when, after a tumult commenced by his own son, he was besieged in the palace, and being driven thence, and having hid himself in an aqueduct, he was at length discovered there, dragged out, and slain.—ED.

[‡] This declaration of ignorance, compared with the special promise (Mat. 10. 19), has been urged as an evidence that Paul was not inspired. But can the objectors prove that Paul was really ignorant? The ignorance is their own. Ananias was not the high priest. He had been deprived of that office by the Romans, and succeeded by Jonathan, after whose murder by Festus there occurred a period of vacancy anterior to the elevation of Ishmael. During this vacancy Ananias usurped the office from which he had been formerly expelled on account of his crimes. When Paul, therefore, "wist not that he was the high priest," he declares an historical fact; for though his partisans and flatterers called him so, they could not invest him with the office. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—With great prudence, temper, courage, and faithfulness, ought the cause of Christ to be maintained against its most malicious opposers.—Blind bigots are in general inflamed against it and its candid professors with the most outrageous and murderous zeal.—But God's grace strangely changes the most furious and obstinate tempers. And yet men often have gospel light shining all around them, and are never thereby converted to Christ, or instructed in his truth.—Even when conversion is begun in a miraculous manner, God leads to the ordinary means of his own appointment to carry it on, and render such persons acquainted with his will and their work. And while baptism solemnly admits them into his church, effectual fervent prayer recommends them to God.—When notorious sinners are converted, their former opposition to Christ sticks fast in their remembrance, and lies heavy on their heart: and sometimes God, in merciful chastisement, returns it on their head.—But if Jesus install ministers in their office, he will take care of them, and direct their course where they shall be truly successful, when others would have rejected them. And wonderful is the sovereignty of his grace in converting the most distant and unlikely, while others are left to harden themselves in their sins.—Great is their wickedness who are enraged at the extending of God's redeeming kindness, even to the most despicable and infamous

15 [h] Now therefore ye [*] with the council signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would inquire something more perfectly concerning him; and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 [i] And when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 [k] Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, [l] The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to-morrow into the council, as though they would inquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But do not thou yield unto them: for [m] there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an [n] oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast showed these things to me.

23 ¶ And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cesarea,[†] and horsemen threescore and ten, and [‡] spearmen two hundred, at the third hour of the night;

24 And provide them beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe unto Felix the governor.

25 And he wrote a letter after this manner:

26 Claudius Lysias unto the most excellent governor [o] Felix[§] sendeth greeting.

27 [p] This man was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, having understood that he was a Roman.

28 And when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, [q] I brought him forth into their council:

29 Whom I perceived to be accused of [r] questions of their law, but to have nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds.

30 [s] And when it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, and gave commandment to his accusers also to say before thee what they had against him. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.[*]

32 On the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him, and returned to the castle:

33 Who, when they came to [t] Cesarea, and delivered the epistle to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when the governor had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he understood that he was of [u] Cilicia;

35 I will hear thee, said he, [x] when thine accusers are also come. And he commanded him to be kept in Herod's [y] judgment-hall.

sinners;—and who shut their eyes against the most evident appearances of God's word and Spirit.—Seasonably he raises up protectors where his servants are in imminent danger.—And for their own safety, saints ought to insist on their civil privileges, that, while they stand up for his truth, God may own them, and give them further opportunities of defending his and their righteous cause.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Happy are they who can appeal to God, that, by his grace, they have lived soberly, righteously, and godly, before him. And it is base in judges to abuse any honest man for avowing his own integrity. He, who knows their heart and way, will vindicate his faithful servants, to the confusion of their enemies, however great; and proud persecutors will quickly feel themselves unable to stand before the storm of his judgments.—In ordinary cases, we must not speak evil of our rulers whom we know and own as such.—But we may join the wisdom of the serpent with the simplicity of the dove. We may divide the counsels of our enemies, though we may not revile their persons; and by maintaining some particular article of truth, set one part of them against another. If one party be enraged, the other will probably favour us.—If we be upright followers of that which is good, God can make the secular powers to protect us, and can overrule our dangerous circumstances to gain their favour. And if Jesus assure us of his presence and support, and of our future usefulness, it should entirely remove all our disquieting fears, let our enemies do what they will.—Abandoned are those miscreants, and especially those judges, who, contrary to the law of nature or nations, combine to murder such as they cannot convict of any crime. No pretence of religion can sanctify, but greatly aggravates such horrible villany. To bind ourselves under a curse to work iniquity, is but to insnare our souls into fearful damnation.—But watchfully God marks the most secret plots of his people's enemies. Easily he discovers and disappoints them in favour of his faithful servants. And he will avenge wickedness on the wicked, and will even turn their intended mischiefs to the good of his servants, and for promoting their further usefulness in the world.

Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 [d] Who also hath gone about to profane the temple; whom we took, and would have judged according to our law:

7 [e] But the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 [f] Commanding his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of [g] whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things whereof we accuse him.

9 [g] And the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ¶ Then Paul, after that the governor had [h] beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years [†] a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 [i] Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for to worship.

12 [k] And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, [l] that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers,[‡] [m] believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets:

15 And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, [n] that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.[§]

16 [o] And herein [‖] do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now, after many years,[*] I came to bring [p] alms to my nation, and offerings.

18 [q] Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult:

19 [r] Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I stood before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, [s] Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge[*] of that way, he deferred them, and said, When Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I [t] will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 ¶ And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla,[†] which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance,[‡] and judgment to come,[§] Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 ¶ He hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, [u] willing to show the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

Reflections upon Chap. XXIV.—Profane clergymen and abandoned lawyers stick at nothing to gain their own vile ends. Falsehood, flattery, and slander, go hand in hand. The purest innocence will not protect men from the most abominable aspersions: and the most infamous characters will not render some men ashamed of flattery. Spiteful malice generally represents faithful ministers as enemies to the state. And as it is in the power of every villain to propagate falsehood, and lay the heaviest charges against the noblest characters, it becomes the innocent meekly to vindicate themselves and their doctrines from invidious reproach, and that with due deference to the magistrates who give them an opportunity. But, in vindicating ourselves, it becomes us to own the truths of God, particularly the general resurrection of the dead, in which both good and bad have so deep and everlasting a concern. Never will the enemies of the gospel be able to prove their injurious charges against such ministers as are enabled by God to keep a conscience void of offence towards God and towards men. And it is very shameful when infamous heathens manifest more regard to common equity, and more awe of God's truth, than high-flown professors.—Amazing is the power of divine truth.—Uttered by a prisoner, it makes a wicked heathen judge to tremble, though his wife, an abandoned Jewish professor, feels it not. But if sharp convictions be stifled, the love of this world, and the deceitfulness of sin, ordinarily prevent their return. Many, who have been once terrified by convictions, die slaves to their lusts. And a sinful desire to please men makes many, to no purpose, act contrary to their own conscience, and injure the people of God.

[e] and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove:

8 ¶ While he answered for himself, [f] Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cesar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, [g] willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cesar's judgment-seat, where I [h] ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 [i] For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, [k] no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal* unto Cesar.

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cesar? [l] unto Cesar shalt thou go.

13 ¶ And after certain days [m] king Agrippa† and Bernice‡ came unto Cesarea to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, [n] There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, [o] the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, [p] It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have licence to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 [q] Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment-seat, and I commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 [r] But had certain questions against him of their own superstition,§ and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because [s] I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had [t] appealed to be reserved unto the [||] hearing of Augustus,* I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cesar.

* Every Roman citizen had a right, when under a criminal charge, to appeal to the emperor; after which it was highly criminal for any governor or judge to proceed farther. This appeal was to Nero, a proverbial tyrant—yet, such are the mysteries of Providence, his very name, at the distance of some hundred miles, forms a shield for the protection of the Lord's chosen servant!—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. XXV.—No length of time can wear out, or repeated disappointments subdue, inveterate malice against Christ and his servants: no sentence is so unjust, but it will insist upon it; no murder so horrid, but it will attempt it.—By secret springs God sometimes, for the preservation of his servants, restrains the most easy and selfish compliance of judges. And when men prudently insist on their just rights, his providence overrules all for the accomplishment of his promises. But it is hard when a righteous cause must be referred from those who enjoy divine revelation to barbarous and blood-thirsty heathens. And it is shameful when a man can scarcely get a fair hearing before he be condemned. Alas, how ignorant and unconcerned are many great men with respect to the one thing needful! Yea, many have the means of instruction always near, and never profit by them. And multitudes are eternally damned for making the gospel an credible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 [f] I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 Which thing I also did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice[*] against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme: and, being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 [g] Whereupon, as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests,

13 [h] At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me, and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick[†] against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.

16 [i] But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear[‡] unto thee;

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee,

18 [k] To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive [l] forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king [m] Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 [n] But showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.[§]

22 Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than True; but the passages present neither difficulty nor contradiction. Either Paul, who heard and understood the words spoken, fell down first, while his companions, who merely heard the sound, stood for a time, and afterwards fell down; or they all fell down together; and his fellow-travellers, who were merely affrighted with the suddenness of the light, but not conscience-stricken by the accusation, rose first and "stood," while Paul, whose conscience was awakened to a deep sense of his guilt, remained prostrate upon the ground, in earnest prayer for mercy.—Ed.

* That he should be the first that should rise from the dead.—Now, from 2 Kin. 14. 21. Mat. 9. 25, Luke 7. 15. John 11. 44, it appears that several had risen from the dead previously to the resurrection of Jesus. How, therefore, may these facts be reconciled with Paul's statement? Without having recourse to the doctrine, that as he was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," in the purpose of God, the prophecies, the promises, and the types—so, in like purpose, prophecy, promise, and types (see Lev. 11. 6, & Is. 22), was he, the Saviour, raised from the dead—the difficulty may be solved by a more literal translation, to wit, "that he should be chief (head over all things to the church) after his resurrection from the dead."—Ed.

24 ¶ And as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden[†] from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

object of mere curiosity.—The faithful followers and ministers of Christ easily stand clear of being enemies to the peace and order of civil societies. And judges ought to be very tender and exact in representing the case of the accused.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—Jesus remarkably fulfils his promise, in enabling his servants to speak when brought before rulers and kings for his sake. And it is delightful to see the cause of Christ defended with all the grace and faithfulness of a Christian, and yet all the good manners of a courtier. It is a high honour to be chargeable with nothing but an avowed dependence on God's promises, and belief of his performances, relative to the resurrection of Christ, and the eternal life of believers through him, and the general judgment of all by him.—But dreadful is their enmity against Christ, who think his followers deserve everything cruel and barbarous for holding the fundamental truths of the gospel. Yea, devilish is their temper who can gratify themselves by forcing them, contrary to their conscience, to blaspheme their Saviour. And very distressing is it, though candid, to call to mind such things in our conduct. Amazing is that grace which changes such monsters into distinguished saints and eminent preachers; which honours them as noted instruments in winning multitudes to Christ, and preserves and protects them long in that honourable work. And happy are those ministers that make God's word the standard of all their ministrations, in matter, manner, and end.—Dreadful is the condition in which the gospel and Spirit of Christ find sinful men;—and marvellous the change they make, the infinite and
